CONFEREES AGREE ON JOB BILL; SILVER RIDER IS OUT

Wallace Objects, However, to Provision for Use of Fund by AAA, and $4,880,000,000 Program Again Is Delayed.

FURTHER REVISION NOW BEING SOUGHT

Roosevelt Authorized to Appoint Any of Present Aids to New Set-Up Without Confirmation—Other Changes Made.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — House and Senate conferees reached agreement last night on the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill. The conference struck out the Thomas silver inflation amendment and made other changes in the measure as passed by the Senate.

The silverites apparently have abandoned any idea of a filibuster. Hope of prompt House action on the conference report, however, was dispelled today when Speaker Byrns announced it would not be taken up before Monday.

Objections from administration officials to the final form of the bill were reported to have delayed action. Secretary Wallace was in a conference with Chairman Buchanan of the Appropriations Committee. Wallace has objected to the George amendment, under which the money appropraited in the big bill could be used for administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

The understanding was that House leaders might attempt to reopen the conference in the hope of eliminating the provisions which were obnoxious to administration officials.

Ickes Objected to Provision.

A report that Secretary Ickes objected to a provision written in the bill by the conferees requiring that one-third of the loans or grants for state projects must be spent for direct work was confirmed by Representative Taber (Rep.) New York. He said "we conferees tried to turn this into a work relief bill, but some folks downtown don't agree."

"As the bill stood, without that one-third requirement, it was just a racket," he continued.

Asked who had objected to the provisions of the bill, Taber replied: "Oh, Ickes and Hopkins and Tugwell and some of these other relief crooks. And you can quote me to that effect."

Senator Thomas (Dem.), Oklahoma, who sponsored the amendment for the issuance of silver certificates against bullion at $1.29 an ounce, said his bloc would not seek to delay the measure.

"I have accomplished my purpose in crystallizing the silver issue before the public," Thomas said, adding that he would offer his plan later.

Changes Made in Bill.

One change made in conference would leave President Roosevelt free to name officials already in administration posts to positions in the new setup without Senate confirmation.

Senator McCarran (Dem.), Nevada, had succeeded in writing into the bill an amendment declaring that all officers and employes receiving more than $5000 a year must be confirmed by the Senate. As changed in conference, this provision applies only to new officials.

The Russell labor compromise, written into the bill after a long fight on the prevailing wage issue, was modified to provide that the President shall determine the prevailing wage in any locality before contracts are signed on permanent public building projects. On such work, the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage law will apply. The prevailing rate will be submitted in the request for bids.

The Russell amendment permits the President to pay "security wages," estimated at $50 a month, to all employes except those working under contract and on public buildings, provided the wage rate in private industry is not damaged.

The amendment of Senator Cutting (Rep.), New Mexico, to set aside $40,000,000 for loans to keep public schools open for the rest of the term was eliminated. The conferees wrote in a provision that the President may allot funds from a $300,000,000 portion of the bill to aid educational institutions.

Other Amendments.

A Senate amendment providing that all sanitary plumbing work be let to the lowest bidder was elimi-

250,000 WATCH LONG SHOT WIN THE GRAND NATIONAL STEEPLECHASE AT AINTREE

Reynoldstown, at 22 to 1, Comes in First—Only Six of 27 Horses Able to Finish 4½-Mile Run.

By the Associated Press.

AINTREE, England, March 29.—A crowd of 250,000 persons saw the favorites lose to outsiders in the Grand National Steeplechase today as Reynoldstown, a 22-to-1 shot, owned by Maj. Noel Furlong and ridden by his son, Freddie, drove home the winner.

Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, the heavily played favorite and winner last year, failed to complete the four and one-half mile test.

Reynoldstown crossed the finish line three lengths in front of Lady Lindsay's Blue Prince, also an outsider in the betting. John Hay Whitney's American-owned Thomond II, the second choice, was eight lengths back in third place, where he finished last year.

Only Six of 27 Finish.

Only six of the 27 starters finished. Sir Geoffrey Congreve's Lazy Boots, 66 to 1, was fourth, followed by H. B. Brandt's Uncle Batt, and Miss M. Lark's Bachelor Prince.

Of the American-owned entries, besides Thomond II, Castle Irwell, owned and ridden by George H. (Pete) Bostwick, made the best showing. Bostwick kept his Irish-bred jumper up with the leaders for the first two miles and was running a strong second when Uncle Batt reached the Judges' stand the first time around the course. He fell soon afterward, however. M. D. Blair's Fouquet, Whitney's Royal Ransom and Jesse Metcalfe's Thereas did not get as far as the grandstand.

Golden Miller, carrying top weight, 175 pounds, which went to the post the 3-to-1 favorite, found the weight and pace too exacting. He fell at the first fence after Valentine's Brook on the first turn around the course. With his elimination went up groans from the thousands of spectators and shouts of joy from the bookmakers, who stood to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars, as the favorite had been coupled with Flamenco, winner of the Lincolnshire Wednesday, in the famous "spring double."

Reynoldstown's Great Run.

Furlong had Reynoldstown up with the leaders from the start, being fifth at the half-way mark. He quickly moved to the front and showed the way the second time over Becher's Brook to Thomond II and Blue Prince, but the margin was not great.

At the canal turn Thomond II took command. From there on to the final stages, the race was a three-horse affair. The three took the next to the last jump almost together, then Thomond II stuck his head in front and apparently was on his way to victory. In the final 300-yard dash, however, Thomond II weakened badly. Furlong drove Reynoldstown into the lead and Jockey Parvin, on Blue Prince, moved up to make a challenge, but in vain. When the three finished not another horse was in sight.

Reynoldstown was timed in 9:21, one second slower than the record set by Golden Miller last year.

Bostwick Takes a Header.

Bostwick, who took a header from his horse but was not hurt, was downhearted.

"Castle Irwell blundered badly at the canal turn on the second time around," he said. "We were fourth at the time and I believe might have won as I had not let him out."

Furlong, an amateur rider, was jubilant.

"I don't know how I won," he declared. "We were obstructed by a loose horse on the very first jump and again at the canal turn on the second turn around the course. I felt like standing up and shouting when we began to pull away in the final uphill straightaway."

Thomond II's jockey, Willie Speck, said the Whitney horse "simply didn't have enough left, but he gave me a great run anyway."

Smallest Field in Years.

The field was the smallest since 1920 when only 24 started the hazardous trip.

The Grand National course consists of 16 jumps, all but two of which are taken twice in a double swing around the circuit. Most famous and dangerous of the obstacles is Becher's Brook. This is a thorn fence five feet high and three and one-half feet wide with a brook five feet three inches wide on the far side.

Another spot that annually takes its toll of contenders is the canal turn, a dangerous jump with a brook on the take-off side.

Clear, sparkling weather prevailed. There was no hint of ground haze such as marred last year's event.

FERA TO HOLD UP FUND UNLESS MISSOURI PAYS ITS SHARE

Hopkins Wires Gov. Park April Allotment Will Not Be Made Otherwise.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — The Federal Emergency Relief Administration today notified Missouri it must provide additional funds if it expects to receive an April relief allotment.

The Missouri Legislature has pased a resolution promising to increase the State's contribution to relief, but in a telegram made public today, Administrator Hopkins informed Gov. Park that Missouri must "act" in order to receive April relief money. The Relief Administration allotted the State $3,677,482 for March. Hopkins' telegram said:

"Re your application for funds for April. My understanding with you was that we extended aid to Missouri through April upon understanding that Missouri Legislature would pass legislation making available funds immediately for its share of cost of unemployment relief. I must request that Missouri act in this matter as condition of receiving any other funds from this Administration."

Gov. Park wired Hopkins legislation to raise revenue for unemployment relief had passed the House and is now in Senate. Cannot be finally passed for 10 or 12 days. I am sure pledge to provide relief funds will be kept. . . . Delay caused by practically united Republican opposition in the House."

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 29. —All FERA activities in Greene County were suspended today for lack of funds. Two thousand men and women were made idle.

ADMINISTRATION DODGED NRA TEST, HUEY LONG SAYS

On Senate Floor Declares It Dropped Supreme Court Case, Knowing Act Is Invalid.

ATTACKS COST OF CCC CAMPS

Engages in Exchange With McKellar on Striking Out of Allowance for Schools.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Senator Huey P. Long charged on the Senate floor this afternoon that the administration was deliberately dodging a Supreme Court test of NRA, because it knows the act is unconstitutional. Democratic leaders did not reply to the accusation.

The Louisiana Senator also called the attention of his colleagues to testimony in the House hearings on the agricultural appropriations bill, that the cost of maintaining a man in a CCC camp is $1200 a year, and contrasted that with the Senate's refusal to appropriate money in the work-relief bill to send needy boys and girls to college, and with the action of the conference in striking out the appropriation to enable schools to remain open.

Cites Alabama Case.

"A man down in Alabama," he said "paid absolutely no attention to the NRA. He flounted all of its rules and regulations, and publicly said he didn't intend to abide by any of them. He was arrested and tried in court, and the only defense he made was that the NRA act was unconstitutional.

"The case came up to the Supreme Court, and it looked for a while like we were going to have a final decision on it. Now I learn that the Government has arranged to dismiss the suit, to keep the court from passing on it. Of course, I knew all along that the act was unconstitional, and the Government knew it. All they have done was just to get away with something. They had people scared.

"But along comes this man from Alabama, and he isn't scared. He tells them where they can go, and what they can do if they don't like it. And what do they do? They duck. That's a pretty spectacle for a great Government to make of itself. I want to serve notice right now that if such a policy is continued, I am going to advise the people of the United States, and especially of Louisiana, to pay exactly the same attention to the NRA that the man in Alabama did.

Exchange With McKellar.

"Incidentally, I want to call the Senate's attention to the fact that the testimony of an official of the Department of Agriculture before the House Committee shows it costs $1200 a year to keep a boy in a CCC camp. I ask you if that isn't a pretty picture? A hundred dollars a month to keep a boy out there among the saplings and red bugs, but we don't give $8 or $10 a month to keep a school open."

McKellar, Tennessee Democrat, said that, although the conference committee had struck out the language of the original amendment, the bill would "take care of education in another way."

"We just changed your language to make the provision more effective," he said.

"Yes, everybody knows that your language usually is more effective than mine," Huey remarked. The galleries laughed. Senator McKellar does not enjoy a great reputation as an orator or debater.

SENATE COMMITTEE VOTES FOR INQUIRY INTO RAILROADS

Group Action Influenced by Disclosures About Missouri Pacific and Frisco Financing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today voted 12 to 5 to report favorably the Wheeler resolution to investigate railroads, particularly with relation to finance.

The committee vote, which virtually assures similar action by the Senate itself, was largely influenced by disclosures during recent hearings of the tangled affairs of the Missouri Pacific and Frisco.

The committee voted down by 11 to 7 an amendment to limit the investigation to specific railroads. It increased the appropriation from $10,000 to $25,000.

OLNEY WOMAN WINS $145,000 IN SWEEPSTAKES

Mrs. Mabel Litzelman, 42, Working in Hotel Kitchen, Bows Head, Cries a Little When Told.

GOES TO CHURCH TO GIVE THANKS

Holder of Ticket on Reynoldstown Intends to Go on Cooking—Plans Gift to Parish.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

OLNEY, Ill., March 29.—Mrs. Mabel Litzelman, wife of Yank Litzelman, owner of the Litz Hotel, and the chief cook in his hotel kitchen for the past 20 years, was the winner of a first prize of about $145,000 in the Irish Free State Hospitals' Sweepstakes on the Grand National Steeplechase, run today at Aintree, England.

The Federal income tax on this winning would be about $55,000 under the 1934 assessment, so that, if the law remains unchanged for this year, her profit on her $2.60 ticket will be about $90,000. There is no State income tax in Illinois.

Mrs. Litzelman, 42 years old, plump, blond and energetic, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that she already had made up her mind how she would dispose of the money.

What She'll Do With It.

"My father is going to get a present," she said, "and so is St. Joseph's Catholic Church here. I'm going to trade in Yank's old Packard for a new one—I've made arrangements for that already. Maybe I'll give my three sisters some of the money. The rest is going into an annuity. I wouldn't change my mind on that part of it for the finest salesman in the world.

"I bought the ticket from Bill Houser, a clothing salesman here, when I was doing my Christmas shopping. I didn't tell Yank about it. Several times since then he's made some remark about 'those fellows trying to sell me a sweepstakes ticket,' but I kept quiet until the cablegram came Tuesday telling me I had drawn Reynoldstown in the race.

"Yank said, 'so—you've got one of them have you?' I got an offer that day for $15,000 from a Cincinnati man for my ticket, and later I got an offer of $5250 and a free trip to New York from a syndicate, for a half share. I consulted my father, Henry Weidner, who is a blacksmith here, and he advised me to hold on to all the ticket. I would have won almost $4000 anyhow, just for having drawn a horse.

"Do I intend to stay in Olney? Of course, I do. It's my home. I love cooking, and I've been doing all of it for my husband since we were married 20 years ago. I'm going to keep on at that. The first thing I told him was that I hoped he'd let me go on doing the cooking, and he said he would."

"Business as Usual."

Mrs. Litzelman decided this morning that she would not listen to the radio account of the race—too much excitement—and prescribed "business as usual" for the employes of the hotel.

But Darby Lanter, the room clerk, was at his post in the lobby near the radio when the winner was announced. He dashed through the lobby and dining room into the kitchen, where Mrs. Litzelman was at work preparing for luncheon, and gave her the news.

"She just bowed her head and cried a little, saying nothing," Lanter said. "Everybody was laughing and congratulating her. Mr. Litzelman came in and asked what all the noise was about. He had been oiling a refrigerator. Someone told him. He patted Mrs. Litzelman on the shoulder and said, 'Really?'

"Well, the first thing she said was, 'I'm going to church.' So she and her husband went to St. Joseph's Church together to give thanks. They've been going to mass in that church every day for 18 years."

Calls From Friends.

When Mr. and Mrs. Litzelman returned they spent the next hour answering telephone calls from friends and newspapers. Throughout the day friends visited the hotel by the score to congratulate her. They found her at her usual post in the kitchen.

Mrs. Litzelman said she had never seen a horse race, except at county fairs. She hopes to go to the Kentucky Derby on which she bought a 50-cent lottery ticket several weeks ago. The Irish Sweepstakes ticket, however, was the first investment she ever made on the outcome of a horse race.

ANTI-GERMAN DEMONSTRATION BY 5000 POLES ON FRONTIER

Windows of Newspaper Office Smashed in Protest Against School Ruling in Reich.

By the Associated Press.

KATOWICE, Poland, March 29.—Anti-German demonstrations which broke out spasmodically all along Germany's Eastern border from Lithuania to Czecho-Slovakia burst out violently at the Polish-German frontier today. Thousands of Poles smashed the windows of the German newspaper Kattowitzer Zeitung and held demonstrations agaist Germany.

The crowd, singing the "Rota Song," which is a Polish anti-German hymn of hate, marched to the German newspaper to smash the windows. "Poles spit on Germans," was an improvised insert in the text of the song.

The police dispersed the disturbers shortly before they arrived at the German Consulate.

28 STRIKERS SENTENCED TO JAIL AT DALLAS, TEX.

Four for Contempt and Others for Not Promising to Respect Anti-Picketing Injunction.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., March 29.—Sentencing of 28 strikers to jail and investigation of fires at homes of three dress manufacturing plant employes marked the Dallas garment workers' strike situation yesterday.

Four strikers held in contempt of court and 24 others who refused to sign a pledge to respect terms of an anti-picketing injunction, were jailed on order of Judge Towne Young "until they change their minds." Five other seamstresses, who signed the pledge, were freed.

Sheriff's officers said fires at the homes of garment workers followed threatening notes and telephone calls.

The women jailed for contempt were ordered to post $1000 bonds, guaranteeing they would not violate the injunction, if they wished release from jail.

WOMAN AND TWO MEN ARE HANGED IN MONTREAL

Widow and Aids Convicted of Murder of Husband in Plot to Collect $4500 Insurance.

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, March 29. — Nick Sarao's widow, Mrs. Thomasina Theolis Sarao, 46 years old, Leone Gagliardi, 30, and 19-year-old Angelo Donofrio, were hanged in the Montreal jail today for plotting the death of Sarao, a street cleaner.

The noose decapitated Mrs. Sarao, according to a witness. Newspaper men were barred from the execution by the Attorney-General's department.

Gagliardi and Donofrio were hanged on another scaffold shortly before the woman was executed.

The trio were convicted by a court of king's bench jury of murdering for $4500 insurance on his life. Mrs. Sarao was in the plot, but it was Gagliardi and Donofrio who beat Sarao to death with clubs in a field near Blue Bonnets race track last summer.

Lured to the spot by Gagliardi on the pretext of helping the latter at some work, Sarao was attacked by Gagliardi and Donofrio, who were lying in wait. When he was unconscious from the blows of their clubs, the pair battered his head with a large boulder.

Mrs. Viovannina Theolis, 70, mother-in-law of Sarao, was also alleged to have been involved in the plot to kill Sarao. She pleaded guilty of manslaughter and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Joseph Alizero was to have been hanged also today for the murder of his sweetheart, Graziella Viens, whose body was found crammed into the rumble seat of his car last summer, but he has been granted a stay of execution pending disposal of an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

ROOSEVELT TO FISH AGAIN OFF NORTHERN CUBAN COAST

Eldest Son, Flying From Puerto Rico, Joins President on Yacht.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 29.—President Roosevelt looked forward today to more fishing off the northern coast of Cuba.

The yacht Nourmahal carrying the President was in the vicinity of Great Inagua Island off the northeastern tip of Cuba. A brief report last night from the yacht told of the arrival of James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, from Puerto Rico, by regular Pan-American plane and of a day of fishing by the presidential party off Cayo Lobos.

Apparently satisfied with the condition of his secretary, Louis M. Howe, who is ill in the White House, and with the progress of work at Washington, Mr. Roosevelt is circling southern waters on a schedule expected to keep him at sea most of next week and possibly until early the following week.

By wireless the President kept in contact with temporary headquarters established here by Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary.

BELGIUM QUITS GOLD, DEVALUES CURRENCY

New Government Announces Reduction of Metal Content of Belga by Not More Than 30 Per Cent, Effective Monday.

STEP FOLLOWS HEAVY BANK WITHDRAWALS

$210,000,000 Since October — Premier Outlines Program for Guaranteeing Deposits, Aiding Industry, and Public Works

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, March 29.—Premier Paul Van Zeeland today proclaimed devaluation of the gold belga "a maximum of 30 per cent" as part of a program of sweeping economic and monetary reforms to be rushed into effect. Parliament, to which Van Zeeland announced the program, was expected to give the Government a vote of confidence by a majority of 40 or 50 members.

Van Zeeland stated: "The currency level would not be the same as today, but in no case would it be more than 30 per cent below the present level," and he added that the new policy would go into effect Monday with a provisional cut of 25 per cent in the belga's value.

Van Zeeland's announcement cracked the European gold bloc, for the comprehensive program he announced involves the suspension of gold payments by Belgium pending an international agreement on currency policy.

Government's Program.

The Premier announced a program similar to Presidents Roosevelt's "New Deal," the Belgian plan providing for the undertaking of great public works schemes, the favoring of industrial production by all possible measures, the reduction of taxes, the guarantee of bank deposits, and a desire to resume diplomatic and commercial relations with Russia.

Although Van Zeeland and his Government seems assured of a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies on this program, lively opposition is expected in the Senate. Parliament is expected to debate day and night throughout the weekend including Sunday before the vote is taken.

The Government's program is a result of heavy blows dealt Belgian industry by countries with depreciated currency. By the Government's action, Belgium provisionally is off the gold standard although she intends to return when an international monetary conference can arrive at world stabilization.

Van Zeeland astonished Parliament, which heard his announcement in a joint session, when he enumerated the speed and volume of gold withdrawals from the National Bank—withdrawals totaling five billion francs (about $210,000,000) since October, 1934, with soaring withdrawals during the present month.

He said that on March 12, gold withdrawals amounted to 50,000,000 francs, on March 14, 180,000,000 francs, on March 15, 354,000,000 francs, and on March 16, during the two hours which preceded the introduction of exchange control, that more than 260,000,000 was withdrawn.

The Government won a preliminary victory later in the day, pushing through a bill for provisional credits in the Chamber of Deputies by a vote of 135 to 11.

Announcement to Depositors.

The Government assured bank depositors that all deposits would be protected against all contingencies. It was announced that deposits would not be lost or reduced, and that, if necessary, the Government would support the banks with a national guarantee.

Concerning the foreign policy, Van Zeeland said that commercial relations with Russia would be strengthened on a reciprocal basis and the Government was disposed, according to the way this program progressed, to recognize the Soviet Government.

Regarding home affairs, he said the Government would take up the problem of the unemployed energetically and would improve the country's standard of living. In foreign affairs he said, the administration would pursue the continuation of the policy dictated more urgently than ever by the economic needs of the country for the guarantee of security and the consolidation of peace.

He concluded his address with an appeal to all parties and factions to support the Government's work of rehabilitation.

SECRET NRA BILL IS INTRODUCED ON RICHBERG'S ADVICE

Senator Harrison Presents It After Warning That Strikes in Four Industries Are Pending.

'PURELY A BASIS FOR DISCUSSION'

He Says He Is Making Proposal to Eliminate Much of Uncertainty Disturbing Business.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—A secretly drafted administration bill to extend NRA with some modifications was hastily introduced today by Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, after a warning in executive session from Donald Richberg, NRA head, that strikes were impending in four big industries.

The NRA bill was along lines recommended by the administration, with codes confined to Interstate Commerce and the anti-trust laws partially restored.

Members of the committee said Richberg warned of the threatening labor situation in the steel, coal, automobile and textile industries and urged it to speed up consideration of NRA legislation. He advocated the immediate introduction of the bill which Harrison had had in his pocket for several days.

The Harrison bill would extend NRA for two years from June 16, when the present law expires.

Anti-Trust Provision.

The new provision on the anti-trust laws reads:

"Nothing in this title shall be construed to amend or repeal any provision of the anti-trust laws of the United States; but the provisions incorporated in any code or agreement specifically approved, prescribed, or entered into and in effect in accordance with this title, and any action complying with such code or agreement taken while it is in effect or within 60 days thereafter, shall be lawful if and only if such code or agreement conforms in all respects to the limitations and provisions of this title. All such codes and agreements shall cease to be in effect on or before June 16, 1937."

Harrison emphasized to newspapermen, as he introduced the bill, that it was purely a basis for discussion and probably would be subjected to further changes, particularly the section dealing with the anti-trust laws.

The measure, he said, retained the labor section of the old law, section 7-A, without change, and provided for two kinds of codes—voluntary for most industries and limited codes to be imposed on the natural resource industries.

He said he thought the bill would eliminate all intrastate industries, such as the service trades, from operation of the law.

Authorization of Codes.

The bill would authorize codes if the President found:

"That such code or codes are not calculated to promote or sanction the creation or maintenance of a monopoly or monopolies or practices destructive of fair competition, to eliminate or oppress small enterprises or to discriminate against them, or to promote or sanction devices for fixing prices or controlling production or distribution which are restrictive of fair competition; but devices for controlling prices, production or distribution may be applied (a) where found necessary to proper by the President to protect small enterprises against discrimination or oppression or to deter the growth of monopolies, or (b) where found necessary to provide correctives for emergencies caused by large volumes of production in excess of effective demand, or by destructive price cutting, or (c) to those trades or industries which are now or hereafter subjected to Government regulation of prices, services, and methods of operations, as public utilities, or as national resources industries (such as, among others, coal, oil or gas), or because they are found to be affected with a public interest."

Interstate Commerce Defined.

The definition of interstate commerce, which Harrison said would eliminate local industries, provides that:

"No trade or industry or subdivision there of shall be eligible for a code, unless by reason of the character or volume of employment or sales, or the shipment, or use of goods shipped, in interstate or foreign commerce, or the effect of such trade or industry or subdivision thereof upon interstate or foreign commerce, or upon instrumentalities of interstate or foreign commerce, or upon the movement of goods or service in interstate or foreign commerce, or by reasons of other conditions which the President finds to exist, said trade or industry or subdivision thereof either is engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, or so substantially affects interstate or foreign commerce that the establishment and enforcement of standards of fair competition in such trade or industry or subdivision thereof are necessary and proper for the protection or regulation of interstate or foreign commerce."

The bill would provide authority for the NRA to collect expenses for administration of the codes on a proportionate basis.

After a code was approved, its provisions would become the standards of fair competition for the trade and any violation would be "an unfair method of competition in commerce within the means of the Federal Trade Commission Act."

Broad authority would be extended for the President to propose to small industries a blanket code "containing only requirements specially devised for and limited to the needs and conditions of such small trades or industries and subdivisions."

BELGIAN GOVERNMENT PROCLAIMS DEVALUATION OF ITS CURRENCY

Hennen Morris was in the front row of the gallery in the crowded Parliament Building as Premier Van Zeeland started his address.

Van Zeeland's Declaration.

Van Zeeland outlined the gravity of the situation caused by the decrease in the National Bank's gold stock and by withdrawal of currency from circulation. He said the gold standard has been virtually suspended and the country has been operating with two currencies of varying values, one from domestic and the other for foreign purposes.

"The Government recognizes it is impossible to defend the franc at the level hitherto adopted," Van Zeeland said. "The parity of the franc will therefore be modified. The obligation of the National Bank to meet sight and bearer notes in conditions laid down by statutory regulations of 1926 will be suspended.

"Belgium, however, remains faithful to the principle of the gold standard and, wishing it to be established without delay in conditions which will effectively assure its international functioning, we propose to use all means in our power to hasten establishment of an international court whereby the principal moneys of the world again will be stabilized on gold.

"Pending meeting of an international monetary conference and agreement, the Government asks leave of Parliament to allow the franc's devaluation to a maximum of 30 per cent.

"The franc's new regime will begin Monday. The National Bank's cash is to be provisionally revalued on the basis of 25 per cent."

The Government announced a special organization would be appointed to supervise credit policy. This may be the National Bank or a body managed by the bank.

The stability of the belga's foreign exchange value will be assured by the Belgian National Bank, which will buy and sell currency through the intermediary of the Foreign Exchange equalization fund.

The belga was established as Belgium's monetary unit in 1926. It is equal to five Belgian paper francs and is currently quoted at about 21 cents in United States currency.

Belga Lower on London Market; Trade Trend to Sterling.

LONDON, March 29.—The drift of currency quotations in favor of sterling became more pronounced on the foreign exchange market today as the announcement of Belgian devaluation raised fears regarding other gold currencies. The offerings of United States dollars and gold bloc currencies were liberal and rates sagged as the proceeds were invested in British pounds.

Uncertainty regarding the future was indicated by the three-months' discount rate which, in the case of the belga, amounted to 3 to 4 belgas to the pound. Dollar futures, however, carried a ⅜ cent premium.

After touching 4.85 to the pound, the dollar closed at 4.83⅞, 3⅝ cents to the pound lower than yesterday. The French franc closed at 73.50 to the pound as compared to Thursday's close of 72.93. The belga closed at 25.12 to the pound as compared to the previous day's close of 23.

ST. LOUIS BANK WINS SUIT OVER AUSTRIAN CURRENCY

20-Year-Old Controversy Between State National and Anglo-Austrian Depositories Settled.

A 20-year-old controversy between the Anglo-Austrian Bank of Vienna and the State National Bank of St. Louis over payments on a letter of credit was settled today when the United States Circuit Court of Appeals handed down an opinion upholding Federal Judge Faris in deciding the case in favor of the St. Louis bank, which has been absorbed by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

Visiting in Austria in 1915, the late Dr. Francis L. Stuever of St. Louis, and his sister, Miss Celia Stuever, deposited a $9450 letter of credit from the State National Bank with the Anglo-Austrian Bank. Because of war the Austrian bank was unable to forward drafts on the letter of credit to this country, and found in December, 1916, it had five drafts for $8150 in its possession. It requested Dr. Stuever to reimburse it, and he presented 69,528 kronen, which the Austrian bank accepted, but refused to apply to the drafts, declaring it was entitled to payment in dollars.

In 1923 the Austrian bank sent to Dr. Stuever a bank book showing the kronen had been deposited to his credit in a savings account. At that time they were worth about 30 cents.

In 1927 an agent of the Vienna bank sued the State National Bank in Federal Court here. The case was heard twice by Judge Faris. The first time it was reversed on a technicality. At the second trial, Judge Faris ruled the 69,528 kronen had been a legitimate payment on the drafts, although, due to an error in the transaction, the Vienna bank was entitled to $1350.

FORMER BUYER FOR OHIO RELIEF AGENCY INDICTED

John A. Lee Accused of Forgery and Obtaining Money by False Pretenses at Columbus.

ACTION FOLLOWS HOPKINS' CHARGES

State Grand Jury Also Declares Ex-Official Was Interested in Public Contract.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 29.—The Franklin County (Columbus) grand jury indicted John A. Lee, a former hay buyer for the State Relief Administration, today on charges of forgery, obtaining money under false pretense, and being interested in a public contract.

The indictment was the result of Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' charge of political corruption in administration of relief in Ohio. President Roosevelt took cognizance of the Hopkins charges in ordering his relief administrator to take complete charge of administering Ohio's $8,000,000-a-month Federal relief bill.

Hopkins' charge of a political "shakedown" of business firms selling to the Ohio relief organization caused Gov. Martin L. Davey to file a warrant charging Hopkins with criminal libel. Hopkins asserted the money solicited from firms dealing with the relief organization was used to pay a deficit in the Davey campaign and inaugural funds.

Lee Missing for 10 Days.

Lee, who has been missing for 10 days, asserted in an affidavit obtained by Federal investigators that he withheld $1 a ton from a dealer on the purchase price of ensilage and obtained payment of about $3000 from firms selling to the relief administration.

In the affidavit, Lee said he solicited the money of his own free will and that he paid it to the State Democratic Committee. The money was collected and turned over, he said, in the hope that Ray McNamara, director of the surplus committees division, would be appointed State Relief Director or assistant director after Davey's inauguration.

Difference of $4.

The charge of obtaining money under false pretenses is based on Lee's affidavit regarding the purchase of ensilage. The indictment asserts that Lee represented he paid $8.50 for ensilage used in feeding cattle on a state relief ranch south of Delaware, O., when in fact he paid only $4.50 a ton.

It also alleges that Lee represented he was purchasing the ensilage from Earl Pyle of Clarksville, O., when in fact he obtained it from the Roxana Canning Co., of Roxana, O.

The alleged misrepresentation is said to involve $10,255.44.

The Forgery Charge.

The charge of forgery alleges that Lee placed Pyle's name on a check for $1439.55 which was made out to Pyle.

The charge of being interested in a public contract is predicated on the assumption that when Lee represented to the State Department that he was purchasing ensilage from Pyle he was in fact purchasing it from himself. Pyle, it is charged, acted as agent for Lee in dealing with the Roxana Company and received $1.50 a ton while Lee retained a similar amount.

HOUSE MINORITY REPORT ATTACKS 30-HOUR WEEK BILL

Two Republicans and a Democrat Favor "Overtime Wage Policies."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Abandonment of what was termed the policy of seeking profit "by way of less production and higher prices" was urged today in a report of the minority of the Judiciary Committee on the 30-hour week bill.

Opposing the idea of a 30-hour week as a stimulant to industry, Senator Austin (Rep.), Vermont, author of the minority report, declared it was in the interest of labor to give up such a policy.

A supplemental statement to the minority report said business should accept "overtime wage policies which will distribute an increased sum in wages as the demand for workers rises above the level of the 40 hours a week."

The report also was signed by Hastings (Rep.), Delaware, and Burke (Dem.), Nebraska.

Meanwhile, a declaration that strikes could be prevented if the Rules Committee would stop "smothering" labor bills was made on the House floor by Chairman Connery of the House Labor Committee. "The responsibility for these 1,000,000 men who are about to go out on strike rests on you," he declared.

NEW YORK STATE REPEALS ITS 'HEART BALM' LAWS

Gov. Lehman Signs Bill Abolishing Alienation and Breach of Promise Suits.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 29.—New York State abolished its "heart balm" laws today on the ground that they had been abused and made an instrument of blackmail.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman signed the draction McNaboe bill, which gives New Yorkers 60 days to bring damage suits. After May 28 residents are forbidden to sue for breach of promise, alienation of affections, seduction or criminal conversation.

The Legislature overwhelmingly approved the bill earlier this month. Senator John J. McNaboe (Dem.), told the legislators that "men of high positions" were made the targets of "gold-digging" racketeers.

The new law makes it a criminal offense for anyone to attempt to collect damages through the courts or otherwise. A future breach of any contract now in existence may be made ground for suit.

AUTO MAKERS, PUBLISHERS OPPOSE THE WAGNER BILL

Spokeman for Newspaper Group Tells Senators Labor Measure Is 'Unfair One-Sided Legislation'.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The American Newspaper Publishers' Association joined the opposition to enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill today.

Harvey J. Kelly, representing the association, told the Senate Labor Committee the bill was "unfair and one-sided legislation which amounts, in practical application, to a labor dictatorship."

Instead of promoting equality of bargaining power between employers and employes as intended, Kelly said the measure "would remove the last vestige of equality."

Robert C. Graham, vice-president of the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, attacked the bill as "class legislation of the worst kind."

"This bill," he said, "does not give employes any rights so far as collective bargaining is concerned that are not already granted by section 7-A of the National Recovery Act.

"The act does endow the American Federation of Labor and other professional labor organizations with more effective means than they have ever had before to impose upon employes their domination as the collective bargaining agency."

The bill would outlaw the company-dominated union, create a permanent Labor Relations Board and give the labor organization chosen by a majority of the employes in a plant the right to speak for all the employes.

Graham, speaking for the National Automobile Manufacturers' Association, said he spoke for all the major automobile companies except the Ford Motor Co., not a member of the association.

Sold Ticket for Change, Learns She Would Have Won $71,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Mrs. Ray Gold, Bronx housewife, rejected brokers' offers to buy her ticket in the Grand National steeplechase, so when Reynoldstown won she found that she would win $145,000.

Carmelo Ursino, a 58-year-old Italian longshoreman, who held a ticket on Blue Prince, which came in second, knew immediately what he was going to do with his winnings of $71,737. He said he was going back to Italy to support his sister and her three children, whom he could not help on his $15 to $20 weekly wage.

Perhaps the saddest woman in New York today is Mrs. Anna Willis who, needing small change, sold her ticket on Blue Prince to her sister, Mrs. Mae C. Smyle, for the original purchase price.

Charles Connor, 25 years old, bartender in Philadelphia, and Mrs. Ann Goldberg of Philadelphia also held tickets on Reynoldstown. Mrs. Goldberg plans a trip abroad with her husband and son.

CONFEREES AGREE ON WORKS BILL, SILVER RIDER OUT

nated. This amendment had been sponsored by the Master Plumbers' Association.

A House provision rejected by the Senate was modified to provide that President Roosevelt would have authority to prescribe the duties and functions of agencies within the Government in setting up the machinery for the administration of the fund.

A provision prohibiting the use of funds for munitions, warships or military or naval material was amended to provide that new buildings and reconstruction of buildings for improvements to military and naval reservations for non-military purposes would be allowed.

Among the Senate changes approved were the allocation of the fund to eight general types of projects; continuation of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for one year; extension of the Civilian Conservation Corps for two years from March 31; continuation of PWA for two years from June 16; the George amendment to make funds available in the discretion of the President for the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act; the Russell amendment to authorize farm loans to share croppers, tenant farmers and farm laborers for purchase of lands.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Interior Ickes took steps to continue the national re-employment service, from which non-union PWA construction employes are recruited.

At the request of Secretary of Labor Perkins, he allotted $1,300,000 to pay its expenses until June 30. Officials explained the additional grant was necessary to make up for restoration of the remaining 5 per cent cut in Federal salaries.

Ickes also said $100,000,000 in projects of states and municipalities, and $1,800,000,000 in Federal applications, were ready to be started immediately.

Of the $20,000,000,000 of projects listed in the national inventory, however, he remarked: "I wouldn't say they were all bona fide projects."

He said he had made no study of how 3,500,000 persons could be put to work by July, since "I am not administering the work program." However, in discussing delay in the PWA program—about one-third of the $3,700,000,000 fund has not been paid out by the Treasury—he said: "I believe in all the speed that can be put on consistent with safeguards. I don't believe in just scattering it. Projects should be self-liquidating as much as possible. You can't tell by looking at a project whether it is self-liquidating. You have to investigate."

He said "slum clearance is necessarily slow because the bigger the city the more difficult it is to acquire land."

"There is a disposition in some cities," he said, "to go in the courts and enjoin, following the example of Louisville."

BANKERS MADE $1,900,000; FRISCO LOST $10,000,000

Despite This James Speyer Testifies Rock Island Stock Was Bought 'in Interest' of Road.

'HAD NO IDEA OF PROFIT TO US'

His Memory Goes Bad at Crucial Points in New York Inquiry Into System's Bankruptcy.

By WILLIAM J. COBURN,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 29. — Purchase of Rock Island Railroad stock, which caused a paper loss of nearly $10,000,000 to the Frisco Railroad, resulted in a profit of about $1,900,000 to the Frisco's bankers, Speyer & Co., it was disclosed yesterday at the opening of the inquiry to determine whether the bankers guided the railroad's financial policy before it went into bankruptcy.

James Speyer, 73-year-old head of the banking firm, testified under questioning by Frank A. Thompson of St. Louis, attorney for co-trustee John G. Lonsdale, that his company sold its 68,750 shares at a profit of $1,522,000 while the Frisco was hanging on to its 183,333 shares.

His memory for details was poor, he went on, but he was willing to concede that in addition Speyer & Co. got $196,645 in commissions and made a profit of $181,000 in the sale of other Rock Island shares if it were true, as Thompson stated, that the figures were taken from the Speyer books.

"In Interests of Frisco."

"But," he added, "it was all done in the interests of the Frisco with no idea of profit to us. We took a $15,000,000 chance in the interest of Frisco security holders on the statement of E. N. Brown (chairman of the Frisco board) that he would recommend that the Frisco take $10,000,000 of it. If you say we got those profits I accept it, but we had some losses, too—I'll give them by and by."

The primary reason for the purchase, Speyer said, was to give representation on the Rock Island board to the Frisco to protect its competitive position, with consolidation between the two railroads a secondary consideration.

The consolidation never materialized, although three Frisco officers did become Rock Island directors, and Brown, incidentally, became chairman of the Rock Island Executive Committee at a salary of $50000 a year.

Thompson sought to show that in the Rock Island stock purchase Speyer & Co. was moved by a desire to do financing for the Rock Island after losing some of it to other bankers, but Speyer denied this flatly. Pursuing the question, Thompson asked about the financing which he asserted Speyer & Co. had lost and the witness said he did not remember it.

"My Memory Is Rotten."

"Well, what is your memory?" Thompson asked with a show of irritation. "My memory," Speyer replied, "is rotten."

Repeatedly during the examination Speyer made the reply "I don't remember," referring his interrogator to "the records" or to the second partner in the firm, Dewitt Millhauser. Again and again he raised his eyebrows, shrugged his shoulders and turned up the palms of his hands, once asking Thompson testily, "Why don't you ask Millhauser, he knows everything?"

The inquiry, Thompson announced to Federal Court Master Van Vechten Veeder, was a discover assets and lay the foundation for "possible law suits" against the bankers and some of the directors of the Frisco.

Thompson's position is that the bankers should account to the Frisco for their profit in the Rock Island stock purchase and also that there is a liability to the Frisco for its $10,000,000 investment in Rock Island stock, which now has a market value of about $250,000.

Denies Fiduciary Relation.

In this connection, Jack Lewis Kraus of New York, representing the Gans bondholding interests, asked if there had not been a confidential and fiduciary relationship between the Frisco and its bankers, but Speyer said the relationship was the ordinary one between bankers and business and certainly was not fiduciary.

Speyer, a bristling figure, little more than five feet tall, frequently took vigorous exception to what he considered innuendo in Thompson's questions. On several occasions he volunteered statements in answer to inferences he said he saw in the queries.

Once, when Thompson asked him about Frisco's refinancing in 1928, in which about $76,000,000 of income and adjustment bonds which had been selling below par were retired at par or higher, Speyer declared: "We did not speculate in those bonds knowing retirement was coming—neither I nor my family nor my firm."

Denies Buying Shares in Advance.

On another occasion when a dividend declaration of $4,258,000 by Frisco directors in 1930 was under scrutiny, Speyer said, "You want to know we had the dividend because we had a lot of shares and what not, but that is not the fact. If you want to prove we had a large amount of stock when the dividend was declared you can't do it because we didn't have it."

After Kraus took up this line of questioning, Speyer volunteered the statement, "We did not buy any shares in advance, knowing the dividend was to be declared."

Speyer told Thompson he remembered nothing about the details of the Frisco's purchase of 25,000 shares of Gulf, Mobile & Northern stock, a transaction which Brown had testified previously in St. Louis had been handled through Speyer & Co.

It was this purchase, made on Brown's secret order to Speyer & Co., which was not approved formally by Frisco directors until seven months after it was completed and when the market price had dropped from $38 a share to about $13. Brown had testified he had reported the transaction to four other directors, constituting with himself a majority of the executive committee of the board, and they had approved it informally.

Never Saw Kurn's Letter.

Speyer said he had never seen the letter which James M. Kurn of St. Louis, operating head of the Frisco, wrote to Brown in 1927 stating that the Frisco was being "crucified" by its holdings of Rock Island stock.

The letter had been produced at hearings in St. Louis. At those hearings Kurn had said he could see no reason for the purchases of stock in other railroads and had said that the New York financial management had urged economies on him when the railroad was borrowing large sums from banks and shifting funds to meet dividends requirements and when he had already cut expenses to the "danger point."

Plans for Great North and South Line in 1925 Described.

By the Associated Press.

At today's hearing Dewitt Millhauser, "railroad partner" of the private banking firm of Speyer & Co., disclosed plans proposed in 1925 to form a great north-and-south line composed of an amalgamation of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas, Cotton Belt, Kansas City Southern and the Choctaw Oklahoma & Gulf branch of the Rock Island.

It was the proposal of railroad interests to create this rail giant in the midwest, Millhauser testified, which led up to the purchase by his firm of 275,000 shares of Rock Island, two-thirds of which was subsequently sold to the Frisco and the balance disposed of by Speyer & Co.

Millhauser emphatically and with heat denied a line of questioning apparently designed to show that a pool had unloaded stock on Speyer & Co. in 1925 and 1926, which the bankers subsequently sold to the Frisco.

Counsel for the Frisco's co-trustees asked Millhauser, "did you buy the 275,000 shares of Rock Island from any pool or did any pool exist in the stock to your knowledge?" Millhauser replied, "most certainly not."

The Speyer partner pointed out that all of the stock in question was purchased on the New York Stock Exchange and that the sellers were not identifiable.

Exhibits were introduced by counsel for Speyer & Co., to show that the firm and its members had suffered a loss of $550,000 on shares of Frisco common and preferred owned by them on Nov. 12, 1930.

CHILD KILLED BY AUTO IN FRONT OF HOME

Three-Year-Old Theodore Juengst Jr. Hit by Truck in North Newstead.

Theodore Juengst Jr., 3-year-old son of a paperhanger, 4327A North Newstead avenue, was killed at 1:50 p. m. today when struck by a heavy truck in front of his home. He was pronounced dead of a fractured skull at the Christian Hospital, a few doors north of where the accident occurred.

The driver was Homer Taylor, Negro, 2846 Pine street. Witnesses said the boy came out of a store across from his home and ran into the path of the truck from between two parked automobiles.

7-Year-Old Boy Killed by Auto in Webster Groves.

Frederick H. Huttmann Jr., 7 years old, was killed by an automobile yesterday afternoon as he crossed the street in front of his home at 330 West Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, while playing with three other boys.

He was carried into his home after the accident, at 4:35 p. m., and died there four hours later of a fractured skull and internal injuries. An attending physician had said he was injured beyond hope of recovery, and had advised against taking him to a hospital.

Miss Helen Aufderheide, a stenographer, 735 West Oakland avenue, Glendale, driver of the automobile, was taken to her home in collapse after the accident. She told Webster Groves policemen the boy ran into the path of her automobile.

The boy was the only son of the assistant regional manager of the Chrysler Corporation, who moved to St. Louis from Minneapolis, Minn., with his family, including a daughter, Annis, 9, about 18 months ago. Funeral services will be held in Norfolk, Va.

An hour before the accident, Alvin Stones, 7, suffered a fractured leg when hit by an automobile on Lockwood avenue a few blocks from the Huttmann home. The boy, son of Ross Stone, night sergeant in the East St. Louis yards for the Terminal Railroad Association, was knocked down at Cherry street by an automobile driven by Miss Lucie C. Bush, 550 Olive court, Webster Groves. He was taken to Missouri Pacific Hospital.

OUTLAWS DISARM MISSISSIPPI POSSE IN ALL-DAY CHASE

Two Persons Wounded; Others Seized As Hostages in Flight of Pair After Bank Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSON, Miss., March 29.—Sheriffs' posses and state troops today were pursuing two desperadoes—one believed to be Raymond Hamilton, the Southwest's most notorious outlaw — who terrorized South Mississippi yesterday with shootings, abductions and bank robbery.

Two persons were wounded, others were kidnaped and harassed peace officers engaged in sporadic fights as the pair dodged all day in an automobile over a zig-zag course within a radius of 50 miles of Prentiss. The fugitives were believed to be still in the locality today.

The chase started with the holdup of the Bank of Bluntville where the robbers took $1100 after locking five persons in the vault.

Thinks One Is Hamilton.

Deputy Sheriff W. J. Lee of Jefferson Davis County, who exchanged shots with them at one time in the chase, said he had tentatively identified one of the men as Hamilton, fugitive from Texas penitentiary.

Locked in the rumble seat of an automobile two of the persons abducted were abandoned near Memphis, Tenn., today. M. E. Smith, a county farm agent, and Ralph Ballis, Prentiss, Miss., merchant, broke out of the rumble seat and walked to Hernandez, Miss., where they talked to Sheriff Sid Campbell.

Smith and Ballis, members of a posse of 15—all of whom were overpowered by the desperadoes—were taken as hostages. Smith's car was commandeered and Smith was forced to accompany the fugitives as driver.

Gov. Sennett Conner ordered the National Guard mobilized late yesterday after the two men, using a Sheriff and three other persons as shields, surprised the possemen 12 miles north of Prentiss and disarmed them.

Ten Guardsmen Assigned.

About 100 guardsmen were summoned at Jackson, but all except 10 of them were sent home at midnight. Adjutant-General Thomas L. Grayson said they could be recalled at an hour's notice.

The Adjutant-General said he had been informed the men were last seen at 5:30 p. m. yesterday turning into a gravel road three miles west of Georgetown, in Copiah County.

Deputy Sheriff Lee said Sheriff Ennis Crawford of Covington County, who was seized, was slightly wounded in the head during a skirmish. The Sheriff escaped during one of the fights.

Mrs. Rodney Polk, living near Prentiss, was shot through the left arm when her father-in-law, J. T. Polk, opened fire on the robbers as they attempted to take his automobile. One of the robbers was believed to have been wounded in the face by a charge of squirrel shot from Polk's gun.

MRS. M'CORMICK'S $1,000,000 NECKLACE TO BE BROKEN UP

Executors of Estate Hope to Sell Former Russian Crown Jewels in Parts.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 29.—A $1,000,000 necklace, formerly among the Russian crown jewels, but now part of the Edith Rockefeller McCormick estate, is to be broken up and rearranged by the executors in the hope that buyers can be found for the segments.

The jewels originally formed a 30-inch diadem, fashioned by artisans with five emeralds and 755 diamonds, for the Romanoffs of Russia. With the downfall of the Czar the jewels were acquired by Mrs. McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller Sr. She wore them often to the opera until her last illness.

They have lain in a secret vault while executors vainly sought a buyer. Yesterday the Cook County Probate Court confirmed the order permitting separation and recutting of the necklace.

Recovery Act Upheld.

By the Associated Press.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 29.—Holding that existing emergencies allow no time "to wait for fine-spun opinions on the difference between tweedledee and tweedledum," Circuit Judge L. D. Miller yesterday sustained the constitutionality of the National Recovery Act under "inherent police power" of the Federal Government. The case was before him on appeal from a Justice of the Peace ruling in a suit to recover wages for hours worked in excess of the grocery and food code.

AUTHOR'S DAUGHTER HELPS HIM IN SUIT

Says Her Mother, First Mrs. Bedford-Jones, Put on Airs in London.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 29. — Helen Wallace Bedford-Jones, 20-year-old daughter of Mrs. Helen Bedford-Jones, first wife of the fiction writer, Bedford-Jones, appeared today as a defense witness in the trial of her mother's suit for $200,000 for loss of her husband's affections.

Mrs. Helen Bedford-Jones, the plaintiff, heard a report of the Bedford-Jones home life given to the Federal Court jury by her daughter.

Telling how her mother and father settled in England, back in 1921, the daughter testified:

"Our home life changed completely. Us kids were turned over to servants. We had to learn to be cultured. Mother was going to be a social somebody. We were just there for show. We were just sort of puppets to show off before her friends."

The girl's testimony was expected to introduce the defendant in the case—Mrs. Mary Bernardin Bedford-Jones, the writer's present wife, who married him in 1929 after he had divorced Helen's mother.

The witness identified herself as the eldest child of the plaintiff and the writer. She lives in Palm Springs, Cal., with her father, her stepmother (the defendant) and Mrs. Bernardin Bedford-Jones children. Life in Evansville, the family home for many years, was comparatively simple, she told the Federal Court jurors. But the trip to England she called a turning point.

"I had to learn to play the harp," the girl said. "I didn't want to, but my sister was very good looking and my brother was a cute kid, and I had to be able to do something, so my mother could point to us and say 'my talented children.'"

From England the family went to Paris, Helen told the jury. Mrs. Bernardin Bedford-Jones' attorney asked: "What was the relationship between your father and mother?"

"She was constantly nagging him," the girl replied. "She was always claiming attempts had been made to break up their home. Night and day, all you could hear was her continuous talking. Dad didn't get a chance to say anything. He'd just shut up and agree with her."

Back from abroad, the Bedford-Joneses settled in Ann Arbor, Mich., Helen said. Then Mrs. Bedford-Jones was called to Evansville by the death of her father.

"There she fell and broke her leg," said Helen.

"Did your father make any comment?" she was asked. "He said he was awful sorry she broke her leg, but said he was sure glad to have her away from there for a while."

PRISONER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Awaiting Death, Swallows Needles and Wounds Self With Meat Bone.

By the Associated Press.

OSSINING, N. Y., March 29.—Albert Fish, sentenced to be executed in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison the week of April 8 for the murder of 10-year-old Grace Budd, was interrupted today after he had cut himself with a meat bone.

Keeper Daniel Malone entered the cell to find that prisoner had made two incisions in his abdomen in the form of a cross. He had hid two pork chop bones in his cell, and had fashioned them into cutting weapons by chewing them. The wounds were superficial.

Fish told prison doctors he felt pains in his abdomen. An X-ray showed 27 needles in his body, one of them a darning needle three inches long.

UNION ELECTRIC LOSES OVERHEAD WIRE PLEA

Board of Public Service Refuses Application for Permit to Place 96 Poles.

The Board of Public Service today voted to refuse the application of the Union Electric Light & Power Co. for a permit to place 96 poles, and overhead electric wires, for a distance of two miles on West Park avenue and other streets south of Forest Park.

Director of Public Utilities Wall, who objected to the company's plan at a reecnt meeting, expressed the opinion then that the residents of the streets affected would oppose placing the poles in front of their homes. At today's meeting a protest, signed by 104 property owners on West Park avenue, 5700 to 6500 blocks, and the 1200 block on Kraft avenue, was presented by Thomas F. Manion, lawyer, whose home is at 6515 West Park.

Manion said the district was a residence neighborhood, with 50 or more children on each block, and that the home owners objected to poles and wires both from standpoints of looks and of safety.

Hermann Spoehrer, secretary of Union Electric, said the proposed line was intended not only to serve the neighborhood, but to furnish an added reserve of service for the Municipal Theater and The Arena. He said at the previous meeting that a conduit for the wires along the Oakland avenue car tracks, suggested by Wall, would cost $50,000 more than the overhead plan.

Wall repeated his objection to new overhead installations, as out of line with the city's policy of putting wires underground at the rate of five miles a year. The other members of the board present, President Brown, director of Public Welfare Darst, and Director of Public Safety Chadsey, voted with him for filing the application, which is equivalent to a denial. Director of Streets McDevitt was not present.

BILL TO REPEAL CITY DOG SALE LAW KILLED

Committee Refuses to Report Measure Against Disposal to Medical Schools.

A bill to repeal an ordinance, which permits the city to sell stray dogs to medical schools for scientific experimentation, died today with the adjournment of the Board of Aldermen at its last meeting of the annual session.

When the final session started the Public Welfare Committee announced it had decided not to make a report on the repeal bill. There was no subsequent action to override the committee's action.

Chairman Collins of the committee said no formal vote on the bill had been taken. The bill which aroused an extended controversy, was sponsored by an organized group of about 500 citizens, represented by Charles J. Dolan, former Associate City Counselor. A public hearing on the bill before the committee attracted about 800 persons, the majority of whom were medical students, to a hall at Municipal Auditorium.

The present ordinance, permitting sale of impounded dogs to the medical schools at 75 cents each, has been on the books since 1922. Proponents of the repealer denied that animal vivisection was involved in the controversy, but said they objected to an enforced municipal partnership in the traffic in dogs.

EX-CONVICTS GET 6 YEARS EACH ON ROBBERY CHARGES

Pair Admit Holding Up Two Taxicab Drivers, Getting Total of $6.80.

Two former convicts, Paul C. Carter, 24 years old, of Cairo, Ill., and Ray Mulkey, 32, who said he had no home, pleaded guilty to two charges of first degree robbery today before Circuit Judge Connor and were sentenced to six years' imprisonment on each count, the terms to run concurrently.

They held up Roy Newman, chauffeur for American Taxicabs, Inc., at Eleventh and Chestnut streets, taking $4 last Feb. 2. Eight days later they took $2.80 from Paul Eckert, a chauffeur for the same company, in a holdup at Fourteenth and Locust streets.

Since they were charged under the habitual criminal act the usual five-year sentence was increased a year.

LEDGE 5 FEET WIDE STOPS FALL OF MAN IN QUARRY

Wilhelm Schneider Injured; Rescued Later by Police and Workmen.

A narrow ledge, about five feet wide, stopped the fall of Wilhelm Schneider, 62 years old, when he lost his balance while standing on the edge of the Tower Grove Quarry at 5926 Scanlon avenue yesterday afternoon. The ledge is about 25 feet below the surface. The quarry is 200 feet deep.

Schneider, who lives at 6318 Arthur avenue, was rescued from his precarious position by policemen and quarry workmen, who lowered a man to the ledge with a rope, which was secured around Schneider's body.

Schneider was lifted to the surface and taken to City Hospital, where physicians found he had suffered fractures of ribs and left arm. He said he was out for a walk and was looking into the quarry when he lost his balance.

MAYOR SEEKING TO ARBITRATE GAS WORKERS' STRIKE

Confers With Men, Laclede Officers and Representatives of State Public Service Board.

Representatives of the Laclede Gas Light Co., the Gas House Workers' Union and the Missouri Public Service Commission met with Mayor Dickmann today in an effort to settle the strike of employes of the mechanical departments of the gas company, called yesterday by the union.

Union Demands.

After a two-hour conference in the forenoon, the meeting recessed for luncheon and Mayor Dickmann told reporters he "believed this thing can be settled."

"The only question in dispute, as I see it, is the question of the union representing all the employes in the mechanical departments of the gas company," the Mayor said. "It is my belief that the question should be settled by the employes involved. With that in mind we have called in a representative of the company employes' association. I intend to do everything possible to get these men back to work as quickly as possible."

Those attending the meeting besides Mayor Dickmann, were: Edward P. Gosling, president of the Laclede Gas Light Co.; Robert W. Otto, counsel for the company; City Counselor Hay, Associate City Counselor Wayman; Munro Roberts, attorney for the Union; J. C. Collet, chairman of the Missouri Pacific Service Commission; R. E. Duffy, member of the Missouri Public Service Commission; William F. Dhite, Department of Labor conciliator, and Harold T. Garvey, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board.

The union, Local 18,799, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is demanding recognition as the exclusive bargaining agency for the 725 mechanical department employes of the gas company. The National Labor Relations Board, in a decision at Washington a week ago, affirmed the local labor board in designating the union, which claims a membership of 550 men, as exclusive representative in collective bargaining for mechanical department employes. The company, given 10 days in which to comply with the order, challenged the jurisdiction of the labor board and refused to accept the union as bargaining agent for employes outside its membership.

In advertisements appearing in newspapers yesterday the gas company said it had served the community for nearly 90 years and would do everything possible to maintain service. A company spokesman said there was a sufficient number of employes in the manufacturing division to assure an adequate supply of gas. The company has not announced its policy with reference to replacing the strikers.

Police were ordered on 12-hour shifts, beginning this morning, because of the strike. The company has 15 plants, offices, garages and gas holders, which are being guarded. So far no violence has resulted. Four strikers were arrested last night when they started to follow a non-union worker. They were released with a warning not to molest workers. Strike pickets are on duty day and night at several of the plants, where night shifts are employed. Picketing has been limited to one or two men at each plant.

400 Strikers at Rally.

Approximately 400 strikers attended a rally last night at Electrical Workers' Hall. They were urged to stand firm in their demand for company compliance with the Labor Board order. Officers of the union issued a statement expressing the hope that the public will suffer no inconvenience through the strike. Union leaders suggested that one purpose behind the company announcement of a 75-cent charge for service on gas appliances, effective April 1, was to discourage requests for service and offer an excuse for the dismissal of a portion of the service force.

EDWARD SINGLETON.

FREE AFTER SERVING 4 YEARS FOR ANOTHER MAN'S CRIME

Edward Singleton Thanks Indiana Officer Who Arrested, Then Proved Him Innocent.

HAMMOND, Ind., March 29.—Vindicated of a robbery charge, Edward Singleton, 44 years old, stepped from behind prison bars yesterday, after serving four years, and police and the man he was accused of robbing are seeking employment for him.

Freed at the Michigan City State Penitentiary, Singleton came here immediately to thank Police Capt. Sandor Singer who arrested him Feb. 7, 1931 for the robbery of Mike Johnson's grocery. Singleton said he held no grudge.

His release came about mainly because the police officer was not convinced the right man had been convicted of the holdup, and consequently worked on the case after Singleton started his 10-year sentence. His investigation resulted in the confession of another man. Johnson and Singer said they would do their best to find employment for Singleton.

Singleton said he could now write his mother, Mrs. Laura Singleton of Ingalls, N. C., who hasn't heard from him since he was arrested.

"I didn't write to her all these years," he said, "because I didn't want her to know."

This week Ralph Harwood, 24, was arrested after boasting, Singer said, that another man was serving a term for a robbery he committed. Later, Singer said, Harwood confessed that he was one of the two masked men who held up the Johnson store.

Woman Screams, Robber Runs.

When an armed man attempted to rob Mrs. Edna Hofschmidt, a widow, 4928 Buckingham court, and her escort, John Meyer, 1948 Lynch street, at 2:30 a. m. today near her home, she dropped to the ground and screamed. The robber fled to Euclid avenue, and was driven away in an automobile.

Denies Causing Son's Arrest.

By the Associated Press.

ARKOE, Mo., March 28.—Mrs. Ola Ware of Arkoe yesterday denied she was responsible for the arrest of her 19-year-old son, Verle Ware, Monday at Maryville as he tried to sell three chickens of the family's at a produce station. Mrs. Ware asserted her son had taken the fowls to Maryville as he had done on other occasions, to obtain money for groceries. She said the arrest was due to "spite work" on the part of neighbors. In denying she had been the prosecuting witness in the case, Mrs. Ware said she had allowed her son to plead guilty and receive a jail sentence with a chance of parole rather than cause publicity. Mrs. Ware said her son had never been in any kind of trouble.

WHOLESALE PRICE TREND UPWARD IN THIS DISTRICT

Production Makes Better Showing Than Distribution in February and First Half of March.

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES SHOW GAIN

Report of Reserve Bank Notes Effects of Floods and Late Easter on Trade Activities.

Production made a better showing than distribution in the Eighth Federal Reserve District in February and the first half of March, according to the Reserve Bank's monthly review, made public today.

Seasonal considerations had a part in the this result, the review states, the very late Easter date being an important factor. "In merchandising," it is stated, "retail trade was in comparatively larger volume than wholesaling and jobbing lines, despite unfavorable weather conditions. Quite generally there is a disposition on the part of merchants and the public to purchase with more conservatism and caution than was the case during the preceding several months.

"Trend of wholesale prices in February was upward, the average on March 2 being 8 per cent and 33.6 per cent higher, respectively, than a month and a year earlier. There have since been rather sharp declines in certain farm products, notably cotton and grains.

Production Increased.

"Production at manufacturing plants increased slightly during February over the January level, and continuance of the improvement in several important lines in the first half of March is indicated. The iron and steel industry made a favorable showing, particularly in the case of specialty makers, such as stoves, ranges, heating apparatus, machinery and farm implements. Several implement manufacturers report the volume of business done so far this year the largest for any similar period since 1928.

"There has been a slight slowing down in operations at textile mills; there was little change worthy of note in output of lumber, quarry products, cement and the general run of building materials. Production of bituminous coal showed less than the usual seasonal decline. In the five principal cities, consumption of electric current by selected industrial customers was 1.4 per cent larger than in January, and 13.8 per cent more than in February, 1934.

Department Store Sales.

"As reflected in the dollar volume of sales of department stores in the principal cities, retail trade in February was 2.2 per cent greater than in February, 1934, and slightly greater than for January. The cumulative total for the first two months this year was 1.6 per cent higher than for the comparable period in 1934.

"Combined sales of all wholesale and jobbing firms reporting in February were 18 per cent and 10 per cent smaller, respectively, than a year and a month earlier; for the first two months the aggregate was 11.5 per cent below that of the like period a year ago.

"Dollar value of permits issued for new construction in the largest five cities in February was 35 per cent less than in January, but 103 per cent greater than in February, 1934; cumulative total for the first two months was greater by 127 per cent than for the same period last year."

Floods a Factor.

The unfavorable effect of floods, heavy rain and muddy roads on trade and collections is noted. Railroad freight traffic is in a volume about the same as a year earlier, but greater than in 1933. Smaller movement of livestock has resulted from last summer's drouth and the Government's curtailment program.

St. Louis department store dollar value of sales showed an increase of 2 per cent for the first two months of 1935 over those in the same months of 1934. Collections here made a percentage of 49.7, as compared with an average of 32.6 for the cities of the district. This city's increase in industrial consumption of electricity for February was 4.4 per cent over that in January, and 11.2 per cent over that in February, 1934. St. Louis' new building construction was $304,000 in February, as compared with $116,000 in February, 1934, a 162 per cent increase, and a 21 per cent increase in repairs was shown.

Summary of Trade.

Manufacturing and wholesaling activities were summarized by the report as follows:

Boots and shoes: February sales 20 per cent below those of January, 27.3 below February, 1934.

Clothing: February sales 45 per cent below those of last month, 57 per cent below February, 1934.

Drugs and chemicals: Sales gained 5 per cent, as compared with January, but were slightly lower than in February, 1934.

Dry goods: Due partly to late Easter, February sales were 7 per cent below those of January, 24

SENATORS COMMENT ON MOVE FOR STUDENT ANTI-WAR STRIKE

Proposal "Far From Futile," Says Nye; Hour's Walkout Set for April 12.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — Leaders in a movement for a national student strike, called for one hour Friday, April 12, to protest against war have obtained statements from three Senators.

Chairman Nye (Rep.), North Dakota), of the Senate Munitions Committee, said: "I think the strike is far from futile and I hope it will be engaged in to the fullest extent in an orderly manner by the students in Washington. The time is come when those who profess an aversion to war must openly indorse drastic action to prevent it."

Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, said: "Anything that tends to focus public attention on the implications of the munitions investigation is a good thing."

Senator Pope (Dem.), Idaho, made this comment: "I think that the demonstration against war to be made in an orderly fashion is a dramatic method of calling attention of the world to the fact that students are thinking about war, and opposing it. I see no objection to the strike."

The strike is backed by the National Council of Methodist Youth, the Inter-Seminary Movement (Middle Atlantic division), the National Student League, the Student League for Industrial Democracy and the American Youth Congress.

OIL IN CENTRAL MICHIGAN

CRYSTAL, Mich., March 29.—A new oil field was found in Central Michigan yesterday. Associates of J. W. Leonard, a Pennsylvania driller, made the strike. Before the operators could cap the well hundreds of barrels of oil were lost.

Crystal and other towns in the area started a celebration. Schools and stores were closed and residents for miles around thronged to the gusher on the Otto Durbin farm. Oil men from the Porter Field in Michigan estimated the flow at more than 300 barrels an hour.

per cent below February of last year.

Electrical supplies: "A notable improvement," with sales 12 per cent above those of January, 18 per cent above February of last year.

Flour: Production at 40 to 45 per cent of capacity, with output for the district of 200,755 barrels, as compared with 185,737 for January, 252,789 for February, 1934.

Furniture: Sales 8 per cent above those of February, 1934, 37 per cent in excess of the totals for last January.

Groceries: Sales 2 per cent above those of preceding month, 2 per cent below February, 1934. Demand for staples relatively more active than for luxuries and specialties.

Hardware: Heavy purchases of goods for use in farming areas was the principal influence in increase of 4.5 per cent in February sales as compared with those in the corresponding month last year. The total, however, was a decline of 6 per cent from last January.

Iron and steel products: February was the seventh consecutive month of rising shipments. Warehouse and jobbing interests report sales about one-fourth greater than they were a year ago and about 8 per cent in excess of the January total.

ALDERMEN END SESSION; PASSED 301 ORDINANCES

79 Others, Including Mayor's Bill for More Rigid Smoke Abatement, Killed in Committees.

The annual session of the Board of Aldermen was ended today. The board will not meet again until the next session starts, April 16, when 15 members to be elected next Tuesday will be inaugurated.

During the last year, 301 ordinances were passed by the board, while 79 bills were killed in committees. Bills which were killed included:

Repeal of authority to sell impounded dogs to medical schools for experimentation; tax of 1 cent a gollon on furnace oil, motor oil and other petroleum products; tax of 2 per cent on gross receipts of all professional sports (boxing and wrestling now pay 5 per cent); decrease of water rates by 15 per cent; equalization of water rates by decreasing charges for small users and increasing for large users; completion or Riverview drive paving, between Broadway and St. Cyr avenue; gallonage tax on beer; change of zoning on Washington boulevard to permit apartments between Kingshighway and Lake avenue; prohibition of advertising signs within 300 feet of public buildings and parks and authority for the Municipal Art Commission to control design of structures in the same areas; Mayor Dickmann's bill for more rigid smoke abatement regulations; licensing those in the fumigating business.

Ordinances Approved.

Among ordiances passed during the year were: Provision for refunding $2,533,000 in improvement bonds of the 1923 issue, increase of the city gasoline tax from ½ cent a gallon to 1 cent; increase of the license taxes on sales and stock in hand of merchants and manufacturers.

For eight retiring members of the board it was the last meeting. They are Walter J. G. Neun (Rep.), alderanmic president since 1923; Paul J. Hennerich (Dem.), who was defeated for renomination by Mayor Dickmann's opposition; and the following Republican Aldermen: Alfred Bergmann, Ralph H. Eilers, Herman C. Kralemann and Wilbur C. Schwartz, who have been members since the board was established in 1915; Charles A. Neumann, minority leader, member since 1919, and August M. Brinkman, member since 1927. Five Republican incumbents and one Democrat were nominated for re-election.

William L. Mason, Democratic nominee for president, attended as an observer.

Alderman Waldman (Rep.), who was chairman of a committee appointed to investigate whether three Democratic Aldermen had illegal interests in city contracts, attempted to file a report, although his committee had been discharged before it was through. Vice-President Collins (Dem.), ruled that the report would not be accepted. A subsequent committee headed by Collins had held there was no violation by those under inquiry.

"Pretty Good Sports."

In closing remarks, Waldman said the Democrats, who obtained a majority in the board two years ago, had proved to be "pretty good sports." Alderman Golden (Dem.), replied that he and his colleagues, being new in politics when they entered the board, feared the Republicans might "try to put something over," so they changed the rules to deprive the minority of power. Had he known President Neun as well then as now, Golden continued, he would not have advocated the changes. Neun expressed appreciation. A committee sent for Mayor Dickmann, for the customary speech closing the session, found the Mayor had left City Hall.

Seventeen minor ordinances, including $8000 for repair of Lafayette Bridge on Grand drive, Forest Park, which has been closed, were passed today. After a parliamentary skirmish, a bill to charge $100 a year to persons who distribute circulars and other printed matter from door to door was killed. Neumann objected that it would be hard on neighborhood merchants. An ordinance for departmental reorganization of the Health Division was passed, after the title of the position of vital statistician had been changed to chief clerk. Alderman Lietchen (Dem.) complained that an attempt might be made to reemploy Miss Elizabeth Brezee of Albany, N. Y., as statistician. Funds for her job were eliminated last year.

JOHNSON TO REPLY TOMORROW BY RADIO TO FATHER COUGHLIN

OKMULGEE, Ok., March 29. — Gen. Hugh S. Johnson today prepared an address in reply to Father Charles E. Coughlin, to be delivered over the radio tomorrow night.

"This is going to dispose of the controversy," Johnson said.

His announcement that he was returning to Oklahoma to live gave credence to the report that he will seek the senatorship against Senator Thomas P. Gore next fall, but Johnson's answer still was "No," with the reservation that "I have the right to change my mind any time I damn please."

From Washington Gore sent a "welcome home" to Johnson.

STATE TAX VALUATION PUT AT $3,165,847,768

Commission Makes Recommendation to Equalization Board for 1935 Levy.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 29.—An assessed valuation of $3,165,847,768 for real estate and personal property in Missouri, for 1935 taxes, was recommended yesterday afternoon by the State Tax Commission in a report submitted to the State Board of Equalization.

The assessment recommended by the commission is a reduction of $52,335,988 from the final valuation fixed by the State Board of Equalization for these classes of property, for 1934 taxation. It is a decrease of $10,846,294 from proposed assessments reported to the commission for 1935, by local assessors.

The decrease, if approved by the State Board, will go to farm land and personal property. The commission recommended a reduction of $18,460,948 for farm land, and an increase of $10,106,261 for town lots, the classification covering city and town realty. This made a net reduction of $8,354,687 for realty, as compared to 1934 valuations. The personal property assessment was reduced $43,981,301, as compared to 1934.

The recommendations were as follows: Farm lands, $962,894,320, a decrease of $18,460,948 from last year. Town lots, $1,876,284,407, an increase of $10,106,261 over 1934. Personal property, $326,669,041, a reduction of $43,981,301 from last year.

After the board of equalization passes on the realty and personal property assessments, the commission later in the year will submit recommendations on the assessments for that part of the property of public utilities directly assessed by the State and for private cars operated on railroads, such as refrigerator and tank cars.

The grand total assessed valuation of all taxable property in the State was $3,825,850,628 for 1934 taxes.

WRITER INCREASES INCOME WHILE SERVING JAIL TERM

H. H. Van Loan Tells Judge He Has Sold Scenario and Several Short Stories.

LOS ANGELES, March 29.—H. H. Van Loan, writer, said today that going to jail had increased his income.

Last July, when he was sentenced to serve a year for failure to pay $50 a month alimony for the support of his 18-year-old daughter, he told Municipal Judge Crum he could not sell his writings.

After he had served 10 days, he started work on a scenario based on his own failure to produce. He interested a film company in the scenario and later it was made into a picture.

In addition, he told Judge Crum in reporting on his payments, that he had sold several short stories based on material he gathered while in jail.

"I want to thank you, Judge," he said. "I have no hard feelings."

CONVICTION IN AUTO TRUNK MURDER CASE

Man Who Took Victim's Body From Michigan to California Gets Life.

By the Associated Press.

HOWELL, Mich., March 29.—Clarence Frechette was convicted of first degree murder for the killing of his employer, Robert Brown, last night, and was immediately sentenced to life imprisonment in the Michigan State Prison.

The verdict was returned after six hours of deliberation, and Judge Joseph Collins called Frechette to the bench at once for sentence.

Outwardly unmoved by the verdict, Frechette asserted his innocense loudly before the passing of sentence.

Frechette was accused of killing Brown during a quarrel over debts. The defendant was employed by Brown in the latter's trucking business in Kalamazoo, Mich.

In his defense, Frechette said Brown was killed in a struggle for the latter's gun on the night of Jan. 29, when the two engaged in quarrel over a slurring remark Brown allegedly had made about Miss Grace Curran of Kalamazoo.

Two weeks after the killing Frechette was arrested by State Police at Nevada City, Cal. He was driving Brown's automobile, and in the rear trunk, the officers discovered the body of Brown with two bullet wounds in the head. The finding of the body was the first knowledge Howell authorities had that Brown had been killed. Brown and Frechette were last seen together on the night of Jan. 29, dining in a Howell cafe.

WANDERING GIRL, 2, SAFE

Shows Up at Texas Farm House Four Miles From Home.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Tex., March 29.—After wandering all night over the prairies while 100 men searched for her, the two-year-old daughter of W. M. Hatchell, a farmer, arrived alone yesterday at a farm house four miles from her home.

Searchers who followed her tracks estimated she walked 10 miles. The child was scratched and had a slight temperature.

FEDERAL WATERFOWL REFUGE OF 14,000 ACRES IN MONTANA

Hopkins Approves Purchase of Land Which Is Unsuitable for Farming.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Plans for the purchase of 14,640 acres of land in Beaverhead County, Montana, which will be used for a migratory waterfowl refuge were approved yesterday by Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins.

The Relief Administration is undertaking demonstrations in better utilization of land unsuited to farming. Plans for the project were drawn by the Biological Survey. The area is on one of the major flyways of the country and will be used chiefly as a resting place for migratory ducks and geese.

The Biological Survey is particularly interested in the area since it is one of the few breeding places of the trumpeter swan which is almost extinct in the United States.

After the purchase of the land has been completed officials plan improvements, including efforts to control the rainfall runoff in order to conserve the water supply. Steps will be taken to restore the natural grass on the grazing lands.

TABOR'S PAJAMAS FOUND

Garments of Late Senator Once Created Comment.

By the Associated Press.

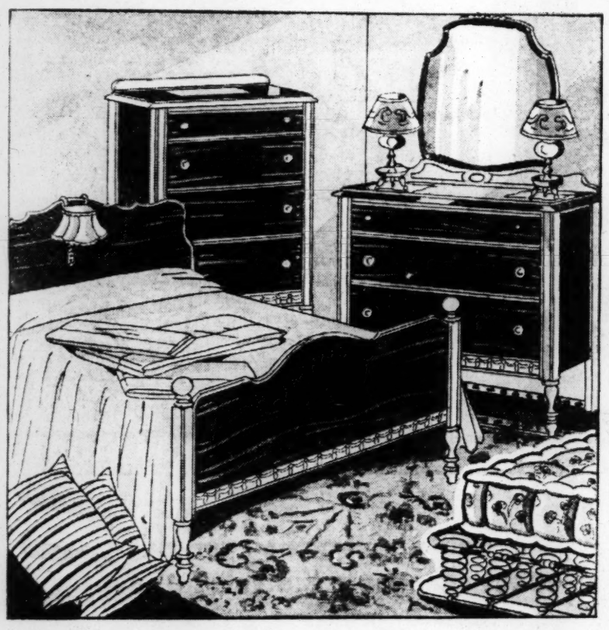

DENVER, March 29.—The striking pajamas with which H. A. W. Tabor startled the world when a night gown was the vogue in the eighties, were found yesterday among the trunks in which his widow stored the remnants of the Tabor estate.

They are of light green flannel, lavishly embroidered with designs in silver silk. Edgar McMechen, administrator of the Tabor estate, said there probably are no more famous pajamas than those of the one-time silver king, found in a weathered old trunk. Newspaper columnists commented upon them when Tabor was in the United States Senate.

BARUCH TURNED DOWN OFFER OF WARSHIP PROFIT

Financier Tells Senators Wall Street Operator Phoned Him in France of 'Lots of Business.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, told the Senate Munitions Committee today that Ben Smith, Wall Street operator, telephoned him in France in 1933 that he had reserved 5000 shares of New York Shipbuilding Corporation stock for him on the prospect of getting Government business.

Baruch, who was chairman of the World War Industries Board, explained he did not take the stock because he declined to buy into a proposition involving Government business.

The mention of Smith recalled previous committee testimony indicating Smith, co-operating with the Cord interests, had bought control of the shipbuilding company soon after President Roosevelt took office. At that time, members of the committee interpreted the transactions as indicating Smith had 'inside knowledge" of contemplated big outlays.

Contracts Were Going Out.

It was developed that the first allotment of PWA funds for shipbuilding had been made in June, 1933, while Smith's offer to sell stock to Baruch was in August at the time contracts for shipbuilding were being awarded.

"Smith called me by telephone while I was at Vichy, France," the financier said, "and told me that he had sent up 5000 shares of stock for me and added that it looked good because the Government was giving out a lot of orders and lots of business would be done."

Baruch gave the testimony under questioning by Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan. The financier explained that Smith, operating through Baruch's broker, sent 5000 shares of the stock to his New York office. The call to Vichy followed.

"I'll tell you what you can do with that stock," Baruch said he told Smith over the telephone, adding, with a smile: "And I told him."

"What I am trying to show," Vandenberg said, "is that in sales promotion the basic claim was that value was accumulating because of prospective Government orders." "I knew very little about what he was doing," Baruch responded.

"Yet you declined to have anything to do with it because it had Government connections?" the Michigan Senator pursued. Baruch agreed.

Employing the purchase of bootleg liquor as an example, Baruch, at another point, told the committee he would hold a maximum price on all products in war time by enforcing a penalty on both buyer and seller. He explained his plan this way:

"I propose to have a penalty enforced on both the buyer and the seller. I don't know whether anybody in this room ever bought bootleg liquor. I did. But if there had been a penalty on the buyer as well as the whisky maker and seller, I wouldn't have bought it."

Baruch gave his views on "price ceiling" penalties on both the buyer and seller to Alger Hiss, committee counsel.

Vandenberg suggested that another aid to enforcement would be "the entirely new psychology we are contemplating.

"Yes," said Baruch, "there's a totally different psychology today due to this committee that would make it easier to accomplish these things in the next war."

About Copper Industry.

The witness then defended the copper industry, about whose war time demands for higher prices the committee has been questioning him. "These producers never haggled over prices or amounts for the army and navy," he declared, "but the President had announced the price for the army and navy must be the price to the Allies and the civilian population."

He explained that the Allies were paying higher prices at other points for copper and that sales in this country often were to industries not subject to price regulation, as were the copper companies. "That is the reason prices were not fixed quicker," he continued, "and that is why we did not hammer harder."

Industry During War.

"Were any enterprises commandeered?" Chairman Nye (Rep.) North Dakota, asked. "No, but we threatened to."

He added that such a threat, coupled with knowledge that thousands of men were "going across the water," brought the steel industry to agreement on prices after preliminary discord.

"If you had commandeered United States Steel,' asked Hiss, "what would you have done?" "I would have been in a bad fix. When they understood what had to be met, they came through splendidly. No greater compliment was ever paid than the one by Von Hindenberg when he said 'American industry knew how to make war.' "

Baruch said "one tough steel fellow," after a stay in Washington, in which he grasped the problems presented by the war, offered to sell steel at cost, saying "we've made enough already."

"Don't get the impression the American business man was a hard-hearted fellow," Baruch added. "As soon as his friends and sons started going across the water, he came through, too."

Government Priority.

Hiss contended Baruch's plan for putting a "ceiling" over prices in war time would not check profits. "What I know is based on what we had to meet in war," Baruch said.

"If prices were fixed by a ceiling so low that industry considered it more profitable to sell to the civilian population," Hiss asked, "wouldn't industry sell to them rather than to the Government." Baruch suggested a law should be passed giving the Government "priority." He added: "Priority is one of the most important elements. You can enforce prices adn you can get industries to come along in other ways with a threat to shut off their supply of coal or raw materials, or put them way down on the list of transportation."

Baruch then insisted that the plan to put a "ceiling" on prices, coupled with broad Government power ot fix priorities of deliveries from industry, would serve to curb profits and at the same time would insure a steady output of commodities needed by the war.

Hiss said some questions raised during the war were still pending, including a suit against the Aluminum Co. of America. Baruch said: "If we have to have a constitutional amendment (in connection with enforcement of price-fixing and elimination of war profits), all right, but I'm opposed to it if we don't need it."

Chairman Nye disclosed meantime that he was ready to offer tentative bills providing that the United States plan to keep out of any future war among other Powers by restricting foreign travel of Americans, trade with belligerents and foreign loans.

QUICK AGREEMENT LIKELY ON REPEAL OF TAX PUBLICITY

U. S. House Expected to Accept Senate Amendment to Bill Which Eliminates 'Pink Slips.'

CONFEREES MAY NOT HAVE TO ACT

Change Voted in Upper Chamber Would Open Returns to State and Local Officials.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Senate voted yesterday afternoon to repeal the "pink slip" provision for publicity, on income taxes. The vote was 53 to 16.

The Senate voted not to open the pink slips already filed to public inspection, but amended the repealer as it came from the House so as to permit State and local tax officials to inspect the returns. This amendment sent the measure back to the House, which is expected to vote for a conference.

An agreement seems assured and officials said there was little doubt President Roosevelt would sign the repealer, as the old law permits him to make returns public at his discretion.

Ten Republicans and 43 Democrats voted to repeal the publicity law. La Follette (Prog.), Wisconsin, was joined by five Republicans and 10 Democrats in opposing repeal.

Revenue Proposal Thrown Out.

The way for the final vote was cleared by a Senate ballot which held an amendment by La Follette to raise income taxes by $275,000,000 out of order.

Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, raised the point of order, maintaining that La Follette's amendment was in conflict with the constitutional provision that revenue measures should originate in the House. Vice-President Garner refused to rule on the constitutional question and submitted it to the Senate, which settled the issue without a record vote.

During the discussion, Harrison said that "sooner or later we might have to pass a revenue bill to raise taxes or extend the taxes that expire June 30," and that would be the proper time for consideration of La Follette's proposal.

The amendment to permit State and local officials to inspect the returns was proposed by Senator Costigan (Dem.), Colorado.

Flurry Over Conferees.

A flurry over the appointment of conferees followed the announcement of the vote. Chairman Harrison of the Finance Committee moved to ask the House for a conference and appoint conferees. La Follette objected, saying the House might adopt the Senate amendment without a conference. Finally, however, the motion carried and Garner appointed Harrison, King of Utah and George of Georgia as the Democrats and Couzens of Michigan and Keyes of New Hampshire as the Republicans.

Couzens immediately resigned as a conferee, saying sharply he was not "in sympathy" with the bill and felt it was "unusual procedure" for the Senate to ask for a conference in advance.

Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, took issue with this statement and was backed by Garner.

Couzens insisted on his resignation, however, and Garner named La Follette to substitute. He also resigned "for the same reason" offered by Couzens. The Vice-President then named Metcalf (Rep.), Rhode Island.

Roll Call on Repeal.

The roll call on the repeal bill follows:

MRS. SIMS WITH ONE TRUMP MAKES SLAM

Bids One Club and Husband Raises It to Seven on Freak Hand.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 29.—One freak hand and the simple but astounding way P. Hal and Dorothy Sims bid it was the subject of much controversy today as the Culbertson-Sims bridge match of 150 rubbers swung into its eighth session and twenty-ninth rubber with Ely and Josephine Culbertson 2530 points ahead.

"One club," said Mrs. Sims, with the jack the only club in her hand. (Mrs. Sims is noted for her psychics.)

"Pass," was all Culbertson had to say.

"Seven clubs," said Sims, slowly but without hesitation.

Culbertson, startled, glanced at his bulky opponent.

Mrs. Culbertson, smiling slightly, passed.

Mrs. Sims did, too. She was tense and apparently dismayed.

"By the way, Hal," queried Culbertson, arching his eyebrows, "is this contract bridge we are playing?"

Sims thought a moment and chuckled.

"I was under the impression it might be pinochle," he answered.

Culbertson opened with the club deuce.

Sims flipped eight clubs onto the table, including the ace, king and queen.

Trick With Jack.

Mrs. Sims took the trick with her jack.

She went ahead to play the hand neatly, avoiding a heart finesse which she could not afford to risk, although it would have succeeded.

She returned a small diamond, trumped in dummy, which was blank in diamonds and then captured the remaining trumps, discarding a spade herself on the second trump lead.

Two more rounds of diamonds picked up Culbertson's queen, making her jack good.

Culbertson was incensed.

"I still don't believe there is such a bid in any system," he said. "Even the Sims system. One club—seven clubs. Bah!"

Sims nodded agreement.

"I agree heartily with you, Ely," he said.

The Culbertsons have won 15 of the 28 rubbers played. The count of aces and kings has been: Culbertson, 374 acres and 373 kings; Simses, 398 acres and 399 kings.

Until the twenty-eighth rubber, in which they made the grand slam, Sims and his wife trailed by 5500 points. They picked up 2970 points on the rubber to cut the Culbertson advantage to 2530. There was only an afternoon session yesterday.

Discussing the grand slam hand, the first of the match, some of the Manhattan experts pointed out that in the Sims system a "one club" bid doesn't necessarily mean strength in clubs, only a strong hand.

New Culbertson Convention.

The Culbertsons introduced a new convention with this hand:

North (Mrs. Culbertson)
♠Q 3
♥10 9 4 3
♦J 9 5 4 3
♣5 2

West (Sims)	NORTH	East (Mrs. Sims)
♠10 9 8 5	WEST EAST	♠A K 7 4 2
♥6 2		♥Q 7
♦8 7 2	SOUTH	♦10
♣10 7 4 3		♣Q J 9 8 6

South (Culbertson)
♠J 6
♥A K J 8 5
♦A K Q 6
♣A K

West dealer. North-South vulnerable. The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 C	2 C
Pass	2 D	2 S	3 H
Pass	4 H	Pass	4 S
Pass	5 H	Pass	Pass
Pass

Culbertson described the four-spade bid as a new convention of his, designed to obtain a cue bid from his partner. Had Mrs. Culbertson had a singleton or king-small in spades, she would have responded with four no trump and then her husband would have bid six diamonds. Had she the ace or a blank in spades, she should have bid five spades.

Having neither, she went to five hearts. Culbertson fulfilled the contract.

A. F. OF L. WANTS TO GIVE THE NRA FURTHER TRIAL

President William Green Speaks Before Senate Committee in Favor of Two-Year Extension.

FAVORS BLACK BILL FOR 30-HOUR WEEK

Thinks This Reduction, With Maintaining of Pay, Would Make Program Fully Effective.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Extension of the National Industrial Recovery Act for two years received its strongest political support today when President William Green of the American Federation of Labor told the Senate Finance Committee that organized labor wanted to give the NRA further trial.

Green, however, disagreed with Donald R. Richberg and other NRA officials who have testified before the committee. He insisted that section 7-A should be made the "law of the land" and demanded that the service industries remain under the codes.

"We have not put all of the unemployed back to work," Green said, "but the program we have initiated under the NRA is capable of bringing about complete employment, providing Congress passes the Black 30-hour week bill and its flexible provisions for a six-hour day. We need only to reduce further the working hours, while maintaining earnings, to make the recovery program fully effective."

Four Recommendations.

Green testified the four following recommendations had the support of organized labor:

1. That section 7-A, which provides for collective bargaining, be retained and that it become the law of the land without regard to whether or not it may be incorporated in industrial codes of fair practice.

2. That provisions for the regulation of child labor, the establishment of minimum rates of pay and maximum hours be retained.

3. That provision for the elimination of unfair trade practices be made.

4. That the new NRA be broadened in its scope, so as to provide for appropriate labor representation on all code authorities and equal representation with industry in the administration of the Recovery Act.

"I shall not today attempt," he said, "any discussion of the changes which labor would like to see in the NRA when a new NRA bill is submitted. I shall hope for an opportunity to make specific recommendations as to the form the law should take."

Green Asked to Make Choice.

Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, caused a stir among the spectators, most of whom were NRA employes or representatives of labor and industry, when he asked Green point blank whether, if he had only one choice, he would select the Black 30-hour week bill or extension of the NIRA. Some persons thought that Harrison was showing lukewarm support of the NRA.

Green replied that there was no reason for him to make a choice as organized labor was asking for both measures.

"One," he said, "is needed as badly as the other."

Green admitted that organized labor had been disappointed with the working out of NRA and seemed particularly bitter over the fact that labor had not received equal representation with industry on the code authorities. He insisted that if there had been this equal representation there would have been less difficulty over compliance.

Fault of NRA, Green Says.

Asked by Senator Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, why labor had not received equal representation on the code authorities, Green replied that this had been the fault of the Recovery Administration.

"I shall not pretend," he continued, "that labor has received the benefits which were intended from section 7-A. Many employers, who is their distress agreed to the principles of self-organization and collective bargaining, failed to keep their promises as soon as they found themselves in possession of the rights conferred upon them by NRA. The principle of collective bargaining has never been generally accepted by American industry. Yet organization of the workers and genuine collective bargaining is essential."

Couzens interrupted to ask why unionization had proceeded so slowly in the country.

"Because it has had the most vicious opposition of the employers any movement has received," Green answered.

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, asked Green whether he favored forcing a worker to join an American Federation of Labor union before he could get a job; in other words, whether Green favored compulsory closed shops.

"I don't know where you got that impression," Green replied. "I am in favor of letting the workers make their own choice of an organization, whether it is a company union, a plant union or an American Federation of Labor union. All I want is free choice by the workers."

Plea for Wagner Bill.

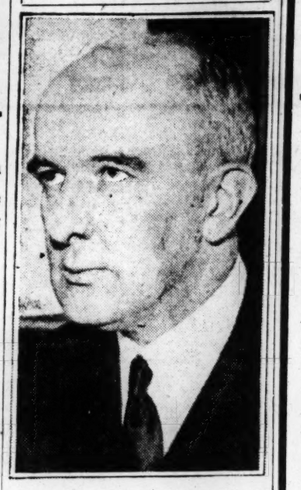

Green used his appearance before the Finance Committee to urge the enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill as well as the Black 30-hour week bill.

"I wish to emphasize," he said, "that the NRA is the first step in the establishment of real collective bargaining. As such it must not be underestimated; as such it has served a great purpose.

"The NRA has given millions of workers the legal right and the courage to organize for the first time in their lives. It has made them feel free men for the first time in their lives. They will not see that right taken from them without a struggle. On this most important phase of the new economic order instituted by the NRA we need now to take the second step. We need to strengthen and clarify the collective bargaining provisions of the act. I have already urged that this can best be done by a Federal statute, as proposed by the Wagner labor disputes bill. A Federal statute will extend the self-organization and collective bargaining provisions of the recovery program to all employes. Collective bargaining must not be looked upon as an emergency measure only. It must become a basic part of the changed economic order which is our ultimate aim."

Green said that it was not in his province to discuss the legal phases for the protection of workers in the service trades and other seemingly purely intrastate industries, adding, however, that it was his firm conviction that some method "can and must be found whereby they shall be covered by codes."

3 YOUTHS ADMIT EXTORTION ATTEMPT; PAROLE LIKELY

Federal Judge Davis Sentences Them to 5 Years Each but Indicates They Won't Serve.

Three youths who attempted to extort $60 last November from Stanley Stokes, assistant to the vice-president of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., and were trapped by Mrs. Stokes, pleaded guilty today in Federal Court of violation of the Cochran act. They were sentenced to five years in the Federal reformatory by Judge Davis, wh osaid he would "probably parole them."

Those sentenced were Stanley Gierczak, 18 years old; Edward Raczynski, 17, and John Slawski, 22.

"What you need more than anything else is a good spanking," the Court told them. "I am personally incensed by these cases, particularly one of this kind, where these boys singled out a stranger and made a demand for money. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stokes have talked to me about the case and neither of them thinks punishment should be severe."

Counsel for the defendants told the Court the extortion letter had been "just a crazy prank," that the Stokes' name had been taken from the telephone directory at random.

IDENTIFIED BY TWO AS KILLER OF MORRIS, ILL., POLICE CHIEF

Suspect Held in Chicago Was One of Three Robbers, Witnesses Say.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Two witnesses have identified Louis Lutz, 30 years old, as the killer of Assistant Police Chief George Roseland of Morris, Ill., who was shot and killed on Feb. 4 by three robbers fleeing after a robbery.

The witnesses were William Cabel, proprietor of the general store where the robbery occurred, and Cabel's clerk, Miss Merle Ward, 19. They viewed Lutz in his cell here. Lutz denied any connection with the crime.

The robbers obtained $75 in the holdup. Cabel followed them from the store, shouting an alarm. Roseland, standing across the street, opened fire on the three as they climbed into their car. A return volley from the robbers' guns fatally wounded Roseland.

GRAND JURY URGES DRIVERS' LICENSE BILL ENACTMENT

Drunken Motorists Are Greater Menace Than Wild Animals in Street, It Comments.

Drunken drivers are a greater menace in the streets than wild animals would be, the February grand jury says in its final report, filed today with Circuit Judge William S. Connor. The grand jury recommends that the Legislature enact a driver's license law.

The grand jury discusses also the bail bond evil, and recommends enactment of the pending House bill 449, to create the office of Bail Commissioner for St. Louis.

"For the year 1934," the grand jury says, "the Coroner's records disclose that of all deaths due to acts of violence, 40 per cent were due to automobiles. The list of injuries not resulting in death, entailing suffering, loss of earning power and expenses for treatment, has been and is very great.

"The present safety campaign, sponsored and organized by the Mayor, should be supported in every possible way. A certain percentage of these casualties may be charged to the carelessness of pedestrians, crossing streets in the middle of the block, failing to observe approaching traffic, and disregarding signs and signals placed for their protection.

"A heavy percentage of the remaining cases is shown to be due to drivers under the influence of intoxicating liquor who, in our opinion, are a more deadly menace on the highways than an equal number of wild animals turned loose in the streets. The arrest and vigorous prosecution of all such drivers, as well as the so-called 'hit-and-run' drivers who leave the scene of collision or accident without giving their names and addresses to their victims or to the police, is strongly urged. We heartily approve the recent agreement entered into between the Circuit Attorney and the City Counselor that in the future all cases involving intoxicated and 'hit-and-run' drivers shall be prosecuted in the Circuit Court as felonies."

Erastus Wells, vice-president of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., was foreman of the February grand jury, which returned 42 true bills and found no true bills in 11 cases submitted to it. The grand jury reported briefly on its inspection of the Police Department, City Jail and Bellefontaine Farms.

STRACHEY CANCELS PASSAGE PENDING DEPORTATION FINDING

Says at Boston That Father Coughlin May "Play Goebbels to Long's Hitler."

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, March 29.—John Strachey, English writer, wound up his American lecture tour last night with a speech here in which he said Fascism was "the only serious danger confronting the United States."

Earlier in the day he had canceled his passage on the Berengaria, which he had planned to take to England today. He said he would stay in the United States to await the outcome of charges made against him by immigration officials who seek to deport him on the ground that he advocates overthrow of Government by force.

Strachey told his audience last night that the activities of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and Senator Huey Long were essentially Fascist in character. Long's program he called the "more powerful" of the two, and he thought it possible that "Father Coughlin would be forced, however unwillingly, to play Goebbels to Long's Hitler." He referred to the German Minister of Propaganda, Paul Goebbels.

NRLB SAYS LAWN MOWER FIRM VIOLATED SECTION 7A OF NRA

Holds Indiana Company Discriminated Against Nine Employes With Union Affiliations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The F. and N. Lawn Mower Co., Richmond, Ind., was held by the National Labor Relations Board yesterday to have violated Section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery Act, through interference with self-organization of its employes.

The board said that the company discriminated against nine of its employes of known union affiliations, in refusing to give them employment after a seasonal layoff. The board's announcement said the record shows that the men were refused employment "'had long and satisfactory shop experience."

It added that "men of less experience were taken on in their places, and that the list of those not taken back was drawn up by higher officials of the company against the protests of shop foremen.

The announcement of the board said the decision was made on the record, after the company failed to make an appearance. The board ordered reinstatement with back pay of the nine members of the International Association of Machinists, and the two members of the Federal Lawn Mower Workers Union, on whose complaints the hearings were held.

LAMSON'S DIVORCEE FRIEND 'ONLY HIS WORK MATE'

Flowers He Sent Her Had "No Significance Whatsoever," She Testifies.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JOSE, Cal., March 29.—Sara Kelley, Sacramento divorcee, and David A. Lamson, on trial, charged with killing his wife, were workmates and not playmates, the former Mrs. Kelley, now Mrs. Neil Simonds, insisted under cross-examination yesterday.

The principal witness for the defense, who did not appear in Lamson's first trial, underwent searching questioning by Deputy State's Attorney Allan Lindsay. She insisted she had not been intimate with the former Stanford University press executive.

The poetry she wrote was sent to Lamson for criticism, she testified. Many of the meals she ate in his company she paid for herself, she said. She denied Lamson bought her lingerie; she denied she was away from Sacramento May 29 or 30, 1933—the latter being the date of Mrs. Lamson's death—and asserted the fact Lamson had sent her flowers half a dozen times had "no significance whatsoever."

New Liner's Bow Shaped for Speed

ALTHOUGH all large ships built in recent years have "bulbous" prows, Cunard-White Star marine designers have decided to retain the "knife-edge" on the British super-liner Queen-Mary. It was the latter design that enabled the Mauretania to hold the trans-Atlantic record for 22 years. The Queen-Mary, being completed at Clydebank, Scotland, is expected to be ready for service in 1936.

ESCAPED CONVICT GIVES UP, 'TIRED OF WANDERING'

Jeff Leuallan, Under 20-Year Sentence, Broke Out of Marshall (Mo.) Jail in 1932.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 29.—Tired, he said, of "wandering around," Jeff Leuallen, 30 years old, surrendered at the State penitentiary here yesterday to serve a 20-year sentence.

Leuallen escaped from the Saline County jail at Marshall, May 26, 1932, and since had "wandered around," spending most of the time in Arkansas where, he said, he once was employed as a driver of a school bus.

He was sentenced to the penitentiary from Saline County, Jan. 21, 1932, for robbery and burglary. After being received, he was taken to Marshall on a writ and while held there escaped from jail.

Columbia U. Paper Suspended.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Spectator, publication at Columbia University, did not appear on the campus today. The publication of the paper was suspended yesterday by the student governing board, which branded its editorial policies as "dictatorial, tyrranical and representative of a too radical viewpoint."

FLOODS SAVE FISH IN MID-WEST RIVERS

Overflow Provides Ideal Breeding Grounds and Offsets Drouth Damage.

Recent heavy rains, which caused premature spring floods in Mississippi River tributaries, have been the salvation of fishing, having largely offset the destructive effects of the drouth of last summer, when breeding was prevented and millions of fish were killed by evaporation of lakes and sloughs, Dr. A. E. Rives, supervisor of hatcheries for the East St. Louis Park District, said today.

High waters which flooded large sections of Illinois and Missouri washed many fish from rivers into adjacent lakes and sloughs, Dr. Rives said. There, and in large areas of flooded land, fish have found ideal breeding grounds where they have spawned copiously and where the young have grown rapidly with the abundance of food.

Thanks to these premature floods, Dr. Rives said, fish were enabled to begin spawning early in the season over an extensive area. Had the floods not occurred, fish in the rivers would have had to deliver their spawn in the swift currents where most of the eggs would have been lost. Fish which bred in the lakes where they were placed by floods of year before last would have suffered from restricted food and feeding grounds, and the result would have been a serious shortage of young stock.

When the regular spring high waters arrived in May and June, Dr. Rives explained, fish born in these inundated areas will have attained a size where they must leave their breeding grounds to seek a larger habitat. The scheduled floods will flush these grounds, he said, relieving congestion, delivering a new stock of breeding fish, and allowing the young to escape into rivers and other lakes where food is more plentiful.

Had the usual breeding schedule been followed this year, fish washed into lakes and sloughs by the May and June high waters would have waited till next spring to spawn again, and their young would not have been large enough to catch for three or four years, Dr. Rives said. Catches this spring and summer would have been discouragingly lean.

Game wardens report that Horseshoe, Indian and Pittsburg lakes on the East Side are teeming with fish. Game fish such as the sunfish, the bass, the crappie and the pike and rough fish such as the catfish, the buffalo, the carp and the grinnel abound in all lakes into which the rivers recently overflowed.

MRS. ROOSEVELT FAVORS EMPLOYMENT FIELD SURVEY

NEW YORK, March 29.—Advocating greater attention to surveys of the employment field so young people may find jobs, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared yesterday that it was a mistake to allow newcomers to be trained for already overcrowded professions.

Mrs. Roosevelt opened a discussion on the topic "should schools and colleges fit girls to jobs?" at the career conference of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations. "I think you will agree with me when I say that the great majority or girls today are going to have to earn their own living," she said.

Commenting on the necessity of many married women returning to wage-earning, she added: "It makes one wonder why some of them ever leave their jobs and get out of practice."

MISSOURI HOUSE PASSES LIQUOR BILL, 121 TO 6

Measure Revising Control Law Must Go Back to Senate for Agreement on 22 Amendments.

By BOYD F. CARROLL,
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 29.—The Senate liquor control bill, revising the present State control law and providing additional enforcement facilities, was passed by the House late yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 121 to 6.

The bill must be returned to the Senate for concurrence in the 22 amendments adopted by the House, few of which made any material changes in the measure, as passed by the Senate. The House considered a total of 56 proposed amendments to the bill, which has been pending for passage for a week.

Beer Bill Up Again Today.

The House, in a night session, took up the Senate bill revising the 3.2 per cent beer law, for action on passage but the bill was laid over until today, after the House adopted an amendment prohibiting sales of 3.2 beer on Sunday.

When the 3.2 per cent bill was called up today for consideration of further amendments, Democratic majority floor leader Hamlin requested that it be laid over until next week. The House then set it for a special order of business Wednesday morning. The postponement was requested when it appeared the House might not get a final vote today on passage of the bill. Many members are leaving today, to be away until Wednesday because of municipal elections in their home towns on Tuesday. No House session will be held tomorrow and only a brief session will be held Monday afternoon.

The Sunday closing amendment, offered by Representative Jones of Saline County, was adopted yesterday by a vote of 54 to 45, later was reconsidered, and then was adopted a second time by a vote of 61 to 49. It was adopted as a substitute for a House Criminal Justice Committee amendment which would have given the City Councils or Boards of Aldermen of cities, towns and villages the power to prescribe, by ordinance, whether establishments licensed to sell 3.2 beer could remain open on Sunday. The bill, as passed by the Senate, retained the provisions of the present 3.2 bill authorizing sales of such beer on Sunday.

Local Option Voted Down.

The House defeated, by a vote of 76 to 49, a local option amendment to the liquor bill offered by Representatives Ryan of Webster County and Armstrong of Greene County. This amendment would have authorized any county to vote on the question of whether sale of intoxicating liquor in the original package would be permitted, on petition of one-fifth of the voters in the county.

The amendment would have permitted the rural section of a county containing a city with more than 2,000 population, to vote on local option without the city participating.

Under the present law original package sales are permitted in all cities, towns and villages of more than 500 population. Sale by the drink now is authorized in cities of more than 20,000 population, and cities and towns with a population between 500 and 20,000 may vote on the question of whether sale of intoxicating liquor by the drink will be permitted.

Another local option amendment, by Representative Hudson of Gentry County, would have made all counties with less than 100,000 population dry, until the counties voted to authorize the sale of liquor. It was beaten without a record vote.

Additional Fee Aimed at Hotels.

Among the amendments adopted was one requiring the payment of an additional State license fee of $25 a year for each additional bar, other than the first, operated on the same premises. The amendment was directed against hotels now operating more than one bar, under one license.

Browns Display Power In Beating Buffalo, 7-3; 10th Victory in South

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 29.—Only three more days in camp for the Browns before they start northward. They're back at practice today and will close their series with Buffalo tomorrow and Sunday to wind up five weeks at this camp. So far they have won three out of four from Ray Schalk's Bisons, thanks to yesterday's 7-to-3 victory at Fort Lauderdale.

Manager Hornsby, who remained here to superintend a lengthy practice for most of his regular pitchers yesterday, was happy to hear of the late punch exhibited in the game by his revamped batting order.

Trailing, 1-0, for six innings, six of the eight Brownie regulars, excluding the pitcher, hit safely in the seventh and eighth innings to produce seven runs and to close the game with a total of 14 hits for the team, which is its second highest hit-total of the spring season. The Browns topped 14 only against the House of David team when they totaled 15 hits.

Clift's Hitting.

Hornsby was highly pleased to learn of Clift's work as a third place batter. Heretofore, Harland has been leading off, but Rog decided that since Clift is continuing to slug the ball as he did in 1934, he would work more havoc against opposing pitchers as a third-place hitter than as lead-off man.

Clift hit two doubles in his new role. The first was wasted after it opened the sixth inning, but when Harland strode to the plate in the seventh, the Browns had thrse men on base with two out and one run needed to tie. Here was the moment for the third sacker to prove he was able to dish it out in a clinch. Nor did he falter. A long double to left center was his contribution.

The punch drove in three runs and inspired the Browns with the necessary confidence to come back with four more in the eighth, after the Bisons had tied the score in their seventh.

Five of the Browns collected two hits or more in the new arrangement, Pepper and Hemsley each singled three times, Clift, West and Strange getting two hits apiece. The only regular batter to fail was Beau Bell.

Hemsley has been on such a rampage in his last three games that he has accumulated nine hits in 12 times at bat. Clift, in his last two games, has made five hits in eight trips to the plate. It was the seven blows these two gathered last Tuesday that enabled the Browns to win, 4 to 3, from Buffalo.

Thomas Shows Well.

Another pleasing part of yesterday's game was the pitching of Fay Thomas. Hornsby is grooming the ex-Coast League righthander for regular starting duty in the American League, so he was tickled to hear that Fay held the Bisons to three hits and one run in six innings. The big blond had his forkball under such puzzling control that he hung up six strikeouts and kept the Bisons away from third base, except in the second inning, when a double and a single spelled a run.

The other two Buffalo tallies were combed off Jack Knott in the seventh on a home run by a young fellow named McFarland, following a single. However, the Bisons did not get to second base on Knott in the final two rounds.

The Browns now have won 10 out of their first 12 exhibition games. They have five more slated before their spring series with the Cardinals, for after meeting Buffalo twice more here, they engage Baltimore at Kissimmee, Fla., next Monday, and Brooklyn at Orlando, Fla., next Tuesday and Wednesday, after which they entrain for St. Louis.

The Passing Show.

THE Tigers landed on the ball
And Dizzy Dean and Brother Paul
Were blasted from the hill.
It was an exhibition game
That didn't count, but just the same
It was a bitter pill.

On them the Tigers trained their guns
And thirteen hits and thirteen runs
They garnered off the twain.
In fact, so total was the wreck
A most decided pain.

Bob Quinn, in no uncertain tone,
Denies he waived on Pat Malone,
Who to the Yanks was sent.
Just how he came to get away
Bob doesn't know, but others say
By subway Patrick went.

And on the fruit trees put a blight
That nipped them in a trice.

Looks Like Worst Division.

Branch Rickey, the master mathematician, says subtraction is the keynote of baseball. Quite so. Take nothing from nothing and nothing remains. Sam Breadon was so sold on the idea that he said he might subtract the Cardinals from St. Louis and add them to Detroit.

However, the law of average still holds good. And you can't get a guy's average by subtraction on any man's abacus.

But even in the matter of subtraction Pat Malone didn't fare so badly last year. When you subtract 7 losing games from 21, it gives you 14 victories which is pretty good going in any man's league.

If Pat can do that well for the Yankees, not only will Marse Joe be highly pleased but he would probably wink at an occasional deviation from the s. and n.

But why worry about spilled milk or addled eggs as long as the cows and chickens are always a couple of jumps ahead of the demand.

I came away as wise as when I went.

Yankees a Better Club Without Ruth, Writers Say

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 29.—Baseball fans in the Grapefruit League are still talking about the American League's folly in letting Babe Ruth, the game's most colorful player of all time, move over to the National League, but the Yankees are playing with a new spirit since the great slugger departed and baseball writers covering the Yankees' training camp activities are unanimous in the statement that it was the best thing that ever happened to the team since the Babe was bought from the Boston Red Sox.

Joe McCarthy's team met the Cardinals yesterday afternoon at Bradenton and defeated the world champions with ease, 9 to 2. Johnny Broaca and Vito Tamulis held the Redbirds to five hits and the Yankees looked like powerful contenders for the American League flag.

Detroit and New York.

The Cardinals have met the Athletics, Red Sox, Yankees and Tigers and it is easy to visualize a two-club race for the American League flag between the Tigers and the Yankees. The Athletics will cause trouble. Connie Mack has a well-balanced team, but the Yankees and Tigers seem to be standouts.

George Selkirk, a fleet-footed outfielder whose baseball life was miserable while he had Babe Ruth for a teammate, seems to have arrived as a great outfielder and batter and is expected to make the Yankees and New York American League fans glad that Babe Ruth is no longer in right field.

Selkirk is a Rochester boy. He broke in with the Rochester club, but it was his home town and home-town folks are not always kind. Selkirk was green. He made mistakes. The home-town fans jeered him and he went to pieces. He came up with Newark and was shifted to Jersey City. The big park there got his goat and his batting average sagged. Newark got him again and the manager of the club didn't like George. He loaned him to Rochester, and in the play-off series, for the right to represent the International League in the little world series, he played a prominent part in beating the club that owned him.

The manager who didn't like him was fired and last fall Selkirk got his chance when Earl Combs suffered a skull fracture. He made good with a bang, stood up even under the prodding and razzing from Babe Ruth and the Bambino's cronies—according to the story told by the New York writers— and this year is the regular right fielder.

Selkirk Is Fast.

"Watch him run," a New York scribe told the writer yesterday afternoon as the game with the Cardinals started. "He runs on his toes. They call him 'twinkle toes' and how he can go."

Selkirk did some going, too. He hit a home run against the right field fence his first time at bat, doubled to left the next time and added two singles before the game ended. Before the contest, in batting practice, he hit a line drive over the centerfield fence, the first time anyone has accomplished the feat.

"It is a different club since Ruth left," the New York writers explained. "Ruth was a great hitter, a great showman. We grant all that. And baseball owed him plenty. But the Yankees have been paying through the nose for a long time. There were cliques on the club—those for and against Ruth. He openly asked for McCarthy's job. He yelled criticism from right field when pitchers were being batted hard or being switched. It is a different ball club now. They are pulling together and the club is good enough to win.

"Watch the Braves. Buck Jordan, the first baseman, has gone home already because Ruth wants to play first. There are other holdouts. The Braves won't go anywhere and their only profit will be at the gate and how long will that last?"

Chapman, Selkirk and Walker are likely to be the regular Yankee outfielders. Jesse Hill has been playing left field, but Walker is doing so well that most of the writers concede him an edge in the contest for the job. Gehrig, Heffner, Crosetti and Rolfe are the infied favorites and the combination looked good against the Cardinals.

The catching will be good enough with Dickey, Jorgens and Glenn likely to be carried through the year.

Four Regular Hurlers.

Broaca, Gomez, Ruffing and Malone are slated as four of the regular starters and the pitching staff is considered good enough. There are reserves for all departments and Joe McCarthy is happier with his prospect than he has been for years.

Col. Jake Ruppert, president of the Yankees, made the trip from St. Petersburg with his team and said that with his chain-store system working smoothly now, he expected the Yankees to be not worse than one-two for years to come. He says the system, fashioned after the one built for the Cardinals by Branch Rickey, is functioning so smoothly that he doesn't expect to have to buy any players ever again.

Meantime Frankie Frisch is not feeling any too good about his Cardinals. They have won only six while losing nine spring exhibition games. The pitching has not been good and the team has not shown a satisfactory punch. Martin and Medwick are the only players displaying enough to satisfy Fordham Frankie.

"Shucks," said Frisch yesterday afternoon, when a New York writer told him the Cardinals ought to win by seven games, "I'm hoping that we can finish in the first division."

Of course, that is the most pessimistic view possible, but nevertheless, Frisch is not pleased.

That Winning Habit.

"This is a good time to form the winning habit," he explained. "It is too easy to get into a losing rut. The more I see this spring, the more I realize that we have a tough season ahead of us. We must improve tremendously to go important places in the National League race."

FIELD ARTILLERY TEAM IN POLO EVENT FINAL

NEW YORK, March 29.—The 110th Field Artillery team of Pikesville, Md., defeated the First Division trio, 5 to 4, last night to reach the final of the Sherman Memorial Cup polo tournament. The winners will meet Squadron A's low goal representatives in the final Saturday. Squadron A defeated Boulderbrook last night, 13-7.

The field artillery had a handicap allowance of three goals and protected this advantage by fine defensive work. A series of fouls cost First Division a possible victory in the last chukker.

RUNYAN HOLDS PINEHURST GOLF LEAD WITH 208 AFTER 54 HOLES

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 29.—Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., turned in 208 today to lead the North and South open golf field after 54 holes.

The P. G. A. champion clipped off a 72 for his third round while Byron Nelson of Texarkana, Tex., who was three strokes behind him after 36 holes slipper to a 76 for a total of 215.

Walter Hagen of Detroit, who barely qualified for the final day's play with 154, withdrew this morning from the tournament.

With one round remaining, Runyan had a lead of five strokes in the chase for the $1000 first prize money of the $4000 tournament.

Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, annexed second place as Nelson encountered a bad round. Mangrum's total was 213 with a 73 for the morning. Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., defending titleholder, pulled himself near the top with a 70 for an aggregate of 214.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK AMATEUR BOXERS MEET

CHICAGO, March 29. — New York's amateur champions and a squad of Mid-Western battlers representing Chicago, will clash tonight at the Stadium in the eighth annual inter-city Golden Gloves bouts before a capacity attendance of 22,000 spectators.

In the seven previous meetings, each city has won three times while one set of battles ended in a deadlock. The New York team, fighting on its home grounds, won last year, nine bouts to seven.

Yankees Release Two.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Cutting of the New York Yankees' squad has begun with the release of Pitchers Howard (Red) Laflamme and Mike Salinsensen to the Newark Bears. Jesse Hill appears to have won a major league berth, and the signing of Dixie Walker to a regular contract indicated Outfielder Myril Hoag may be the next to go.

TRAINING CAMP NOTES

By the Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., March 29. — George Earnshaw, whose goal this season is 20 pitching victories—10 of which would be worth $500 each under the terms of his bonus contract with the Chicago White Sox—is working overtime to master a trade secret whispered to him by Waite Hoyt of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The new baffler is called the "slider." Hoyt learned it from Heine Meine, and it worked so well that he led the Pirate pitchers last season. Earnshaw tried it for the first time in actual combat yesterday as he held the Pirates to three hits in four innings.

Crowder Is Bombarded.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Mickey Cochrane's hopes that Alvin Crowder would be ready for a regular pitching assignment in April were slightly jarred yesterday. The Brooklyn Dodgers drove Crowder out of the box with a 12-hit attack in the first five innings and went on to sweep the four-game series with Detroit, 9 to 5. Eldon Auker, who will be one of Cochrane's best pitching bets this year, has seen little early season service.

Reds Release Blakely.

TAMPA, Fla.—Further assignment of rookie material marked the return of the Cincinnati Reds to their home lot today, after feeling the war clubs of the Boston Braves, in St. Petersburg, yesterday, to the tune of 5 to 2. Blakely, who has been shooting for an outfield post, will go back to Toronto for another season, while Ted Petrosky is due for a berth either with Fort Worth, or Wilmington, Manager Chuck Dressen indicated.

Berger's Triple Wins Game.

NEW ORLEANS.—Boze Berger, the Indians' new second baseman, came through with a triple in the tenth inning of yesterday's game with the Giants to win the contest for Cleveland, 5 to 4.

Giants' Pitchers Ready.

MOBILE, Ala.—The New York Giants' pitching "big four" seems as effective as ever this year. In 68 innings hurled by Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, Freddy Fitzsimmons and Roy Parmelee, the opposition has been held to less than 1½ earned runs for each nine stanzas, a pennant-winning figure in any league.

FLYERS ROUT TULSA, 6 TO 1, WIN HOCKEY LEAGUE TITLE

PALANGIO AND PADDON GET 4 OF ST. LOUIS TEAM'S POINTS

No Inter-League Games to Be Played At Winter Garden

TULSA, March 29.

W. F. GRANT, president of the American Hockey Association, announced here last night that all games of the inter-league series between St. Louis and St. Paul of the Central League will be played in Minnesota. His announcements followed conferences with St. Louis players at which, he said, they protested against playing on the Winter Garden rink in St. Louis because of its smallness.

The inter-league series between St. Paul and the winner of the American Association play-off will open April 2 on a three-our-of-five game series. The Central League clubs, President Grant said, have declined to play on the St. Louis rink so all five games will be played in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., March 29.—The St. Louis Flyers' hockey team defeated the Tulsa Oilers here last night, 6 to 1, for their third straight victory to win the championship of the American Hockey Association. The series was for three games out of five but the Flyers sewed up the title with no loss of time.

The champions will meet the winner of the Central League playoff series in an inter-league title series scheduled to begin April 2.

Tulsa First to Score.

Tulsa's first period goal came with but 40 seconds to go in the first period. Desjardins trailed the puck behind the St. Louis net and flipped it back to Bailey, who slipped around the corner to beat Murray. The time was 19:20. The goal climaxed a period of open batting up and down the ice. Three penalties were assessed, all for tripping.

The second period was all St. Louis. The spectators were barely in their seats before the first score was rung up. Paddon rammed a high one home on an assist from McPherson, the shot seemingly catching Karakas flatfooted.

De Paul registered the goal that put the Flyers into the lead at 5:12 on a double assist from Palangio and Scott. The third St. Louis tally was after another scramble around Karakas, Padden scoring on another double assist from McPherson and Teel.

Flyers Run Wild.

The disheartened Oilers were easy prey for the Flyers in the last period. Palangio made the first one at 5:58, skating down on Karakas unmolested as the full force of Tulsans were left near the Flyer goal.

The rest of the game was composed of alternate fruitless Tulsa drives and unmolested St. Louis goals. Each Tulsa attmpt to score seemed to end with a Flyer breaking loose and skating down to pepper Karakas. Palangio skated down for another goal at 11:47 on assists from Scott and De Paul and in the next few seconds Hughes stopped the fast Italian on another such try. Scott made the final score, unassisted, at 19:07.

WRAY'S COLUMN

No Immunity for Fame.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 29.

"LONG SHOT MEADE" is on the ground, which means that neither fame nor influence can buy immunity for offenders on Florida race tracks, where events are conducted as near to perfection as can ever be expected of racing anywhere.

For his handling of two mounts, Good Harvest and Sisowen, Meade, who is E. R. Bradley's contract rider, was notified by the Tropical Park stewards that he would not be permitted to ride any other horses than those of the Idle Hour Farm Stable.

Standout jockeys and owners of great stables, usually expect and receive consideration that lesser lights would not get. It was said that Earle Sande used to "get away with murder" until one day at a Maryland track, he tried it on a horse named Bateau. Maryland, too, tolerates no foolishness and Sande found himself on the ground for many months, barred on all jockey club tracks.

MEADE

If all associations handled their affairs as those of Florida, Maryland and most of the New York courses, there would be less whispering going the rounds about the crookedness of the racing game.

• • •

He Hates to Lose.

THERE'S nothing wrong with Don Meade, however. He merely hates to lose. In the race at Tropical Park he was engaged in a duel with Jockey Wayne Wright on Jadaan with the racers coming down the stretch neck and neck. As they neared the wire Meade's mount bore in on Jadaan and crowded him and the judges evidently thought it was done on purpose.

The incident recalls the Kentucky Derby finish in which Bradley's Brokers Tip nosed out Head Play in literally a fighting finish. Meade, who had the mount on Brokers Tip, swung in close on the rail while the rider on Head Play, watching another horse on his right, was bearing out as they turned into the stretch. Too late, he saw Meade sneaking through the opening.

In the ensuing duel down the stretch, Head Play, a better horse than Brokers Tip, was nosing to the front when Meade and his rival engaged in a battle of whips and hands. Bridles were yanked and saddle blankets held. Photos of the finish showed that both boys were still fouling at the finish.

The judges, because both riders were guilty, allowed the finish to stand and as a result Brokers Tip won the victory by a whisker, thanks to Meade.

• • •

Another Duel Likely.

DON is a great rider and will undoubtedly be astride Bradley's best—either Boxthorn or Big Gawk—in the 1935 Derby. And perhaps he will engage in another duel at the finish with the boy who opposed him when he was set down—Wayne Wright.

This brilliant rider, who rode five out of six at Tropical Park recently, will have the mount for his contract owner's entry, Chance Sun, favorite at 4 to 1, for the event. Wright rides for J. E. Widener, Hialeah Park's presiding genius.

Boxthorn is quoted at about 20 to 1. Which means little, for Broker's Tip was as high as 100 to 1 in the 1934 future betting, yet won. This Wright is so good that a veteran turfman was quoted as saying: "You might as well throw away the form sheet at this meeting and play Wright's mounts."

So, if you want to be right, play Wright.

This Daily Double Quadrupled

MIAMI, still buzzing over the daily double of $7205, has forgotten the previous Tropical Park record double, won last year by Spearman Lewis, former St. Louis newspaper man and later acting chief of the Chicago Tribune's Paris branch, just after the World War.

Lewis won $2642 in the double, last year, and everybody laughed when he invested it in Florida real estate at Miami Beach.

The laugh is now on us. A visit to Lewis' home recently revealed that the three lots he purchased have been improved and are yielding rentals of $1800 a year not counting the residence Lewis himself occupies—"Treasure Trove"—he named it appropriately.

His 2642 dollars have grown into more than $10,000—which is almost quadrupling his daily double.

• • •

The Largest Daily Double.

SINCE the huge payoff on Wanoah and Arakay at Miami recently, a debate has continued as to the largest "double" on record.

According to one authority the $7205, while it is the largest in American turf annals, is second to one paid at Newbury, England, Oct. 26, 1934.

On that occasion Mr. Tickler and Boozer's Gloom, the winning combination, paid $11,500 for a $2.50 ticket. This is at the rate of 4600 to 1, whereas the Tropical Park payoff was at the rate of 3600 to 1.

A $6600 double at Aurora and one of $5800 at Aurora were the next high. A $5 double at Thorncliffe paid $9200. Fairmount had one of more than $4000 on the double.

BEAUMONT HIGH WINS ON TRACK; BALL GAME GOES TO NORMANDY

Normandy and Beaumont High Schools divided two sports events yesterday, Normandy winning a seven-inning ball game, 6—5, while Beaumont won the junior division track meet, 61—52.

A pinch hitter for Normandy won the ball game in the sixth inning, when Bob Cook singled in two runs that put the Vikings ahead. In Beaumont's last inning, with two on the bases, Coach Jim Major had his pitcher, Forrest Evans, walk Marcks to fill the bases, hoping for a double play. And a nice, fast, double play it was, Evans taking Dunkman's easy roller and relaying it to Serot who tossed to Aussieker to complete the play.

Melvin Klausmeyer of Normandy and Fred Cross of Beaumont placed in nearly every event held in the track meet, Klausmeyer out-scoring Cross 24—23¼.

Louis Seeks 17th Pro Victory In Bout With Washington Heavy

DETROIT, Mich., March 29.—Joe Louis, Detroit's unbeaten Negro heavyweight, who has signed to meet Primo Carnera in New York this summer, headlines the fight card at Olympia tonight, meeting Natie Brown of Washington over the 10-round distance.

Advance notice that Brown would be one of the hardest fighters he has met in his brief career in the professional ring, drew from Louis the admission that he knew he had a "tough one" to handle. "But I'll be in there doing my best," he said.

With his two-fisted attack Louis has battered an assortment of sparring partners all week, and as he tapered off his training, said he felt confident of making Brown his seventeenth consecutive victim.

Louis has won 13 fights via the knockout route, and won three by decisions.

In meeting Brown, he has everything to lose in the matter of prestige, especially with the Carnera fight booked as his New York debut, and the likelihood of a headline match in the Chicago Stadium next month.

Brown has won almost a score of fights in the past year without taking a defeat, and Louis, in making himself the favorite on tonight's card, added that he still expected to take Carnera within five rounds. Louis will weigh in at 195 and Brown at 190.

ST. LOUIS U. TO HAVE BASEBALL TEAM THIS YEAR

By James M. Gould.

Making possible a three-team round-robin for the city collegiate baseball championship, St. Louis University officials have announced that the Billikens will put a baseball team in the field this year. Practice will start Monday with Bob Finch, business manager of athletics, as coach. Washington U. and Concordia Seminary both have resumed the diamond sport and efforts will be made to arrange that all three college teams meet.

St. Louis University hasn't had a ball club in several years. Time was when the Billikens had more than a small measure of fame in college baseball and several former varsity stars went into the game professionally. No set schedule has as yet been put together so recent was the decision to resume the game.

While the baseball announcement is putting St. Louis back on a three-sport basis, it is likely that next year this number will be increased to four with a Billiken track team in action.

So far as football is concerned, Head Coach Muellerleile and his assistants are making real progress in the spring workouts on the Stadium practice field. Scrimmages are frequent and another real game is scheduled for Sunday afternoon. It is likely that Coach Muellerleile will pick two teams of as nearly equal strength as possible and see what happens.

The players are getting along well with their lessons and, through the maze of early work, it is possible to discern a lineup which has an excellent chance of starting against the University of the South (Sewanee) when the Billikens play hosts to the Southern eleven Monday, Sept. 23, in the sport feature of the American League convention to be held here that month.

A good guess would have Hartle and Fitzgerald at the ends, Baker and Rossini at the tackles, Oates and Vollmer at the guards, Krause at center, Lou Drone at quarter, Captain Hudson and Carl Wood at the halves and Norman Kloepper at full-back.

This would be an experienced combination with plenty of poundage on the line.

HODGE TO PLAY KEANEY IN DISTRICT TENNIS SEMIFINAL

WIESE OPPOSES H. WEINSTOCK; CHAMPION WINS FROM M. SMITH

TONIGHT'S SCHEDULE

SEMIFINAL ROUND.

7:30 p. m., Karl Hodge vs. Frank Keaney; Herbert Weinstock vs. Wayne Smith.

8:30 p. m., Wiese-M. Smith vs. Weinstock . Portnoy; W. Smith-Parker vs. Keaney-Krueger.

Place — Washington U. Field House.

By Davison Obear.

Karl Hodge, Triple A player, moved up another round in defense of his title as St. Louis District indoor men's singles champion by defeating McNeill Smith of East St. Louis in a close battle at the Washington University Field House last night. The score was 6—3, 1—6, 6—4.

The other players who joined Hodge in the semifinal round were Frank X. Keaney, Herbert Weinstock and Ray Wiese. These three players won their matches in straight sets last night. Keaney won from Ward Parker, Wiese eliminated Joe Petrik and Weinstock defeated Wayne Smith.

Keaney vs. Hodge.

Only two players stand between Hodge and permanent possession of the S. Roy Culbertson challenge trophy. One of these players is Keaney who meets Hodge in one of the two semifinal round men's singles encounter tonight. If Hodge wins he will then face the winner of tonight's semifinal match between Weinstock and Wiese in the final round tomorrow night. The Culbertson trophy was presented in 1933 and Hodge won it that year and again last year.

Hodge was forced to come from behind to win from McNeill Smith last night. Smith led, 4 to 3, in the third and final set but the champion's steady game evened the score and later brought victory.

In the opening set Hodge played almost perfect tennis. His fast placements bewildered Smith. The champion took the first four games of the set. Smith broke through Hodge's service in the following game but the champion took Smith's service in the sixth. Smith won two more games but his rally fell short as Hodge's brilliant placements gave him the final game and set, 6—3.

The East St. Louisan changed his tactics in the start of the second set. Aided by good service and continual net play Smith quickly ran up a 5 to 1 lead in games. Hodge intentionally made errors to give Smith the next game and end the set.

Smith opened the third set with some chop strokes and net play which gave him a 2 to 0 lead. Hodge was a bit erratic at the start of the set but soon settled down and won three straight games. Smith again rushed the net and gained a 4 to 3 lead. Hodge was in a bad spot at this period in the set but by some very consistent placements evened the score. The champion's steady playing gave him the next two games, the set, 6—4, and the match.

Other Quarterfinals.

Wayne Smith put up a good fight in the second set of his match with Weinstock. Ward Parker forced some good rallies against Keaney while Petrik took four games from Wiese in the first set of their quarterfinal match.

Yesterday's Results.

MEN'S SINGLES.

Quarter-final round—Karl Hodge defeated McNeill Smith, 6—3, 1—6, 6—4; Frank Keaney defeated Ward Parker, 6—1, 6—2; Ray Wiese defeated Joe Petrik, 4—4, 6—1; Herbert Weinstock defeated Wayne Smith, 6—2, 7—5.

LEWIS HAS COUNTED 518 POINTS IN AUTO RACES AT THE ARENA

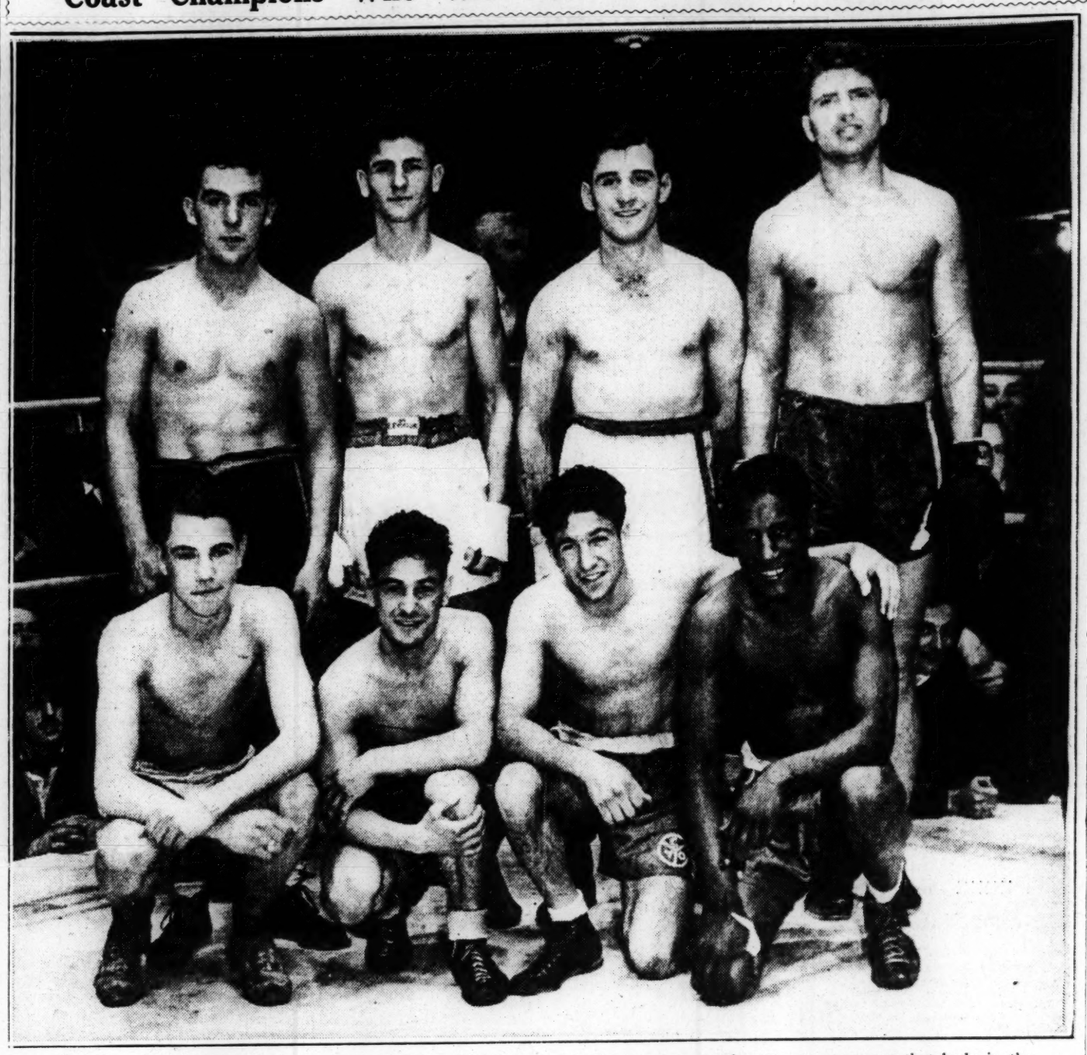

Although Marshall Lewis, through his early season efforts, has virtually assured the post position in the Southwestern championship midget auto race to be held at the Arena at the conclusion of 10 programs, official figures on the scoring reveal that a real "dog fight" is in progress for the other five positions.

Lewis heads the list with 518½ points after being practically squelched last week. Ted Hartley, who recently had boomed his way into second place, dropped to fourth last week as Ronney Householder and Tony Willman continued their wild battle which has become the feature of the Arena races. Householder now has piled up a total of 297 points and has advanced in three sessions of racing from the very tail end of the list to his present high position. Willman, with 287½, continues his "in-and-out" combat with second and third place. He is "in" third at present.

The next program, to be held April 9, and topped by the Commodore Edwin C. Koenig cup race, is expected to bring together the largest field yet assembled for midget racing.

Coast Champions Who Will Box in National Tourney Here

Winners of Pacific Association boxing titles which carry with them a place on the team to represent that body in the National tournament to be held at the Arena next month. They are (top, left to right)—Hugh McPhillips, light heavyweight; Manuel Gomez, welterweight; Harry Cahill, middleweight; Louis Nova, heavyweight. (Bottom), Harold Touissint, featherweight; Manuel Fuste, flyweight; George Cirimeli, bantamweight, and Earle Booker, lightweight.

Infantrymen From Ft. Benning Will Skirmish for National A.A.U. Boxing Titles at Arena

By W. J. McGoogan.

The Infantry will be on hand for the National A. A. U. tournament at The Arena, April 10-11-12, according to Lieutenant Robert B. Beattie, assistant athletic officer at Ft. Benning, Ga.

Fort Benning sent a sturdy squad to the National here last year and one member, A. B. Schneider, reached the final of the lightweight division before losing to Norbert Meehan of San Francisco. Schneider is not included in the soldiers' lineup this year, but six enlisted men are coming from the Georgia post.

They are: Ray Stearns and Orlaph Goss, welterweights; William T. Floyd, bantamweight; Melbourne A. Tuten, featherweight; Phillip D. Carpenter, middleweight; Lawrence Knecht, lightweight, and Lester Pooley, flyweight.

"There are no future or likely National champions in the list," writes Lieut. Beattie, "but you won't find their names on any FERA rolls and you'll understand why, when you see 'em work.

The Post Bankroll Wiped Out.

"Backing this trip will leave this office fairly well broke (financially) but if the rest of the U. S. A. refuses to worry about finances why should we? However, tell the officials not to postpone the meet or we may have to worry.

"Please send me any writeup about the boys—it might make them big-headed, hence, better targets for your local men."

The Army is naturally interested in fighting and boxing is always a favorite sport around a post.

Another association which has sent in its entry is the Pacific Association which last year carried away two titles—Fred Apostoli capturing the middleweight crown and Norbert Meehan, the lightweight championship. Neither of these boys is with the team this year, but Manuel Fuste, who reached the final of the flyweight division before losing to Tommy Barry of Chicago, won a place on the squad.

Of the eight boxers on the team, six are from San Francisco, one from San Mateo and the other from San Jose.

Names of All Nations.

Fuste represents the Olympic Club of San Francisco, while the others are: Hugh McPhillips, light heavyweight, San Mateo; Harold Toussint, San Jose, featherweight; Manuel Gomez, San Francisco, welterweight; Harry Cahill, San Francisco, middleweight; George Cirimelli, bantamweight, San Francisco; Louis Nova, heavyweight, San Francisco, and Earle Booker, lightweight, San Francisco.

Booker, a Negro boy, lost to Ray Sharkey of Cleveland in the featherweight class here last year in the first round. Since then he has won the lightweight championship of the Pacific Coast, Pacific Association, California State, San Francisco Golden Gloves, Los Angeles-San Francisco Inter-City Golden Gloves. He is a student of the University of San Francisco and is one of the boys the California Association looks to to bring back a title from St. Louis.

And a Good Heavy.

Louis Novak, the heavyweight, is said to be a good hitter, who has won most of his bouts by knockouts. Thus the heavy class seems to be building up into a good one with Irwin Striebel of the South Broadway; Lorenzo Pack, Detroit; Otis Thomas, Chicago; Stanley Evans, Detroit, defending champion, and George Theodoratus of Portland, Ore., among the other challengers for the title.

TORONTO AND MONTREAL WIN HOCKEY GAMES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 29. — The prospect for the first All-Canadian final for the Stanley Cup since 1926 loomed today as the Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Maroons headed toward the last round of the National Hockey League playoff series.

The Leafs took the lead in their series with the Boston Bruins for the league championship and one of the places in the final round for the world's title last night by winning the third game of the playoff, 3 to 0.

The Maroons, meanwhile, gained a 2 to 1 edge over the New York Rangers in their two-game "semi-final" round, to be decided on a total goal basis. The Maroons previously had eliminated the Chicago Blackhawks, last year's Stanley Cup winners, and the Rangers had beaten the Montreal Canadiens.

The two finalists may be decided tomorrow when Boston and Toronto battle on the Maple Leafs' rink in the fourth encounter of their best-three-out-of-five series, and the Rangers and Maroons wind up their struggle at Montreal.

The Maple Leafs, who lost the first game, 1-0, in overtime, and won the second, 2-0, looked more impressive than ever as they took the third from Boston. Cheered on by a near record crowd of 14,218, they scored in the first minute of play.

Wilson Rated Best Catcher.

Rabbit Maranville rates Jimmy Wilson, Philadelphia manager, as the greatest National League catcher in the last 20 years.

FANS TO JOIN SOCCER CLUBS ON TWO TRIPS

St. Louis soccer clubs open their raids on other cities today when the Municipal champions, the Irish Village Club, depart for Pittsburgh. About 30 rooters will accompany the team which is scheduled to oppose the Western Pennsylvania Association picked team at Pittsburgh, Sunday afternoon. The squad will leave Union Station at 6 p. m.

At noon tomorrow the Centrals, local professional champions, depart for Chicago where they will oppose the Wieboldts in the second game of the Western cup final series, at De Paul University Field, Sunday afternoon. A big delegation of rooters will likewise convoy this team, and more are due to leave here later.

Two games that should bring forth excellent soccer and keen competition are scheduled for Fairground Park, Sunday. In the first game, starting at 2 o'clock, the Alpen Braus, last year's Municipal League champions, will oppose the Stuarts, champions of University City, while in the second match, the Southern Illinois Stars will face a picked team of Municipal League players. The Illinois team is made up of players representing Johnston City, West Frankfort, Royalton, Zeigler and Valier, a section which has produced some of the best soccer players in this district.

Here is the Illinois lineup:

Goal, Witunski; fullbacks, Brown and Borkus; halfbacks: Behn, Zanders, Hennieque; forwards: Lawnsdale, Slack, Patterson, Coulson and Smilie. Reserves are: McHard, Stiritz, Zampbell and Sala.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 29. —Michigan's title-defending swimmers are expected to receive stirring competition from Yale's powerful forces today when Jack Medica of the University of Washington and Jimmy Kilhula of Southern California renew their rivalry in the opening events of the twelfth annual National Collegiate A. A. meet in Harvard's pool.

The outstanding swimmers from 37 colleges will compete during the two days. More than 20 of last year's point-winners, including three stars who accounted for five individual titles, have entered.

Fred Varney and Ted McDonald will represent Washington University. Varney, a sophomore, is the outstanding swimmer on the Bears squad, and set two records last Saturday in the Missouri Valley Conference meet, breaking the 100 and 220 yard marks. McDonald will also compete in the sprint events.

$1-a-Year Players Sign New Contracts With the Yankees

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 29.

COL. JACOB RUPPERT, owner of the Yankees, said yesterday he has signed four of his "dollar-a-year men" at the same salaries they received last season.

The quartet, composed of Earl Combs, veteran outfielder; Fred (Dixie) Walker, outfielder, and Johnny Allen and Russell Van Atta, pitchers, were sent provisional contracts calling for $1 a season until they could prove to Manager Joe McCarthy they were in shape for a hard season's work.

"Having been assured by Manager McCarthy that these players are sound physically, I lost no time signing them at their 1934 salaries," Ruppert explained.

M'KINLEY AND ROOSEVELT WIN OPENING GAMES

The stock of two of the South Side representatives took a rise after the opening baseball victories yesterday. McKinley, last year's runner-up, defeated South Side Catholic, 5 to 3, and Roosevelt returned from University City with a 9 to 7 decision.

Coach Louis D. Maguolo started with his second McKinley team and finished with the first. John Goldak, who pitched the last two innings for McKinley, was credited with the victory. Andy Stackle, the losing pitcher, allowed only five hits, walked one and struck out 10. However, the South Side batters only scratched out two hits, which didn't help Stackle's cause much. The three McKinley pitchers dished out eight walks, four off Martin and two each off Bud Parrott and Goldak.

Two pitchers were used by Coach Lee R. Carlson of Roosevelt against University City. The first, Billy McHale, held the Indians scoreless, but the second, Byron Watson, was not so efficient. Fred Naumann, one of Roosevelt's two lettermen, was the catcher. The other veteran on the team is Bob Stanton, changed from a shortstop into a second baseman. Roosevelt's next game is with Ritenour on the Rough Riders' field, Monday afternoon.

The "Winter Olympics" ice follies ended last night at the Winter Garden, and those 5500 spectators who attended during the two nights, agreed that it was one of the finest, most interesting and entertaining shows ever to be presented on ice in St. Louis.

Last night, 2937 people attended, and saw the 100 performers go through their various dances, comedy, and fancy skating acts again. Mrs. Ruth English and Leonard Fogassey were awarded the Midwestern figure skating cup by Harry E. Radix of Chicago. This duo also presented some of the finest numbers on the program, their "Gay Nineties" act being one of the funniest and cleverest bits of work of the evening. They also gave a beautiful Spanish dance, "El Tango."

The large groups last night were very effective, with the military drill and the black-and-white group receiving long applause.

It was announced that the amateur ice hockey contest between the Octopus and the Watch and Ward teams, postponed again last night because of the little space left on the ice after the decorations had been arranged, would be played next Wednesday.

Unknowns Win Girls Title,

The Unknowns team won the girls' division championship in the Polish National Alliance Basketball League last night winning from the Hartmanns, 16—13, in the final game of the season at the Polish American Hall. The game required two extra periods. In a preliminary game, the P. N. A.'s defeated the Northwesterns in a girls' contest.

Oklahoma Fives Play for Girls' Basket Honors

WICHITA, Kan., March 29.—The defending champion Stenos of Tulsa Business College and a sextet made up principally from the old Oklahoma Cardinal squad they beat out of their twice-won title last year were matched today in the final of the women's National A. A. U. basketball tournament.

Baer on His Way To Chicago for Fight Conference

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 29.—Ready to dicker for a world's heavyweight title fight in Chicago this summer, Champion Max Baer and his entourage were en route to the Midwestern city today.

He boarded a train here late last night with his giant brother, Buddy, and his manager, Ancil Hoffman.

Hoffman minced no words in declaring he was going into a conference with Jim Mullen and Nate Lewis, Chicago promoters, over a possible title fight with Max Schmeling in June.

"I have no contract with Madison Square Garden for Baer's services other than giving them a privilege of naming a suitable opponent for Baer by April 15," said Hoffman. "Jim Braddock is not suitable so I hold my contract with the Garden null and void."

Braddock, winner of the Garden's elimination series, was named by the New York Boxing Commission as the No. 1 challenger to Baer's crown.

TESTIMONY ON MELLON BROTHERS' BANK DEAL

Witness Testifies A. W. and Late R. B. Borrowed $2,000,000 Without Signing Note.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 29.—Andrew W. Mellon and his brother, the late R. B. Mellon, borrowed $2,000,000 in July, 1929, from the Union Trust Co. without signing a note of indebtedness, an assistant-treasurer of the bank testified today before the Tax Appeals Board.

The bank did receive 78,000 shares of Pittsburgh Coal Co. stock as collateral, along with a contract carrying authority to purchase 58,000 shares of the stock at $35 a share, said the witness, S. P. Gerst.

"But can you point to anything in the contract or any other contract that obligated A. W. and R. B. Mellon to pay the note," asked Robert H. Jackson, chief counsel for the Government in supporting its extra assessment of $3,089,000 tax on the former Treasury Secretary's 1931 income.

"I don't think I can," was the answer.

The evidence previously had shown the $2,000,000 had been used by the Mellons to purchase the 78,000 shares of stock from the Pittsburgh Coal Co.

Dec. 29, 1931, Gerst said the contract giving right to purchase the stock and the shares was returned to the Mellons and replaced by a collateral note and 100,000 shares of Gulf Oil stock.

The evidence also has shown that A. W. Mellons took his share of the stock on the next day and with another block he already had, sold the entire holding of 123,000 shares to Union Trust for $500,000 or about $4 a share.

The loan was repaid June 7, 1934, the witness testified.

Non-Striker Charges They Beat Him; Fourth Assailant Got Away.

Three men described as striking employes of the Laclede Gas Light Co. were arrested at Eighth and Olive streets after an altercation with a non-striking meter reader, Elwood Rothhaus, 4971 Parker avenue.

He said four men attacked him as he left a Woolworth store, where he had eaten lunch. Policemen intervened and Rothhaus suffered only a scratch on the face. The fourth man got away. The three were held under bond, pending application for warrants charging common assault.

RARE ANDES ORCHIDS ARRIVE FROM ENGLAND

20 Odontoglossums, Worth Thousands of Dollars, Lent for Flower Show.

Twenty odontoglossum orchid plants from the collection of Sir Jeremiah Colman, leading English connoisseur, and valued at many thousands of dollars, arrived in perfect condition at Shaw's Garden yesterday after being shipped from England in two wooden crates by fast boat and passenger train. They will be exhibited in the Garden's orchid display at the Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show, which opens tomorrow.

Superintendent Pring said it was the first time to his knowledge that orchids in bloom have been shipped successfully from Europe to this part of the United States.

The plant is rare because it cannot be grown in temperatures above 50 degrees. It is native to the Andes Mountains, where it is found above 9000 foot altitudes, and has been raised in this country only along northern parts of the Atlantic Coast. It differs from the ordinary American orchid in its greater variety of color, the smallness of its flower and the greater length of its stem.

How Loan Was Arranged.

Dr. George T. Moore, director of the Garden, met Sir Jeremiah on a visit to England in 1926. He arranged for the loan of the flowers through the Garden's European representative.

Every flower was in perfect bloom. The blossoming had been timed for the show by regulation of lighting conditions. Pring estimated they have been in bloom three weeks and said they should remain in good condition for the eight days of the show, barring unusually warm weather.

"I can't estimate their value," Dr. Moore said. "But I do know that Sir Jeremiah showed me a plant with two leaves on it—no flowers, mind you—and told me casually, 'I paid 700 guineas for this at an auction.' You can just add it up." At that price, the 20 sent the Garden would be worth almost $70,000.

The plants were packed with the stems tied to steel rods and their moss-covered pots buried in excelsior. This retained the moisture so well that the earth in the pots was still damp on arrival. There were apertures in the crates to let in air, but burlap kept out light. The stems of the plants in one crate were wrapped in tissue. Eight other orchid plants of less unusual type were included in the shipment.

Center of Andes Background.

The odontoglossums, nicknamed "odonts," will be shown in a special alcove off the main orchid display at the south end of the Arena, with a black velvet backdrop to emphasize their coloring. The background of the entire display, a scene in the Andes, will be centered around them.

The original white flower is called the Chamberlain because Sir Joseph Chamberlain, diplomat, wore one of the blossoms daily in his coat lapel, but the species has been hybridized into such varieties as the "Prince of Orange," a yellow on white; the President Hoover, maroon fringed with white; the zara, white specked with purple; the vega, cardinal and yellow; the Gladiator, rose bordered with white; the Virginia, a white and brown tinged with mauve, and the Duchess of York, pink with a white lip.

NO SECURITY BILL BENEFITS FOR $3000-A-YEAR WORKERS

Democrats and Republicans on House Committee Vote Down Annuity Provision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — Democratic and Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee voted together today to eliminate from the administration's social security bill the only sections giving direct benefits to workers making more than $3000 a year.

By a 21 to 4 vote, the committee deleted provisions allowing those not covered by compulsory old-age pensions to buy annuities which would return them up to $50 a month in their old age.

Chairman Doughton asserted the committee had yet to consider finally the section levying payroll and income taxes to build up reserves for persons making less than $250 a month. He said, however, that "we ought to be able to finish with the bill by Tuesday night."

The threatened opposition to the taxes for unemployment insurance failed to develop. With two members absent, the committee voted 23 to 0 to leave that part of the bill unchanged.

WEIRTON'S COMPANY-PAID DEPUTY SHERIFFS DISMISSED

New State Law Prohibits Hiring of Officers by Corporation and County Is Too Poor.

By the Associated Press.

WEIRTON, W. Va., March 29.—This steel manufacturing city of 20,000, said to be the largest unincorporated community in the country, is temporarily without police protection.

Weirton has been policed by Deputy Sheriffs paid by the Weirton Steel Co. Now 14 deputies have been dismissed, leaving only three besides Sheriff J. A. Tope to keep the peace in all Hancock County.

Sheriff Tope dismissed the men because a new State law prohibits payment of deputies by corporations and the county has no funds to hire the officers.

The only recourse, authorities said, is for citizens themselves to name "conservators of the peace." The new law gives residents this right.

STALIN AND EDEN TALK FOR HOUR ON PEACE PROBLEMS

British Emissary Goes to Kremlin With Ambassador After Second Meeting With Litvinoff.

'IMPROVEMENT' IN RELATIONS REPORTED

Foreign Commissar in Speech Says Powers Have Located 'Danger Spots' of Europe.

MOSCOW, March 29.—Joseph Stalin, the Soviet dictator, received Capt. Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, in his private office in the Kremlin today.

Eden was accompanied by Lord Chilston, the British Ambassador to Russia. With Stalin were Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the Union Council of People's Commissaries; Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, and Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador to London.

They immediately began, with the aid of interpreters, the discussion of the European situation.

Eden and the Ambassador entered the Kremlin enclosure in an automobile, driving through the main entrance of the wall—the Boroffitskiye gate—on the side opposite from Lenin's tomb, and riding directly to the wing of the court building where Stalin has his office.

"Relations Improved."

Litvinoff and Capt. Eden conferred for an hour and a half today, after which Russian sources said there was a "noted improvement in both the political and economic relations between Soviet Russia and Great Britain."

The two talked over "most of the outstanding problems in political relations," they said, and the discussion was conducted with "the same spirit of frankness and sincerity" as yesterday's.

It was recalled that after yesterday's talk it was said that the statesmen found no points of disagreement, although it was understood no definite proposals were then presented by either party.

In conversations with Litvinoff tomorrow, Eden will discuss the development of British-Soviet trade relations.

The question of Soviet propaganda in England has not been raised during the discussions, an authorized Russian spokesman said in response to a question.

Both British and Russians said the conferences were being conducted in the light of "clarifications" obtained by Sir John Simon, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Eden in their recent Berlin talks with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

British spokesmen said further that the London peace plan was still the basis of discussions and the Russians mentioned "conclusions" to which the Berlin clarifications are leading.

The "clarifications" are interpreted as having to do with the possibility of bringing the German point of view into harmony with the others.

"Danger Spots Located."

Litvinoff, speaking at a banquet last night in honor of Eden, repeatedly stressed the gravity of the situation in Europe.

"The overwhelming majority of states are at the present moment profoundly anxious for the preservation of peace," he said. "There may be a few exceptions, but the danger spots are at least located."

The Soviet official press has repeatedly accused Germany of menacing the stability of Europe's peace by rearming.

The fact that the danger spots are located, Litvinoff continued, "does not imply that they are localized."

"None of us is clever enough," he said, "to be able to fortell exactly which states or state would be first or more greatly affected by this danger, for it points in all directions.

"It would be naive to expect the instigators of this danger to tell us exactly what points we ought to protect. Nor has there yet been invented a weapon capable of firing in one direction only which, when pointed another way, would misfire."

Urges Collective Efforts.

Appealing for co-operation among the Powers, Litvinoff said the fact that the covenant of the League of Nations provides for cases "in which an attack on one state may be regarded as an act of war against all members" should make it clear that "if one state is threatened by the danger of war, all others ought to consider themselves threatened."

"It is now universally realized," he said, "that the danger of war is hanging over Europe and consequently that a world war can only be averted or its risk reduced to the utmost extent possible, by the collective efforts of all states, especially the great Powers."

After his address, Litvinoff drank to the health of "His Majesty, the King of England."

Eden Explains His Mission.

Capt. Eden then explained that the purpose of his visit to Moscow was "purely exploratory and in no sense to negotiate."

He recalled that Great Britain joined in the invitation to Soviet Russia to become a member of the League of Nations and added: "His Majesty's government's foreign policy is based upon the League of Nations and the essence of the league is universality. It should, indeed, be a world-wide league."

The world is no longer composed of independent and self-sufficing units, Eden said, joining Litvinoff in the opinion that co-operation is necessary and recommending the League of Nations as the most effective instrument to that end.

"All nations," he said, "are bound together by a thousand links of commerce and mutual interest."

Gala Reception Held.

The banquet followed a reception at which men wore full dress or uniforms and women appeared in their best finery. Commissar of War Klement Voroshiloff and members of the diplomatic corps were present. Guests danced to the tune, "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?"

Eden, receiving the press after his two-hour conference with Litvinoff yesterday afternoon, confirmed statements previously made by the Russians that the talk was carried on in an atmosphere of marked friendliness. However, he added, the discussions had been merely started.

Eden will attend the ballet tonight and tomorrow will be a luncheon guest of the Litvinoffs at their country house, 30 miles from Moscow.

LERROUX CABINET RESIGNS IN SPAIN

Crisis Results From Clemency Granted 21 Participants in October Revolt.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 29.—Premier Alejandro Lerroux presented the Cabinet's resignation to President Niceto Alcala Zamora today.

The Cabinet crisis was brought about by Rightist Ministers' resignations after the Cabinet approved clemency to persons condemned to death as a result of the revolt last October.

The President consulted with Sanitago Alba, who as President of Congress, was first to be called. The Chamber of Deputies held a brief session during which the President read the declaration of Lerroux. The chamber then adjourned until a new Government is formed.

The crisis was precipitated by the resignations of the Agrarian and Liberal Democratic ministers after the granting of clemency to Ramon and 20 others.

The clemency decree was approved by a majority vote in which the Radicals overcame the Rightist opposition.

CUBAN GOVERNMENT ORDERS CAMPAIGN ON WITCHCRAFT

Several Recent Attempted Kidnapings of Children Laid to "Brugeria" Cult.

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, March 29.—The Government ordered law enforcement agencies last night to increase their vigilance against "brujeria," the practice of witchcraft. Several attempted kidnapings of children have been attributed recently to practitioners of this cult.

The apparent cause of the order was a report by the Department of Interior received from Matanzas province of the arrest of a Negro and seizure of an assortment of articles used in witchcraft. They included a human skull, packages believed to contain powdered human bones, a pot containing bones of children, a pair of horns, a number of rooster feet and 20 ancient paving blocks.

UPTON SINCLAIR TO CAPTURE DEMOCRATIC PARTY, HE SAYS

He Declares This Will Be Easier Than Organizing Separate Movement.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, March 29.—Upton Sinclair, unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate on the Democratic ticket in California last year, said last night he intended to capture the Democratic party in the 1936 presidential campaign.

"We have a perfectly good machine for the job of ending poverty," he told an audience of 8000 persons. "We are going to show the people of other states how to capture the Democratic party nationally."

Sinclair said it would be easier to capture the existing Democratic party than to organize a third movement. As the first step toward that end, he said he was writing a new book, called "We the People of American and How We ended poverty."

RFC WANTS ONLY CASH ON LOAN OF HARLEY CLARKE

Chairman Jones Ready to Relinquish Hold On Utilities If $2,000,000 and Interest Is Paid.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — While Senator Wheeler, co-author, of the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company bill, was denouncing utility holding companies on the floor of the Senate yesterday, Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation said at his press conference that he was willing to hand back to Harley L. Clarke the $400,000,000 utility system that Clarke pledged for a $200,000 loan to one of the Clarke holding companies.

"If Clarke should walk in with $2,000,000 tomorrow would you give him back the stock pledged on the note?" Jones was asked. "Why yes, of course," Jones said. "I think it comes to something more than $2,000,000, with interest."

"Your attitude is that of a banker then?" he was asked. "We're interested in getting our money back," he replied.

The original loan was made with the Dawes' bank in Chicago for the Webster Corporation, Clarke's personal holding company, and there was pledged as collateral all the common stock of Public Utilities Securities Co. which carries with it control of Utilities Power & Light, a $400,000,000 company with about 1800 operating subsidiaries.

Jones declared that he would be willing to give his opinion on holding company legislation in accord with suggestions made by members of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee which is holding hearings on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. Several members of the committee expressed a desire to hear what Jones, now in nominal control of a vast holding company structure, might have to say about the problem.

The RFC chairman confirmed the fact that Clarke has recently conferred with RFC officials over the disposal of his note, seeking to have it extended.

"It would be mighty unnatural if he hadn't tried to get it extended," the chairman said. "We'd like to collect our money—that's all the interest we've got in it." The RFC has refused to extend the note but plans no immediate effort to foreclose on the utilities.

It was developed at the conference that the RFC controls besides, at least two railroads, a utility company and insurance company. Jones intimated in response to questions that other businesses were already within RFC control or soon would be.

'TOO POOR TO KEEP THEM,' KILLS 5 OF 9 CHILDREN

Farm Hand in Poland Uses Kitchen Knife; Says He Was to Lose Job April 1.

By the Associated Press.

TARNOW, Poland, March 29.—Stanislas Pypene, a farm hand near here, murdered five of his nine children yesterday, because he said he was too poor to keep them, local police reported today. He killed them with a kitchen knife.

Pypene told the police he was to lose his job on April 1.

MUSSOLINI'S PAPER WARNS PROFITEERS WILL BE SHOT

Makes Statement After Chronicling Serious Rise in Prices in Last Few Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

MILAN, Italy March 29.—Wartime profiteers in Italy will be stood up against a wall and shot, Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, said today.

The newspaper, after chronicling a serious rise in prices in the last few weeks, said: "Those who decided to launch themselves in wicked adventures are mistaken if they think there is any possibility today of renewing the greedy profits of the past. Rather it is better they should know formally that whenever the possibility of war profits arises, we will begin immediately to place some persons against the wall in the first two days or, better still, two days before."

This statement coincided with an order sent out by the Fascist party secretary, Achille Starace, to all provincial secretaries to watch the increase in prices to ascertain how much is due to natural economic reasons, such as new import regulations and how much to speculation on the European and African political situation.

FRENCH ARMY RESERVES BEGIN ANNUAL 21-DAY MANEUVERS

12,000 Concentrated at Bitche, Fortified Town on Old German Frontier.

By the Associated Press.

NANCY, France, March 29.—Reservists of all French army branches gathered today at Bitche, a fortified town on the old German frontier, for the annual 21-day maneuvers.

The regular army staff at the frontier sector headquarters said the activities were customary annual routine and did not signify reinforcements of border garrisons. Approximately 12,000 men are in the maneuvers.

Gradual strengthening of the troops manning the newly-constructed concrete fortifications along the Franco-German frontier has been in progress several weeks. Thirty thousand men have been transferred from the Franco-Italian border in this connection.

SON OF KING GEORGE KNIGHTED

Duke of Gloucester Receives Grand Cross of St. Michael.

LONDON, March 29. — King George greeted the return home of his globe-trotting son, the Duke of Gloucester, by conferring on him last night the highest rank in the honorary Order of St. Michael and St. George. A court circular announced that the Duke had been invested with the insignia of the Knight of the Grand Cross of that order on his return from a seven-month trip to the Antipodes. A cheering crowd, which included the entire royal family except the Duke and Duchess of Kent, welcomed Gloucester at the station.

The knighting of a man who won the gratitude of the King by his services to the Russian imperial family also was announced. Knighthood was conferred on Peter Bark, managing director of the Anglo-International Bank, Ltd., who was the last Finance Minister under the Czar.

Death-for-Kidnaping Bill Vetoed.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 29.—Gov. Talmadge last night vetoed a bill to provide the death penalty for kidnaping for ransom. The bill provided that holding of an abducted person for three days was prima facie evidence the kidnaping was for ransom.

Government in Business to Stay, Declares Head of National C. of C.

Problem, Says Henry I. Harriman in St. Louis Speech, Is the Degree of Regulation.

More government in business, rather than less, was predicted by Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in his speech before the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce at luncheon today at Hotel Jefferson.

"It is unwise to be a Pollyanna or a Cassandra," Harriman said of business conditions, "to brag about what we have, or to bemoan what we have not." He said the history of previous depressions showed that "the real demand for durable goods indicates the end of hard times, and gave his own view that "there is distinct evidence that the demand for durable goods will become marked during 1935."

Harriman termed himself "not a conservative, as the term is generally understood," saying that the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, with whom he had a personal acquaintance, had described him in those words. Justice Holmes, he said, remarked that the election of Harriman as president of the National Chamber of Commerce was as surprising as the earlier appointment of Judge Holmes, a liberal, to the Supreme bench.

Dry Pump or Dry Well?

Prefacing a discussion of measures pending in Congress, Harriman asked:

"Are times really better, and is business really on its way out? Is its improvement merely the result of Government spending? Is the pump being primed, or are we pouring water into a dry well? Is government in business to stay? Is individual initiative to continue to be a dominant factor in our future economic life? Is the President gaining or losing in the estimation of the nation? Finally, has the President definite and abiding objectives?"

Answering his first question, Harriman said the trend of business and industry had been slowly but definitely upward from the low mark of early 1933. "In March, 1933, the number of the unemployed was between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000. At the beginning of 1934, it was about 9,000,000, and at the opening of the present year, about 7,000,000. This indicates a steady and healthy increase in employment, but it leaves no doubt of the present seriousness of unemployment."

Increased income from agriculture, increased returns from dividends, increased exports and imports and increased production were cited. "Time itself is fighting for better times," the speaker said, referring to historical precedents for recovery.

Government In Business.

"Is government in business to stay, and are we really trending toward a greater degree of Government regulation of business?" he asked. "Much as I may regret it, I fear that it is. As business men, we are not foresighted if we do not realize that the inter-relation between government and business will be stronger in the future. The problem of this generation is the problem of determining wisely the direction and the degree of Government participation in business and industry.

"The greater intrusion of government in business does not necessarily mean the passing of individual initiative. It should never mean the dead level of Socialism or Communism. It should never mean equality in the division of goods and services."

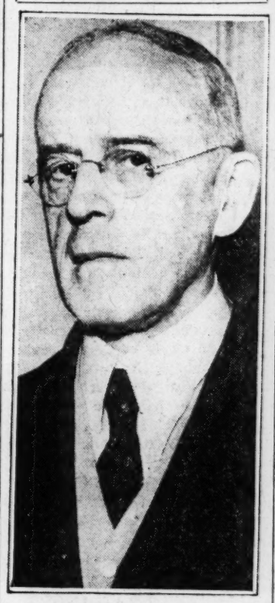

As to the public estimation of President Roosevelt, Harriman said that up to the 1934 fall elections, the President maintained his popularity with all classes. Since that time, he held, "the people still admire the President and want to have faith in his policies, but they also want jobs."

"Listening to Soothsayers."

"They see 7,000,000 to 10,000,000 men still out of work," Harriman said, "and a sixth of the population dependent on the dole. They are asking whether this should be so after two years of almost absolute power. Many are beginning to lis-

ADMINISTRATOR BILLS IN TROUBLE IN LEGISLATURE

Committee Revises One Measure and Sends It to State Senate but Holds Up Other One.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 29.—The Quinn-Frost bills, under which the fees of Public Administrator Sheehan and other similar officials throughout the State would be greatly augmented, failed of favorable consideration at a legislative session of the Senate Committee on Wills and Probate Law yesterday afternoon.

Though reporting one bill to the Senate, the committee first amended it to prevent the Public Administrator from increasing his income through excessive bond premium charges. The other measure, under which it would be mandatory on the Probate Court to appoint the Public Administrator as administrator pendente lite in every will contest, was held in the committee, Senators Quinn and Frost being unable to muster a majority of the committee for it.

Provision for Bond Fees.

In making a favorable report on the bond bill, the committee approved legislation which would permit the Public Administrator to give a general bond and charge to all estates under his control bond fees sufficient in the aggregate to cover the premium on the general bond.

As originally introduced, the bill proposed that the general bond should be not in excess of $200,000, and that the administrator should be permitted to charge to each estate the amount the premium would have been on a bond to cover that particular estate.

Owing to the fact that the total value of assets in estates in St. Louis technically would require bonds of more than $200,000 in the aggregate, and the further fact that premiums on small bonds are proportionately higher than on a large bond, the bill if enacted into law would have meant a handsome profit to the public administrator.

The committee struck from the bill the $200,000 maximum and provided that the Probate Judge should from time to time increase the size of the general bond as the estates under the administrator justified, and included and express provision

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Where Huey Is in Error.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial exposing Huey Long's economic ignorance is timely and to the point. Where the Louisiana dictator (and a great many other people) makes a mistake is in supposing that the nation lives on capital. The nation does nothing of the sort; it gets its livelihood from the daily wealth produced by all of us.

A man who inherits $100,000, for instance, may live all his life on that amount and then pass on to his son the full $100,000. The son may do likewise. Obviously, they do not live on the $100,000, for it is not diminished a bit. What they gain their livelihood from, of course, is the income from the $100,000, the profits or interest it brings them; in reality, they live on the labor of other men whose knowledge, skill and labor have been applied to the capital that it may produce the good life for its owners—but not for the toilers whose labor is applied to it.

It is not the distribution of wealth, therefore, that matters so much, but the distribution of the ownership of the means of production, the land, the factories and the tools that are utilized. Does anyone doubt that if the productive capacity of America were used to the fullest extent and the wealth thus created were distributed to all the people, every family might have an income of from $4000 to $5000 a year? The industrial and agricultural plant of America is not used to the fullest extent because it is controlled by a few men who refuse to operate it, regardless of the need for commodities, unless a nice profit is assured them. There is no profit in sight for the very simple reason that the amount paid to the men who have produced all these commodities is so far below the amount these producers must pay in order to be able to consume them.

"Share-the-wealth," then, is the same class of solution as the "share-the-work" program—it settles nothing. The marvelous productive capacities of America must be utilized to the fullest extent and all the wealth thus created must be allowed to flow fully into the lives of all the people. This cannot be done as long as a few speculators control the means by which the nation as a whole lives. It calls for ownership by all the people of the things necessary to a full life for all the people.

This may be Socialism, Bolshevism, or—horror of horrors!—Government ownership. Regardless of what we call it, that is what is needed and the sooner we realize it, the sooner we stop chasing after rainbows like "share-the-wealth," "managed money" or "social credit," the better off we'll all be.

Marion, Ill. LOREN NORMAN.

Cross Plus Whisky Bottle.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

EVERY good citizen should co-operate with Mayor Dickmann in his campaign to reduce traffic accidents. I want to commend the idea of hanging crepe and flowers on the lamp posts, and painting large crosses on the street where people have been killed.

I would like to make an addition, however, and that is, where a person has been killed by an auto driven by a drunken driver, a large whisky bottle be painted on top of that cross. I believe that the whisky bottle will attract a certain class of people who care not for the cross. WM. H. ABBOTT.

That Butter Price Reduction.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR issue of March 7 reported a drop in the price of butter to 41 cents per pound. In an economic system governed by forward-looking men, just what would that drop have indicated? It would have meant that the butter-makers had found business so good they could afford to cut the margin of profit, give the market basket a break, and, incidentally, butter their own and the consumers' parsnips, through an increasing volume of trade.

But what did the drop in price mean in fact? It meant that butter sales had slumped 40 per cent since Nov. 1, because of increase in price, and that the sale of oleomargarine had increased 400 to 500 per cent. That clearly illustrates the prevailing stupidity in industry.

If butter can be sold at a profit for 41 cents with business 40 per cent off, how much cheaper could it have been sold when business was good? No doubt it could have been sold at around 20 to 25 cents, and the resulting increase in sales, at the smaller margin of profit, would have sustained an adequate income for the traders, which high prices destroyed. Furthermore, the needs of the people would have been supplied, more employment provided and more cash customers produced. DEMOCRACY.

Pierron, Ill.

Favors Prevailing Wage.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HENRY I. HARRIMAN, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, seems very much excited over the idea of relief workers being paid prevailing wages, but says work should be carried out under contract to maintain private organizations. He fails to suggest that private organizations should reduce their profits about 25 per cent. This is what they ask the worker to do. Every working man should insist on his Representative holding out for the prevailing wage. H. R. ROCKWELL.

"PREPARE FOR NEUTRALITY."

The Senate hearings now in progress on taking the profit out of war are of great potential usefulness. The disclosures of huge profits in the World War were shocking to the American people. Should this country again go to war, they will favor any possible measure for preventing enrichment of persons or corporations as a result.

Important as is this step, however, there is one of greater importance which is now suffering neglect. That is the drafting of a neutrality policy, designed to prevent this country's being embroiled in another conflict. We say "more important" advisedly, because such an effort would be preventive in nature, while the measures to check profits presuppose the country's going to war.

The path of the neutral is a hard one, however, as was plainly shown in the article, "Prepare for Neutrality," by Charles Warren, reprinted from the Yale Review on this page last Tuesday. Hoping to remain at peace by fulfilling a neutral's duties is not enough, as Mr. Warren pointed out. There are certain rights of neutrals which, if insisted upon, may lead to friction with belligerents. The country must determine in advance what policy it will maintain, how far it will limit the privileges of citizens, whether it will sacrifice commercial profits in the hope of maintaining peace.

"Wise preparation for neutrality means the visualizing, planning for and dealing with the critical situations which neutrality will create, but doing so in advance of their occurrence," says Mr. Warren, a former Assistant Attorney-General of the United States and a distinguished historian. With war scares agitating foreign nations, it is high time for America to think of this matter. What our neutrality policy should be to keep the peace takes logical precedence over our economic policy if war comes.

Hearings on an American neutrality policy should begin at the earliest possible moment. It is a complex subject, with many ramifications which will require careful exploration. While pressing the effort to take the profit out of possible future war, let America "prepare for neutrality" in an effort to make that war impossible.

THAT CAMPUS ROW.

The teapot tempest Martha Ijams brewed has subsided. The campus wends again its drowsy way. A world that met her for a printed, photographic moment may already have forgotten her. Such is gloria's rapid transit. May we identify her as the alumna of the University of California who declined to act as hostess because "a mere politician" had been chosen to make the charter-day address?

The speaker of that magnolia morning, it will be recalled, was Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, whom to characterize as "a mere politician" seems to us a serious solecism. She is, as we all know, the first woman to sit in a President's Cabinet. The trail-blazer, the pioneer, the primus, or, in this instance, the prima, whatever the inventory recites or omits, is not "mere." If the dictionary may be inflated, in the cause of accuracy, the word demanded by exactitude is "unmere."

So we are reluctantly obliged to conclude that Martha Ijams is not an exactitudinarian. And in the art of pitching—whether baseballs or epithets—as high an authority as Dizzy Dean insists that control, or precision, is the sine qua non. But isn't she a snooty beauty?

A MAJOR ECONOMIC PROBLEM.

From Nebraska comes the good news that trees are being planted in greater numbers than ever before. Up to the middle of last month, 600,000 trees had been ordered by property owners of the State, as against 135,000 ordered in the corresponding period last year. In Adams County, whose county seat is Hastings, plans are under way to set out literally dozens of trees for every one which died in the drouth of last summer.

It is doubtful if Nebraska could spend its money and energy to a better end. The blighting dust storms of recent weeks are no more than wind erosion, which in turn is free to do its worst damage in barren, treeless regions. Strip listing, or the piling up of high earthen barricades at intervals across the plains, which is recommended by students of wind erosion control, is at best an emergency device. The need is for roots that grip and hold the soil, and foliage to keep the wind from carrying off the topsoil.

The National Resources Board and the Mississippi Valley Committee stated the problem without hedging in their reports which President Roosevelt released early this year. Stuart Chase restates it in his article entitled "Old Man River," in the current New Republic. An acquisitive economy has worked its selfish designs without first sitting down to count the ultimate cost. Forests have been laid waste, the denuded land forgotten by spoilers who moved on to continue their depredations in other fields. Thoughtless farmers have contributed to their own undoing by single-crop programs, which aid and abet erosion. As a result, floods have raged one season and rivers and wells have gone dry the next.

The problem of erosion—both water and wind—calls for concerted action. Property owners and governmental agencies must join in combatting its devastating effects. Nor is there any danger that the seriousness of the situation will be overstated. It cannot be overstated. We will either meet the problem with an adequate solution or an unrelenting nature will present a bill that will throw a once prosperous and fertile region into economic bankruptcy.

VOTE FOR THE BOND ISSUE!

Shall the City of St. Louis be authorized to borrow money and issue bonds, in the sum of $3,600,000, for the purpose of providing for the support, maintenance and care of children and sick, aged and insane, poor persons and paupers, and for poor relief and of providing and maintaining charitable facilities and services?

That is the language of the bond issue proposition to be submitted to the voters next Tuesday. We strongly urge them to scratch NO and vote YES.

It should be emphasized that passage of this bond issue involves no increase in taxation. The bonds will be paid, interest and principal, by proceeds from tolls collected on Municipal Bridge.

The bond issue will not take a penny from the pockets of St. Louis taxpayers except in so far as they use the Municipal Bridge.

The money will be used for relief of the unemployed, but it will be only a small share of the total sum spent for that purpose. Of the total monthly relief bill in St. Louis of approximately $1,000,000, the City of St. Louis must pay only about $150,000.

Contributions from Federal and State governments make up the remainder, or about $850,000.

Passage of the $3,600,000 bond issue is necessary if the city is to be assured of continuance of Federal and State contributions.

Heretofore, the city's share has been met from the $4,600,000 bond issue of 1932. That money is all gone. More must be raised.

It is estimated that the $3,600,000 will take care of St. Louis relief needs for two years.

Scratch NO and vote YES. And remember that, by voting YES, you are not increasing taxes 1 cent.

A TRAVESTY.

In a certain religious order, monks greet each other by the Latin equivalent of "Remember death, brother." It is not a very cheerful salutation, but, in lives devoted to self-discipline, it serves a useful purpose. It is not very cheerful, either, to drive through the streets of St. Louis and encounter crosses painted at the places where fatal automobile accidents have occurred. We believe, however, that these crosses have a sobering effect. They serve to dramatize and localize the Mayor's safety campaign.

Far more persons are killed by automobiles than need be. There is no reason why we cannot learn, so to speak, to live with a vehicle which, while ministering tremendously to the convenience and pleasure of mankind, is causing so many frightful tragedies. It is a test of our good sense that we learn how streets crowded with automobiles, each one a potential killer, can be made reasonably safe to all who exercise a reasonable degree of caution.

Obviously, one of the most important steps to be taken is to revise the practice by which anyone who has the money to buy a car is permitted to drive one. There are certain persons who should be barred automatically by virtue of obvious physical or mental defects. There are others who are temperamentally unsuited, who have demonstrated time and again that they lack even the modicum of good judgment without which driving becomes a perilous adventure.

All this, of course, is primer stuff. Yet the people of Missouri have been unable to get from their Legislature a drivers' license law to put this primer stuff into effect. It is truly a travesty on government that Missouri long ago has not denied the use of automobiles to the incompetents who now freely threaten life every time they appear on the streets.

SALUTE TO COL. BUCHAN.

Col. John Buchan, a member of Parliament for the Scottish universities, has been appointed Governor-General of Canada. Between bouts of more serious work, Col. Buchan writes stories of mystery and adventure. On the strength of "Mr. Standfast," "The Thirty-nine Steps" and "Greenmantle," we venture the observation that if Col. Buchan proves to be one-half as good a Governor-General as he is a story teller, he will deserve every honor the British Empire can give him.

NEWS REEL.

Nicholas Roosevelt says war in Europe is "an inevitability," and Henry S. Haskell, Carnegie Endowment officer, says war in Europe is "improbable"; New York man is unhurt when two cars of subway train run over him, and St. Louis man, taking setting-up exercises, dislocates neck vertebra; Gen. Greely, who reached "farthest north" in 1882, gets Congressional Medal, and Gen. Tilho of France gets 100,000-franc award for work, still uncompleted, in saving Lake Tchad from drying up; thousands of tons of Kansas soil are blown away in dust storm, and world's second largest meteor, weighing 700 pounds, is found on Kansas farm; Senator Long says U. S. has 20,000,000 unemployed, and Gen. Johnson says he doubts U. S. has even 10,000,000 unemployed; London man, 75, becomes father of a son, and Memphis (Tenn.) man, 36, becomes grandfather; 12 men are discharged from relief jobs at Springfield, Mo., for drinking whisky, and whisky is ordered for toothless relief recipients at West Cork, Ireland; committee named by Secretary Ickes urges increase in gasoline price because "practically every Eastern refiner is operating at a loss," and one oil company reports total salary of 13 officers is $263,400 annually.

MR. BARUCH'S STEWARDSHIP.

Bernard M. Baruch has told the Senate committee investigating the munitions industry how he managed his finances as chairman of the War Industries Board. His report was prompted by remarks on the Senate floor and by radio arraigning his fitness to serve as head of the committee appointed by President Roosevelt to prepare a plan for taking the profit out of war.

It was shown that when Mr. Baruch was called to war-time Government service, he divested himself of holdings that were likely to increase in earning power or value. He converted stock interests into Government securities. He played square.

The story of Thomas Jefferson is familiar: how, when a young man, thrifty, industrious, prospering and on his way to wealth, he resolved never to increase his fortune while in the public service. Mr. Baruch, the evidence shows, adhered to that standard of Jeffersonian deportment.

A STATUTE FOR ILLINOIS TO REPEAL.

The Judiciary Committee of the Illinois Senate is to be commended for reporting out the bill of Senator James O. Monroe of Collinsville to repeal the so-called treason code, under which 15 men were arrested in Montgomery County and held through much of last year as a result of participation in relief demonstrations. This statute, a product of the war hysteria, is not only ill-advised but unworkable, as the experience in the Hillsboro cases demonstrated. All that Montgomery County and Illinois got out of them was widespread unfavorable publicity, for in the end the men were freed on pleas of guilty to another much milder charge. The Illinois Senate should pass the repealer and the House should concur.

SHINE ON, POINSETTIA.

The scheme of a local magician to extract rubber from the poinsettia is not a pretty tale. Two investors have lost more money in the adventure than any two, or multiple of two, can afford to lose in these days of budgetary surveillance. Besides, misrepresentation has been alleged, and an indictment has been returned.

The poinsettia is, of course, wholly blameless. It is more than blameless. It is a gay blade, a rubric spirit. It is too merry a member of the flora family to be broken on the wheel of industry. Its mission in life is to be a bright banner, untainted by commercialism, as useless as a ruby, and as wonderful.

The botanical gods knew what they were about when they awarded the task of producing rubber to the rubber tree. If an ally must be found, or a substitute enlisted, why pick on the poinsettia? Why not commandeer the parsnip?

The Wagner Labor Bill

OPPONENTS of the Wagner labor bill have been saying that it would set up a "labor dictatorship," and Senator Wagner has declared that there is not a scintilla of truth in the charge. No one, I believe, will ever know which of these contentions is true. For if the bill were passed, it could not be made to work, and instead of a labor dictatorship or the opposite, it will simply produce interminable and inconclusive litigation and dispute.

In his explanatory statement accompanying the bill, Senator Wagner says that Section 7A is being reduced "to a sham and a delusion," and that "everybody needs a law that is precise and certain." He is right on both counts. But if ever there was a law that is not precise and not certain, it is his own bill.

The purpose of the bill is to use the power of the Federal Government to protect the right of wage earners to organize in order to bargain collectively. The first question that arises is: What wage earners are covered by the bill? The answer is important if we are to have a precise and certain law.

Senator Wagner's answer to this vital question of jurisdiction is completely and absolutely vague. His bill proposes to draw the Federal Government into all labor disputes about the right to organize that are "affecting commerce." Here at the outset is the material for an endless series of law suits. It would take years for the Supreme Court to define the practical meaning of a phrase that is as broad and as woolly as Senator Wagner's.

The trouble is that Senator Wagner is trying to extend the Federal power over labor relations as widely as possible. It would have been more statesmanlike to have begun by limiting the Federal Government's responsibility to the cases it might hope to deal with effectively. Senator Wagner may think he has hit upon a device for stretching the Constitution. What he has really done is to impose upon the Government a responsibility it cannot possibly meet.

His bill leads labor to think that the Federal power protects unionization in every town and in every industry in the United States. But the fact is that if the courts do not deny this power, the sheer difficulties of administration will nullify it. Thus, in one way or the other, we shall have another sham and delusion.

* * *

Having embraced all commerce vaguely, the bill then defines the "rights of employes" which are to be enforced by civil and criminal sanctions. These rights are also magnificently not precise and not certain. An employer may not "interfere" or "restrain" or "coerce" or "dominate" or "encourage" or "discourage" the organization of wage earners. A board of three men in Washington is entrusted with the simple task of deciding whether an employer in San Francisco discouraged John Smith from joining the ABC union and encouraged him to join the XYZ. It is preposterous to put such a burden upon mortal men, and it is in the last degree foolish to lead labor to think that the Federal Government is as omnipotent and as omniscient as this bill requires it to be.

The trouble here is that Senator Wagner is trying to use the cumbersome process of litigation to enforce vague "rights" when there is a much simpler way of protecting the rights he is trying to protect. This is the method of elections conducted by the Federal Government. It is administratively possible for the Government to conduct a secret ballot. That has been demonstrated. The secrecy of the ballot is the best possible protection against individual coercion and intimidation, and the presence of Federal election inspectors during the balloting would go a long way to prevent other forms of coercion.

It is true that in Section 9 Senator Wagner provides for elections. But this section, which ought to be his main reliance and the most carefully worked out part of the bill, is vitiated at the start by a complete misapprehension. It declares that "representatives" chosen by the majority of the employes in a unit shall be the exclusive representatives of all employes in such a unit, "though individuals or minorities may present grievances."

The trouble with this is that it assumes elections will show a clear majority of all the employes. That is a mistaken assumption. If the Senator will reread the famous decision of the National Labor Relations Board in the Houde case, he will see that this very decision upholding the majority principle clearly recognizes that it applies only when there is in fact a majority.

"Nor does this opinion lay down a rule," it says, "where, in an election, representatives have been chosen by a mere plurality of the votes cast or by a majority of the votes cast but by less than a majority of all employes entitled to vote."

In the automobile industry, which must be fairly typical of the non-unionized industries, there is no clear majority for anybody. Seventy per cent of the voters are unaffiliated with any labor organization. Now what does Senator Wagner expect the Government to do in a situation like that? How is it to determine who has the exclusive right to speak for all the employes?

It would have to evade the question or make an arbitrary choice. But suppose it does somehow "certify" the exclusive representatives. What then? Is it going to try to force the employers to reach an agreement with them, and if so, how is it going to force an agreement?

The underlying fallacy of the whole bill is that Senator Wagner has not distinguished between protecting the right to organize and promoting union organization. The right to organize can be protected by elections. But the elections may not, as in the automobile industry, promote unionism. The bill is made quite unworkable by the wishful thought that a free choice will somehow result in A. F. of L. unions.

* * *

Now, the Federal Government has no power to promote unionism. I am not referring to constitutional power but to actual power, assuming that there were no constitutional limitations. Unless it rigged the elections by forcing employes to choose between a union ticket and an anti-union ticket, unless it denied them a really free choice of their representatives, it could not create majorities where they do not exist. It has no business to try to create them and no warrant to mislead labor to think it can or will create them.

It is a bad bill. It extends the scope of the Government's responsibility beyond the Government's power to discharge that responsibility. It sets up undefined rights and proposes to enforce them by the cumbersome process of litigation and prosecution. It distorts the device of elections by the untrue assumption that elections will show a clear majority.

The administration and Congress will settle nothing by passing this bill. On the contrary, they will multiply many times the troubles they have had with Section 7A, the law suits, the non-compliance, the disappointment of labor.

The bill should, I believe, be scrapped and a wholly different bill drafted. It should be limited to a relatively small number of large industries that are unmistakably interstate in character. For these industries, Government intervention backed by legal compulsion should be limited to the conduct of free elections. Beyond that the Government should make no effort at compulsion to promote unionism or collective bargaining, but should confine itself to mediation and conciliation.

This much it might hope to do effectively. To attempt more than it can do effectively is to create trouble for everyone.

State "Ambassadors"

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

ARIZONA, an up-and-coming State, has decided to send an "ambassador" to Washington to watch over the interests of the State, and particularly to make sure that Arizona gets its full share—or a little more—of any Federal funds that are to be doled out to the 48 states. Although this is a spectacular case, it is merely an example of what has been going on for some time. It represents two interesting and unfortunate tendencies in our democratic system of government.

The one tendency is for cities, states and other units of government to become appendages of a prospering central Government. With its superior sources of revenue, and particularly with its ability to borrow from the banks on a colossal scale, the Federal Government has put the states and local communities on a gigantic dole. The ancient device of "Federal aid" for road-building and education is a petty trifle compared with the enormous benefits paid out to subdivisions today. The inevitable result is to give the states and cities the attitude of humble petitioners, when they ought to be managing their own affairs.

The other tendency evident here is that of distrusting the chosen representatives of states, counties and the people generally. Arizona evidently does not think much of her Senators, if she has to send an "ambassador" to Washington also. Other states and likewise cities are doing much the same thing. The Governor of Ohio has made some visits to Washington, as has the City Manager of Cincinnati. They must be considered special envoys, however, rather than ambassadors, since they do not set up embassies in the capital.

If the chosen representatives of the people in their state legislatures and in Congress are not competent to represent their communities, we should find better ones or devise a better system of representation, and not send watchers to supervise our regularly elected delegates. To be sure, many special interests have powerful lobbies at Washington, and there is some justification for states and cities which send their lobbies to protect their particular interests. But such tactics inevitably break down further the character and functioning of legislatures.

The remedy must be found in restoration of local responsibility for local affairs, and in the reform of our legislative system to insure adequate representation of the whole people, in terms of their economic and social interests, as well as their geographical grouping.

Control of Profits and Prices the One Sure Way to Win a War, Former NRA Chief Writes.

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

OKMULGEE, Ok., March 29.

TWO events of yesterday are important. Mr. Baruch testified with effect before the special Senate Committee on war profits. Hitler demanded equality of armament with France. The latter is a forecast of European war. The former shows us a way to keep out of it.

Provisions for putting a ceiling on war prices, eliminating war profits and drafting or mobilizing industry will make this nation the most powerful engine for defensive war the world has ever seen. I doubt whether European nations realize this, and I am sure our own people do not.

Formerly, war was a matter of maneuvering relatively small armies to a point of combat and fighting a few decisive battles. Modern war is a problem of ranging an army as wide as the frontier against another equally wide in masses so deep that neither can maneuver, then digging in. From that phase on, the issue depends on which can hurl the greatest tonnage of metal and gas against the other.

It is a contest in industrial and agricultural production and that, in turn, means a battle of national credits and financial resource.

If there are no profits, if by swift organization and firm control, peace industry can be quickly converted to war production—if, above all, there are no runaway war prices, the nation thus blessed will win any war against a nation of equal or even greater economic and military strength which has not so provided. Equally important, the crushing aftermath of war—paying for it—will have been very much lightened.

In the World War it took us a year to get our industry converted to war uses. Right up to the Armistice, it was not working at full efficiency. We suffered such run-away prices that the war cost us twice as much as it would have cost with a controlled price structure. In other words, we would have been helpless for a year against any enemy who could have attacked at once in mass, and the blood of our resistance—money—was ebbing away twice as fast as was necessary.

At that, we did better in rapidity and efficiency of mobilization, and in price control, than any other belligerent. The war cost the others about three times as much as it would have cost if they had put a ceiling on prices, and they were slower in converting their industries to war uses.

It is a fact that the Allies were licked on the financial front, as well as on the industrial front, when we came in to save them. The rise in war prices saddled them with debts so great that many of them were repudiated.

We learned more about industrial and price control than they ever suspected. The Nye Committee will see this if it digs deep enough. If the Congress enacts a bill applying our lessons in the World War, it will have done much to render us impregnable to attack, and hence immune from war.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

JUST a year ago one of the Merry-Go-Rounders took a swing through Western Pennsylvania and New York, which he found almost universally enthusiastic over the New Deal. Below is published the results of a trip just completed through Western Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURGH, March 29.

WHEREVER you go in this, the industrial heart of the nation, you will find universal agreement that business is better. People knock on wood mentally when they say it, as if they were afraid the big bad wolf of depression would pop out from around the corner the very next instant. But they do admit it.

Wherever you go, also, you will find agreement on another important point—that Roosevelt is slipping. And with him has slipped also the enthusiasms which once were pinned on the New Deal.

It is not merely a political catastrophe. It is a human tragedy. For the light of hope which the President's name kindled in people's eyes one short year ago was a hope born not of faith in party labels, but in Roosevelt's promise of a genuine new deal.

New Deal.

THAT light no longer kindles. Its disappearance is due chiefly to two factors:

1. The party label has been uppermost. Joe Guffey, Democratic Senator and spoilsman of Pennsylvania, has brushed away all illusions on that point. His motto has been that of Jim Farley: "A job for every Democrat and a Democrat for every job." Merit, ability, service have mattered nothing to Joe.

2. The New Deal has turned out to be the Old Deal, dusted off and refurbished with a few new alphabetical agencies.

THIS, undoubtedly, is the opinion of the majority in the area around Pittsburgh and extends into Western New York, in Buffalo and Rochester. What they see is a growing cleavage, an increasing gap between two classes.

On one hand is the fact that one-fourth of the population of Allegheny County—the city of Pittsburgh and its suburbs—is on relief. Every day a total of $65,000 is spent for feeding them.

On the other hand stand the balance sheets of the big Pittsburgh companies; and more striking still are the figures of the Mellon fortune.

Mellon's Millions.

THESE have been droned out day by day in the dull voice of H. M. Johnson, Mellon's confidential secretary, and not one of them has been missed by Mr. Mellon's townsmen.

On Dec. 31, 1931—in the middle of the depression— their No. 1 citizen set his personal wealth at $97,603,605. This did not include $68,000,000 in Coalesced Co., the organization which the Government claims Mellon set up in order to reduce his income tax. The profits from this company were paid to him.

This did not include the art collection, valued at $19,000,000, which was given to the capital only a day or two before the income tax case opened.

Also it did not include the $14,000,000 given to his children, Paul and Ailsa, in 1927 in order to see what they could do with money.

Again, when he was appointed Ambassador to London, Mellon gave his two children $8,000,000. Next, just on the eve of sailing, he gave them another $5,300,000. Then from London he cabled them 200,000 shares of Gulf Oil stock (worth $6,000,000) plus 45,000 shares of Standard Car.

Again he telephoned from London and ordered $1,250,000 to be given to them.

In Pittsburgh, Mr. Mellon's income tax maneuvering at a time when he was charged with income tax collection has depreciated his personal stock to a low ebb.

Mellon's Guffey.

MR. MELLON, of course, had nothing to do with the New Deal. But Pittsburghers see no great political difference, except for party label, between him and the effulgent Joe Guffey.

For years Joe has played the Mellon game and voted the Democratic ticket. Today he has not changed. He campaigned for Roosevelt and the New Deal, simultaneously is being credited with thwarting New Deal policy by preventing a labor election in the famous Weirton Steel Mills case. Joe got a healthy campaign contribution from the Weirton owners.

However, George Earle, Pennsylvania's first Democratic Governor in years, has turned out to be the one real asset to the Roosevelt administration. After a campaign in which he touched a high-water mark for intellectual lethargy, Earle pulled himself together and is winning a reputation for dynamic honesty and ability.

He captured many Pittsburgh hearts when he withheld a $1,200,000 State grant from the University of Pittsburgh until he could investigate Chancellor Bowman's handling of free speech.

Crusader Earle.

STORMING Pittsburgh's snooty Duquesne Club, Earle exercised his right of ex-officio member of the board of trustees to tell the university authorities what he thought of them.

"If this democracy is to continue in America," he said, "there is nothing more important than freedom of speech and freedom of the press. If we're going to have Communism, it will result from this suppression.

"Our greatest danger is from reactionary private interests concealing the truth from the people and giving demagogues a chance to distort it."

George Earle is the one asset Roosevelt has in Pennsylvania. It will take many more of him if the New Deal is to repeat its record of 1934 and again capture this rock-ribbed home of Republicanism for the Democratic party.

LITTLE THEATER PLAYS PRIZE-WINNING PIECE

"Tom Jones," Adaptation From Novel, Opens Spring Repertory Season.

By COLVIN McPHERSON.

AFTER 187 years as an English classic, Henry Fielding's rambling novel, "Tom Jones," came to the stage of the Little Theater last night as a three-act, 12-scene drama which the producing organization won in a prize contest last year.

Whatever might be Fielding's complaints today, the author of the adaptation, a young actor named Robert Wallsten, can hold no grudge against the Little Theater. "Tom Jones" has received a handsome performance, one in which the dramatic group has overcome nearly all its obstacles except those offered by the play itself.

The play, it must be said, is quite coherent, follows the novel in movement and dialogue and gives indication of some impression of the characters as they appear to the reader of the original work. Yet it lacks both the mature humor so characteristic of Fielding and the necessary improvisation to go beyond mere eighteenth century portraiture.

The amusement the playwright offers his audience is chiefly that of hearing Tom's illegitimacy and the traditional association of the sexes described in boldest English, and repeatedly.

Last night's audience, made up of the Players Club, found its own fun, however, in hissing the villain and applauding the hero.

* * *

ROBERT TIEMAN has the role of the foundling Tom who takes something over two hours to prove his right to a good name and the love of the beautiful Sophia, daughter of Squire Western. Tieman, an experienced and sincere Little Theater actor, found himself at a disadvantage in a role that made him frequently ridiculous, yet proved himself sportsman as well as actor.

Blair Boyle made a particularly radiant and gracious heroine of Sophia, her first part with the Union boulevard company. Gordon Sommers as Squire Western, Catherine Wade as Miss Western, Bert Igou as John Blifil and a half dozen minor actors were genuine.

Stage settings, by Gordon Carter, remain the Little Theater's chief excellence. Such a statement is not made to belittle the production generally which, as said earlier, is quite adequate, but merely to afford proper compliment to work such as is seldom found on the dice-size stage which Carter has to work with. The 10 separate sets are colorful, in good taste and always sufficient to the action going on in front of them.

"Tom Jones" will be presented again tonight and tomorrow night. Through April, it will share a repertory schedule with "Her Master's Voice," a comedy which receives first performance next Wednesday night.

MANY APPLY FOR APARTMENTS IN NEIGHBORHOOD GARDENS

J. A. Wolfe Says Requests Almost Equal Number of Homes to Be Provided.

About as many families as can be accommodated in the new Neighborhood Gardens, housing development at Seventh and Biddle streets, have applied for apartments in the building, which will be ready for occupancy the coming summer. There are apartments for 252 families, and J. A. Wolf, manager of the Gardens and director of Neighborhood Association, has had nearly that many applications.

Telling of the progress of the project at a Sandwich Forum luncheon at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, Wolf said he was having forms of leases drawn up in English, Italian and Polish. He anticipates that families of foreign extraction will be in the majority among the tenants. The 3-room, 4-room and 5-room apartments will rent from $19 to $33 a month, including gas for cooking. The buildings, and adjacent play space, occupy the block bounded by Seventh, Eighth, Biddle and O'Fallon streets.

ROSA PONSELLE SINGS AT THE AUDITORIUM

Metropolitan Opera Soprano Displays Great Voice in Uneven Program.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

ROSA PONSELLE, the distinguished dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., gave a recital last night at the Municipal Auditorium. She appeared—after a rather embarrassing delay caused by fiscal disagreements with the local management—as the fourth attraction in the concert series being offered by Oscar Condon.

After using her opening number as a set of limbering up exercises, Miss Ponselle proceeded to dazzle her audience with what is undoubtedly one of the great voices of the twentieth century. It had an unabated freshness, depth, flexibility, power, a consistent quality throughout its entire range, and it was displayed with a wealth of emotional urgency. Miss Ponselle obviously believed in giving until it hurt. Added to this was an exuberant Mediterranean beauty, which created an immediate predisposition in her favor, and a capacity for the most exacting and the most precise sort of interpretation.

The word capacity is used advisedly for Miss Ponselle's stylistic possibilities were not consistently realized. She did not give her audience credit for much imagination either in the building of her program or in the way she pointed up her songs. But although she was capable of destroying the effectiveness of Schubert's "Erl Koenig" by underscoring the already obvious, she quickly proved that it was not due to any lack of comprehension by singing de Fontenailles "A L'Aime" with gravity and restraint. "Marietta's Lied" from Eric Korngold's opera, "Die Tote Stadt," was also delivered with discrimination and—at the same time—with no lack of the necessary dramatic emphasis.

Beyond the three numbers mentioned, her program ranged all the way from the innocuous to the faintly objectionable, unless one excepts the "Habanera" from Carmen which she sang as one of her numerous encores. Even so, it could scarcely be called a wasted evening. In the presence of such opulent gifts, no normal person could remain unmoved.

HARRY SODINI ARRESTED HERE ON CHICAGO CHARGE

Indicted There Accused of Possession of Bonds Stolen in $237,000 Holdup.

Harry A. Sodini, former owner and manager of several St. Louis hotels, was arrested by detectives today at Seventh street and Washington avenue, as a fugitive from Chicago, where he was indicted with 38 others four weeks ago, on charges of conspiracy and possession of bonds stolen in the $237,000 holdup of postal clerks Dec. 6, 1932.

He was held at Police Headquarters for Federal authorities. Chief Postal Inspector Noah notified the United States Attorney's office in Chicago and was informed a fugitive warrant for Sodini would be sent here tomorrow so that he might be taken to Chicago.

Detective Sergeant Cliffe said he and Detective Sergeant Firle passed Sodini on the street, remembered reading of his indictment, and arrested him. Sodini gave his address as 4135 West Pine boulevard. At the time of his indictment it was reported he was living in St. Paul.

The defendants, among them John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, politician, were accused of conspiring with three men, since killed, and four unidentified persons said to be leaders in the actual robbery, to dispose of the stolen bonds. One of the meetings, it was charged, was held in St. Louis. One of the alleged co-conspirators was Gus Winkler, former St. Louis gangster, who was killed in Chicago.

PAVING OF HIGHWAY 22 WEST OF MEXICO, MO., ADVOCATED

Delegations Ask That 25-Mile Stretch Be Improved From PWA Funds.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, Mo., March 29. — The State Highway Department is being urged to concrete State Highway No. 22, from Mexico west to U. S. 63, near Sturgeon, to care for growing travel over the route.

Delegations visited T. H. Cutler, chief highway engineer, this week, to seek the inclusion of this mileage in work scheduled to be done when Missouri is allotted highway funds on enactment of the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill yy the national Congress.

The concrete is sought to replace gravel surface on highway 22, a 25-mile route linking U. S. 63 with U. S. highway 54, here at Mexico. The route traverses Centralia and Sturgeon.

Bill for Commemorative Coins.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — A bill for the issuance of half dollars to commemorate the four hundredth anniversary of the Cabeza de Vaca expedition and the opening of the old Spanish trail, was approved today by the House Coinage Committee.

TIME EXTENSION FOR TESTIMONY BY UTILITY CONCERNS

House Group to Hear Cities Service and Associated Gas Opponents of Wheeler-Rayburn Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The House Interstate Commerce Committee heard further predictions today that dire results would follow enactment of the Wheeler-Rayburn utilities holding company bill and decided to extend time for its opponents to testify.

Cities Service and Associated Gas and Electric companies will be heard. Chairman Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, said he hoped to complete the hearings next week.

Attacking the measure, which would abolish utility holding companies in 1940 and regulate utilities stringently before and after that time, S. R. Inch, president of the Electric Bond and Share Co., told the committee "we are facing inevitable destruction" under the measure.

Large Investments in Gas.

He contended it would force his company to divest itself of natural gas properties in which it had made large investments as well as its American and Foreign Power Co., which he described as a pioneering effort in the foreign field.

"The bill would result in the destruction of Electric Bond and Share and of its service corporation," he predicted, describing the latter as an organization of technical talent.

The witness said he thought it would be impossible to divest his company of voting control in its subsidiaries in an effort to force it into the status of an investment trust, as has been suggested in some quarters as an alternative to outright abolition of utility holding units. He maintained it was a necessary function of the holding company to have voting power if it were going to develop utilities under its supervision.

Purpose of "Write-ups."

Representative Pettengill (Dem.), Indiana, pressed Inch as to whether the purpose of "write-ups" in acquiring other companies had not been to issue securities against the boosted value shown on the books. The utilities executive said that, while he did not know the exact purpose of every "write-up" listed in the Federal Trade Commission's report of its inquiry into his company, he assumed that, when books were opened on new companies, values had to be fixed and that presumably the directors appraised the acquired properties at what they thought the values were at that time. Since, he pointed out, the "write-ups" had been written down dollar for dollar.

TO ! FOR THIRD TIME FO LING OBSCENE NOTES

Charles G. Lovekamp, 74, Who Wrote Letters to Women, Gets Year and Day.

Charles G. Lovekamp, 74 years old, was sentenced to the penitentiary today for sending obscene letters through the mails, for the third time in 11 years.

Lovekamp's attorney, appointed by the Court to defend the prisoner who has been in jail, in default of bond, for the last 10 months, told Federal Judge Davis his client was "a sick man," and observed that the Judge "might best conserve the interests of justice by sending him to some institution where he could be cared for."

"I don't know of any institution that can care for him as well as the one from which he came," the Judge replied. Taking cognizance of the time Lovekamp has been in jail awaiting trial, Judge Davis sentenced him to a year and a day in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

Federal Judge Faris sentenced him to a year and a day in 1924 and to four years in 1926. All of Lovekamp's obscene letters were to women.

PRESIDENT SIGNS ZINC CODE

Provisions, Effective April 8, Apply to 12,800 Persons.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The zinc code, one of the last to go through the NRA mill, has been approved by the President, effective April 8. The code affects about 12,800 persons employed in the industry, about two-thirds of them underground. A maximum 40-hour week is prescribed, with minimum wages varying between 30 and 47.5 cents an hour. An eight-hour daily limitation is placed in the maximum hours provisions.

An impartial investigator is to be appointed to review conditions in Mississippi Valley, Southern and Southwestern districts of the mining division of the industry to determine the adequacy of wage provisions. The code is to be administered by a code authority of six voting members, five from the American Zinc Institute, Inc., and one from companies outside the institute.

NAZIS HOLD NUNS AND MONKS UNDER FOREIGN EXCHANGE LAW

Occupants of "Numeous Catholic Convents" Charged With Exporting $1,000,000 in Currencies.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 29.—Police said today that an unspecified number of nuns and monks had been arrested in "numerous Catholic convents" because they violated laws prohibiting the exportation of foreign exchange and other laws making mandatory a report to the Reichsbank of any foreign exchange held by any German citizen.

The police said that numerous searches in monasteries and convents in the middle of March established the violations but in the interest of further investigations, no details could be given.

It was said that at least 2,500,000 marks ($1,000,000) worth of foreign currencies and shares were involved. The alleged offenders were presumed to be chiefly in institutions near the German border.

FLOWER SHOW OPENS TOMORROW AT ARENA

Mayor Dickmann and Gov. Park Will Speak on Program at 2 P. M.

Gardens representing foreign lands and many localities in the United States, and innumerable varieties of cut flowers from four seasons of the year, have converted the three buildings of the Arena into a wonderland for the Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show, which opens officially at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The show will close the night of April 7.

The opening program is scheduled to include talks by Mayor Dickmann, Gov. Park and George H. Pring, president of the St. Louis Flower Show Association. The Rev. Dr. C. Oscar Johnson will pronounce the invocation. Henry G. Berning, general chairman, will formally open the show. A dance of flowers by 150 school children and a concert program will be features of the opening. The Arena doors will be opened at 1 p. m.

Inspired by National Show.

Plans for the show, the first of its kind to be given in St. Louis, originated in the success here two years ago of the National Flower Show. It is a civic enterprise and co-operating in the promotion were nurserymen and florists' organizations, civic clubs, garden clubs, park departments, landscape men, civic, business and church organizations.

The value of the exhibits was estimated at $1,000,000 by Chairman Berning, and $35,000 will be awarded in prizes. The displays will cover seven acres of floor space or about two acres more than the 1933 National Show.

Tons of earth, rock and sod for gardens were hauled into the Arena during the past week. In the amateur division in the west building, women prominent in garden clubs of St. Louis and vicinity, have been busy in aprons and gloves for days, erecting their exhibits. More than 200 workmen were employed in laying out other gardens.

48 Complete Gardens.

An unusual feature of the show is its 48 gardens, 28 in the east building and 20 in the west building. There are 10 covering 3200 square feet of space, arranged with seasonable shrubs and flowers in bloom; nine of 1600 square feet, with different designs, representing a desert garden, Japanese garden and foundation plantings, and 23 others from 200 to 1000 square feet each.

There is an Ozark garden, different in design from the one which attracted nation-wide attention in the National Show. Another, by a St. Louis florist, is a reproduction of the thatched cottage and garden of Anne Hathaway at Shottery, England, one of the hamlets of Stratford. It is an authentic reproduction, according to the designer, which includes in its planting English varieties of plants. Members of the Public Library staff assisted in research for authentic material. Miss Margaret Ann Keaney will represent Anne Hathaway in the setting.

Enviable displays of aristocrats of the plant world, such as the rhododendron and azalea, one from the collection at Shaw's Garden, are constructed.

The orchid exhibit from Shaw's Garden collection, one of the finest in the world, is said by members of the Garden staff to be among the best ever shown in the United States. It includes a collection sent here by Sir Jeremiah Colman of England, a leading orchid connoisseur.

Other garden features are a Grandmother's Garden around a vine-covered cottage, showing popular plants, cactus gardens, annuals, perennials, and a number of bulb gardens, displaying colorful tulips, hyacinths, narcissus and other varieties. Evergreens, too, are displayed in attractive groupings.

Exhibitors have been preparing their stock of a year. To compete successfully, many plants of nearly any kind of flower must be grown in order to get the required number for exhibition purposes.

Roses on 8-Foot Stems.

Cut flower classes number more than a hundred and plant classes more than 60. Of particular interest are exhibits of roses, some with stems eight feet long. There are new varieties of roses being shown.

The Garden Club exhibits cover 10,000 square feet of floor space in numerous displays of seasonal plants, house plants, table decorations, flower arrangement, hanging containers and cut flowers. The amateur displays will be judged by popular vote.

Besides roses in many varieties, the cut flowers include exhibits of carnations, sweet peas, stocks, pansies, snapdragons, lupines and others. Decorative foliage plants and ferns are shown in a dozen classes.

Dr. George T. Moore, director of Shaw's Garden, is chairman of the committee to judge the garden exhibits. John Noyes, landscape designer, and August Koch, horticulturist of the Chicago Park Department, are other members of the committee.

Expert to Judge Displays.

Dr. J. Horace McFarland of Harrisburg, Pa., one of America's outstanding rosarians, president of the American Rose Society, and author of publications on plant life, including roses, will judge the rose displays. He will address a public meeting of the St. Louis Horticultural Society next Friday night at Soldan High School.

After tomorrow, the show will open at 8:30 a. m. and will close at 11 p. m.

13-MILE WATER PIPELINE WORK WILL BE RESUMED

Had Been Suspended Because of Controversy; Built to Improve South Side Service.

Work on the 13-mile pipe line from the Stacy Park reservoir, Olive street and Warson roads, to Grand boulevard and Eichelberger street, suspended last November because of a controversy with contractors about coating the pipe, will be resumed next week, Water Commissioner Daily said today.

The line of steel pipe, from 48 to 60 inches in diameter, will improve water service in South St. Louis where pressure falls during the summer. The cost of the improvement is $1,150,000, of which $360,000 was provided by a PWA grant, the remainder coming from surplus Water Department revenues. Completion by July is expected.

The line has been brought to a point on North and South road about 500 feet north of Clayton road. In following Clayton road to McCausland avenue, it will be necessary to remove part of the paving. Daily said a 10-foot slab on the south side of the center line would be removed in 1200-foot sections so as to provide a minimum of interference with traffic. The paving is 60 feet wide.

THREE PERSONS BURN TO DEATH

Woman, Girl and Baby Trapped in Their Home.

By the Associated Press.

WOBURN, Mass., March 29.—Mrs. Catherine Mercon, 49 years old, her daughter, Virginia, 10, and grandson, Francis, six months, were burned to death in a fire that swept a two-family house three miles from the center of the city, early today.

Five other members of the Mercon family, the father, John T. Mercon, and four sons escaped. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doubleday and their three children, occupants of the first floor apartment, also escaped. The fire was discovered by Doubleday, who awakened the families. Mercon and the four boys reached a rear bedroom window and fled to a sun porch, thence to the ground. Mrs. Mercon and her daughter were trapped in the rear bedroom, off the sun porch, as they made efforts to reach the porch. The baby, in an adjoining bedroom, was in a baby carriage.

FINGERPRINTING BILL GOES TO STATE SENATE

House Passes Criminial Code Measure—Seven Others Pending.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 29.—A criminal code reform bill, which would require the fingerprinting of all persons arrested in Missouri on felony charges, and permanent filing of the prints, was passed today by the House, by a vote of 94 to 4. The bill now goes to the Senate.

The bill is one of eight measures in a criminal code reform program sponsored by the State Bar Association. It was the only one of the eight bills voluntarily reported by the House Judiciary Committee, which attempted to kill the remaining bills. The House later voted to override the committee and placed all of the Bar Association bills on the calendar, notwithstanding the adverse report by the committee.

The fingerprinting bill is the least important of the several measures and encountered no opposition on the floor when it was called up today for passage.

Three of the Bar Association bills are pending on the calendar for passage and four others are on the calendar for perfection. One of the bills awaiting passage would require a defendant in a criminal case, if he planned to offer an alibi, to give notice of such intention at least 10 days before the date set for trial. Another requires a similar advance notice if a defense of insanity is to be offered. The third provides higher qualifications for bondsmen and is designed to remedy defects in the present law on bail bonds.

Only one other criminal code bill has passed the House so far this session and is pending in the Senate. It is a bill recommended by Gov. Park, which would shorten the time for perfection of appeals from convictions in felony cases. The present law allows 12 months for perfection of an appeal. The Governor's bill, as passed by the House, would cut the time to four months, with authority for the trial judge to grant a 60-day extension, for good cause.

HARRIMAN THINKS GOVERNMENT IS IN BUSINESS TO STAY

ten to the soothsayers and to quack doctors of the body politic, not with enthusiasm, but because they are told that neither of the old parties has the ability to solve the problems of the day. The oracles are speaking in Delphic terms, and the people are interpreting these new sayings in the light of their wishes. Give them work and wages, and the gas bombs of the demagogues and the mirages of the soothsayers will be as harmless as the puff balls and the thistledown of the fields."

The President has a definite objective, Harriman said, and it is personal security for the people—security of investments, security for bank deposits, security in the price level, security for children, security against the sweatshop and ruthless exploitation of labor, security against the vicissitudes of unemployment, old age, sickness and accident. We may not be in accord as to many of the steps taken, but we must admit an idealism in the President's purpose, and must subscribe to his conviction of a greater need of economic and social security."

Business men, he said, approve of some of the emergency measures now in effect, and he mentioned, as having general approval, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Farm Loan Corporation, Civilian Conservation Corps and direct aid to the unemployed.

As to NRA, Harriman cited the vote of the national Chamber of Commerce that a new emergency act should replace the present law; that a further trial period of two years should be set for code regulation of industry; that the act should be limited to interstate industries "which can be policed," and that Section 7A, providing for collective bargaining, should remain unchanged in form.

He made a positive declaration against the 30-hour week bill, saying it would result in 20 to 25 per cent increase in prices, with decreased consumption and consequent unemployment. "America needs more, not less, production," he said, "more wealth, not more poverty." He expressed opposition of the Chamber to provisions of the Wagner labor disputes bill.

Outlining the need for the Agricultural Adjustment Act as an emergency measure, Harriman said the act had met with considerable success, but must be reconsidered with a view to permanent legislation. He said exportation of farm products, particularly cotton, must be fostered.

"I would suggest," he said, "that we examine the possibilities of paying a parity bonus on the portion of the cotton crop which is used domestically, and permit, with some regulation, the exportation of the balance of the crop at world prices. If the Southern cotton farmers receive parity prices for domestic cotton, they can well afford to get a world price for the balance of their crops.

Spreading Processing Taxes.

"In the second place, I believe we should review our farm commodity taxes and see whether they cannot be spread over a larger group of articles, instead of being imposed on the processing of a few commodities. I hope pending legislation granting drastic licensing power to the Secretary of Agriculture will not be enacted."

Balancing of the budget at the earliest possible time is essential, the speaker said. As to relief methods, he outlined the policy of combined direct and work relief, advocated by the national Chamber. The four billion dollar work relief appropriation now approved by both Houses of Congress should be reduced to two billion dollars, he said, as there is a $1,500,000,000 unexpended balance of previous appropriations.

Unemployment relief legislation, Harriman said, should not apply to agricultural, domestic, casual and temporary employes, and should provide for deducting at least one-third of the payroll tax from workers' wages. He said the plan proposed in the pending bill would soon reach a cost of $600,000,000 a year. The old-age pension system, he said, would impose a burden of $1,500,000,000 a year on the public treasury. If such a measure is to be passed, he said, the Federal portion of the payments should be a grant-in-aid to states which wish to enact pension laws, and the states should not be compelled to join.

Social and economic security will be obtained ultimately, Harriman predicted, chiefly through abandonment of marginal land now used by agriculture, and by decentralization of city populations.

Discussing the holding company bill, Harriman attacked the requirement that companies with widely distributed holdings of utility stocks must be dissolved by 1940. He said the prospect of dissolution at a definite future time would "act as a pall on the industry, prevent financing needed extensions, handicap the revival of capital goods industries, and depress stocks below their real worth." He also opposed any attempt to make electric companies common carriers and a similar attempt as to natural gas pipe lines.

Harriman reviewed "our blessings," saying farm income had risen in two years from less than five billion dollars to nearly seven billion dollars, and that the annual pay envelope showed 50 per cent more wages than in 1933. The debt of the Federal Government, he said, is $215 per person; that of Great Britain, $833 per person; and the total Federal, state and municipal debt is $373 a person, against $1014 for Great Britain.

About 600 persons heard Harriman. At the speaker's table were Mayor Dickmann, A. Rottermich, Clyde Miller, Joseph Zipf, W. O. Flake, Jacob M. Lashly, Frank M. Mayfield, Frank C. Rand, Walter W. Head, Sidney Maestre, A. P. Greensfelder, Dr. W. F. Gephart, F. B. Eiseman, Alfred Fairbank, John G. Lonsdale, George B. Markham, E. A. Henne, William H. Bryan, George M. Berry, W. B. Jones, Charles Rogers, Luther Ely Smith, John R. Longmire, W. L. Alexander and Scott R. De Kins.

that the bond cost should be prorated to the estates on approval by the Probate Judge, with the express direction that the total charge should not exceed the amount of the premium on the general bond.

The vote in the committee was a tie on the question of reporting favorably the bill making mandatory the appointment of the public administrator in will contest suits, thus keeping the bill in the committee, which does not have another meeting until next Thursday.

It is expected the bond bill will be passed in the Senate with the committee amendments, the opinion being that there is doubt of the present legality of the practice of Public Administrator Sheehan and others in charging bond costs to the individual estates.

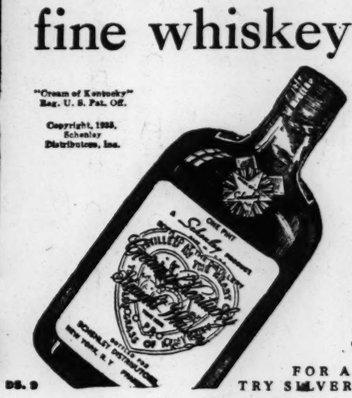

Even if the other bill should be reported eventually it apparently has little chance of passage.

Nurses discover a "miracle cream"

brings new beauty—by correcting Skin Faults

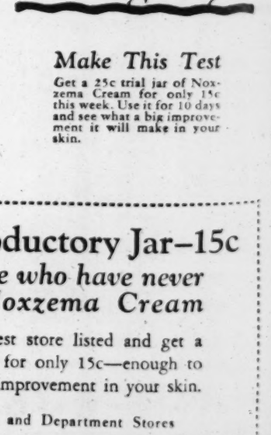

IF YOU want a softer, finer, lovelier complexion—try this new kind of medicated cream—that brings new beauty by relieving and correcting beauty-destroying skin faults.

Doctors first prescribed it for burns, eczema, and other skin troubles. Nurses noticed how it relieved and softened irritated, red, chapped hands. They used it on their faces to help clear up pimples, blackheads, large pores and other beauty-marring skin troubles. Largely through their recommendations, Noxzema Skin Cream has become almost overnight one of America's most popular skin remedies! Over 12,000,000 jars of Noxzema are used yearly.

Nature intended everyone's skin to be beautiful—and most complexions would be were it not for common skin faults like Blackheads, Chapped Lips, Large Pores, Pimples, etc.

Noxzema is a snow-white, greaseless, dainty, medicated vanishing cream. Applied at night, or as a foundation for powder, its medication sinks deep into the pores, cleanses away deep-seated pore poisons, soothes irritations. Its gentle astringent helps reduce pores and soften skin to exquisite fineness.

Try Noxzema and see for yourself what glorious relief it brings. Note how soothing it is—how refreshing. Note how improved your skin is after leaving Noxzema on overnight! Get a jar of Noxzema and use it until skin irritation has been relieved and skin faults disappear.

DEMOCRATS HAVE G. O. P. SCHOOL SLATE

Waechter and Jimmy Miller Said to Have Dictated the Selections.

Members of the Democratic City Committee have agreed informally and virtually unanimously, the Post-Dispatch learned today, to support William J. Hough and Edward A. Ferrenbach, Republicans, for election to the Board of Education next Tuesday.

Ten days ago Chairman Hannegan of the Democratic Committee had said the committee probably would support Hough and Arthur A. Blumeyer, a Republican incumbent seeking re-election.

An informed member of the committee, who would not permit use of his name, said today that many members had favored Blumeyer, but that Chairman Waechter (Dem.) of the Election Board had supported Ferrenbach, while Justice of the Peace Jimmy Miller, Fourth Ward boss, had been for Hough. As a result, this informant added, the committee kept Hough on its slate and switched from Blumeyer to Ferrenbach. Friends of Blumeyer made unsuccessful efforts to retain the support for him.

Waechter said he had not sponsored Ferrenbach's candidacy, but had told friends who inquired that he and Ferrenbach attended St. Louis University law school together. He said he did not know that committee members would not slate Blumeyer. Miller asserted today that he had not made up his mind which Republicans to support, but an associate sadi Miller would back Hough and Ferrenbach.

Discharged by Rosecan.

Hough was discharged as an Assistant Prosecuting Attorney by Prosecuting Attorney Rosecan Dec. 27, after Hough had dismissed two indictments charging Jimmy Miller with misdemeanors in connection with the November election and consented to the quashing of a third charge. Rosecan, who left office Dec. 31, reinstated the charges against Miller, which subsequently were dismissed by Rosecan's successor.

Under the new bipartisan school board law, voters will vote for two Republicans and two Democrats for the board. Politicians, anticipating that the Democratic party would carry the city election Tuesday, have concluded that the backing of the Democratic committee would be an important factor in the Board of Education contests.

On the Democratic ticket, "Duke" Sheahan, undertaker; Thomas F. Quinn, president of the Building Trades Council, and Joseph J. Ward, lawyer, apparently have obtained a close division of support from the Democratic committee. Miller has come out for Sheahan, a resident of his ward, and for Ward. It seemed likely that whichever two of these three candidates could attract the largest following outside the Democratic machine might stand the best chance of election.

Leaders Deny "Great Interest."

Democratic politicians have disclaimed having a great interest in the Board of Education election, asserting there was little patronage involved.

The school board candidates will be listed on a separate ballot, under the new law; formerly, under the nonpartisan method, they were listed on the last column of the blanket municipal ballot. Heretofore many voters failed to express choices for school directors. Waechter was of the opinion the new method would result in an expression by 90 per cent of the voters.

A campaign in support of four candidates sponsored by the Citizens' School Board Committee, a nonpartisan civic body, has been undertaken by the committee. It has sponsored the candidacies of Mrs. Henry S. Caulfield and Albert J. Davis, Republicans, and Quinn and Frank B. Coleman, Democrats. It has begun distribution of 150,000 leaflets showing how to vote for its candidates and giving their biographies briefly. Campaign workers, to solicit votes before Tuesday and to serve outside the polling places at the election, have been recruited from parent-teacher organizations, clubs and church, welfare, civic and other groups.

Statement by Chairman.

"The danger to our schools under the bipartisan law, if the election is left to the mercy of partisan politics," said Elmer B. Klein, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, "is so apparent that it behooves every citizen to be on the alert and to vote for the candidates who will serve unselfishly on a non-partisan basis. This is the sole reason for the committee's activities and we are determined to make the campaign as thorough as possible. To accomplish this end, organized activity is being carried on throughout the city. It is a citizens' campaign, non-sectarian and non-partisan."

All candidates for the Board of Education were invited to address the Real Estate Salesmen's Association at the Annex Hotel yesterday as to their attitude on the school tax rate. Only Coleman and G. Howard Willett, another Democratic candidate, appeared. Samuel L. Wimer, a Republican, and former Alderman, who presided, said the association desired lower taxes without impairing school efficiency. He asserted that the absence of many candidates from the meeting indicated that politics was entering the election.

"If we get a slate presented by Jimmy Miller or some other man," he added, "Gold help the Board of Education."

Coleman and Willett agreed that efficiency of the schools should be maintained, and Coleman said he would insist on getting full value for every dollar spent.

"I have no thought of trying to make any trades with any political leaders," Coleman continued. "None has been offered. I would accept the office only for the honor. If in order to get it I had to truckle with ward politicians and put up money for votes, there wouldn't be any honor in it.".

Missing Red Bud Family Returns.

HARRISBURG, Ill., March 29.—A wide search for the family of Dr. C. G. Smith of Red Bud, Ill., missing since Tuesday, ended early yesterday morning when local authorities received word the group had returned home. Mrs. Smith, her 5-year-old daughter, Emily; her father, the Rev. W. E. Hauff, and his niece, Elsie Linn, 31, of Mitchell, Neb., had not been heard from since Tuesday afternoon when they left a radio station here after the wife participated in a women's club program. Investigators here said Dr. Smith called them early this morning saying the family had returned. Automobile trouble, the officers said, had delayed the party's trip home.

NEWARK LEDGER STRIKE SETTLED

Guild Members Who Walked Out to Be Reinstated; Dismissals Arbitrated.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., March 29.—The trustees of the Newark Morning Ledger and the officers of the Newark Newspaper Guild signed an agreement last night ending a strike of Ledger editorial workers which began Nov. 17.

The agreement calls for immediate reinstatement of all striking employes and immediate dismissal of all employes hired since the strike began with the exception of the editor.

The cases of eight dismissed employes, whose discharge was one of the causes of the strike, will be negotiated between the Guild and the trustees. If no agreement is reached the cases will be arbitrated by a three-man committee to include one Guild appointee, one representative of the trustees and Judge Edwin C. Caffrey of East Orange, N. J.

Negotiations will be conducted also for a contract governing hours and wages. If these negotiations fail the question of a contract will be arbitrated by the committee.

The agreement was proposed by P. W. Chappell, Federal mediator sent here by Secretary of Labor Perkins at the request of President Roosevelt.

Signers of Agreement.

The agreement was signed by Henry S. Puder and George W. C. McCarter, as trustees, and by Emmet Crozier, president, and Robert C. Ring, vice-president of the Guild. It was later signed also by Vice-Chancellor Maja Leon Berry, who named the trustees to replace L. T. Russell, publisher, in active management of the newspaper.

Crozier said the agreement had the status of a contract to remain in force for the duration of the trusteeship.

The Guild agrees to abandon strike activity and "to co-operate fully in re-establishing good will toward the Ledger throughout the territory served by it."

"The Guild looks forward to helping make the Ledger a better paper than ever before and proving its value to the newspaper industry," a Guild statement said.

"By becoming the first newspaper in Newark to operate its news department under a Guild contract, the Ledger will assure itself that good will of the public and—in particular—labor, which has backed the Guild.

"The settlement represents a substantial victory for the principles for which the Guild stands. The strikers go back with full recognition of their rights and with protection against discrimination and a machinery set up to insure permanent improvement of their working conditions."

Protection of Employes.

The agreement protects the returning employes from "demotions, discharges, or discriminations" because of Guild membership or strike activity.

"If an employe feels he has been discriminated against, the Newark Newspaper Guild may refer his case to the Arbitration Committee," the agreement said. "The findings of such committee will be accepted by both sides as binding."

The trustees agreed to retain all the reinstated employes for at least 30 days.

"If subsequently there shall be any dismissal for the purpose of economy, the said dismissed employes shall be rehired before new persons are hired for a similar class of work," the agreement said.

The Arbitration Committee was given final power to decide all questions of dismissal notices and bonuses, vacations and sick leaves.

Nathan Goldberg, secretary of the Guild, said the agreement would mean the reinstatement of 36 striking workers, including reporters, photographers, editors and clerical workers. a

Goodyear "Strike Test" Vote.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., March 29. — The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. assembly, with tabulation of the "strike test" vote still incomplete, announced today that 11,536 employes had voted against striking and 891 for a strike. The tabulation was made on 91 per cent of the ballots. Announcement of the vote came as union leaders considered the appeal of Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts that the union strike vote set for Sunday be called off.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The pending Wheeler-Rayburn public utility holding company bill, in its outline of congressional policy, states that the "national interest requires the exertion of Federal control over the transactions and practices of public utility holding company and their subsidiaries" and adds that such control would materially affect the accounting practices and rate, dividend and other policies of such companies.

Although many of the advocates of the bill have repeatedly insisted that regulation and the gradual elimination of certain greatly diversified holding companies would in general help the consumer, Senator Wheeler (Dem.) of Montana, co-author of the bill, yesterday gave the Senate the first detailed account of how it was expected this purported benefit to the consumers would be brought about.

Wheeler, in the course of a two-and-a-half-hour speech devoted to the strictly holding company portion of the bill, said that consumers of electric power would be benefited in the four following ways by passage of the bill: (1) Elimination of "write-ups" of operating companies; (2) elimination of excessive service charges on the operating companies by the holding companies; (3) freedom from absentee control, and (4) local management more responsive to local regulation.

"Drain" on Operating Utilities.

Wheeler insisted that operating companies had been drained by holding companies through various channels and as an example, pointed out that the Federal Trade Commission investigation had disclosed how holding companies had charged their operating companies with Federal income taxes and then offset these taxes by losses of other subsidiaries. The benefit of consolidated returns, Wheeler said, had not been shared with the operating companies.

Such consolidated returns were prohibited last year by an amendment to the tax laws introduced by Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho.

Commenting on "write-ups," Wheeler began by pointing out that the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of "91 operating companies in holding company control having combined assets of nearly $3,307,000,000 disclosed write-ups and other improperly capitalized items amounting to not less than $842,995,000" of about 34.2 per cent.

"These write-ups," Wheeler said, "have in many cases been the basis of the issuance of securities to the public, thus watering the capital structures of both operating and holding companies and eventually bringing down the wrath of the consumer on the operating companies because of the rate policies such watering compelled the companies to follow.

"Water" in Rates.

"The utility interests argue that the water has had no effect on the rates to the consumer. But practical results do not support the theory that write-ups do not affect utility rates. As Judge Healy of the Securities and Exchange Commission pointed out in his testimony before the House Intrestate and Foreign Commerce Committee, the management of the over-capitalized holding company has only one source of revenue to avoid default on its securities or disappointment to its investors and that source of revenue is the income of the operating companies it controls."

Wheeler quoted the accountant of a New York State legislative committee which is investigating public utilities to substantiate his contention that "write-ups" affect consumer rates. This accountant, according to Wheeler, said:

"It would seem that the higher the price paid for control of a holding company, the greater is the need of the latest owner to avoid rate reductions by the underlying operating companies, in order that a profit may be earned on investment in the stockholding company.

"I know that a lot of people do not agree with me about that, but I think it is a very important point, because if I pay $50,000,000 more for a certain property than the previous owner did and thereby obtain control of underlying operating companies, it seems to me that if I figure a return of 6 per cent on $50,000,000, I have got to get $3,000,000 more a year out of my investment than he did, and my only source of revenue is going to be the same underlying operating companies that he had, and I have got to either effect economies or I have got to do something to try to get that required additional return.

"So if somebody should ask me, for example, to agree to rate reductions, I think it is only human that, consciously or unconsciously, there is a tendency to oppose them because of the necessity for getting a return on this additional investment."

Cites "Write-Up" Examples.

Wheeler again quoted Judge Healy, former general counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, to show that Florida Power and Light Co., a member of the Electric Bond & Share system, was formed in 1925 by the consolidation of a group of Florida operating companies. Wheeler said that total fixed assets of the Florida holding company were written up approximately 126 per cent, or $35,807,799 above the then book value of $28,213,209.

"It may be more than a coincidence," Wheeler observed, "that the rates for service in the territory served by this company are the highest in the United States for residential service, in cities of 100,000 and over.

"In the New York Times of March 8 appears a statement of John E. Mack, counsel of the New York State Legislative Committee I just referred to, to the effect that the write-up on the books of the New York State Electric & Gas Corporation, an Associated Gas & Electric subsidiary, not only figured in the temporary rates fixed by the Public Service Commission but is still in the rate base and is costing the consumers over $200,000 a year. This finds corroboration in the report of the Federal Trade Commission which shows that in the years from 1924 to 1929, $10,913,123 was placed on the books of the New York State Electric & Gas Corporation, as appreciation or write-up."

"Another chief source of holding company revenue in the past has been service fees from subsidiaries—for construction, financing, auditing, tax assistance, etc. Let's look at that business to judge how sound is that source of revenue. Cities Service Co. nicely illustrates the business of making profits out of construction for subsidiaries.

"Cities Service maintained a Lakeside Construction Co., purely as a dummy paper organization through which it passed contracts in carrying out construction jobs for its subsidiaries. Lakeside had no staff of its own. When it was given a contract it contracted, in turn, with Cities Service to do the actual construction and to supply engineers, architects and other experts.

"In 1923, Cities Service undertook through the Lakeside Construction Co. to construct a plant at Valmont, Colo., for one of Cities Service subsidiaries, the Public Service Co. of Colorado, operating in Denver. The cost of construction, as computed on the books of Lakeside Construction Co. was slightly less than $4,500,000. That figure included the salaries of the Cities Service experts on the job and special contractors' and engineering fees paid Cities Service Co. For this job, Public Service Co. of Colorado, the operating company, paid Lakeside Construction Co., the dummy construction company, over $10,000,000 par value in securities of Public Service Co. of Colorado. Furthermore that $10,000,000 in securities was paid in advance of construction and during the period of construction the subsidiary paid the dummy construction company dividends and interest on those securities amounting to almost three-quarters of a million dollars.

"The operating subsidiary, therefore, paid almost $11,000,000 for the construction of a plant the cost of which was less than $4,500,000 as the holding company computed its own records.

Holding Company's Profit.

"The securities which the operating subsidiary gave the dummy construction company were transferred immediately, without even notation on the books of the construction company, to Cities Service, the top holding company. When Cities Service received these securities it kept out of them for purposes of control the common stock of two and a half million dollars par value, and then sold bonds and debentures to the public for almost six and three-quarter million dollars cash. The actual construction, you will remember, had cost according to the Cities Service books, less than four and a half million dollars. So that at the end of the transaction Cities Service had a cash profit of over two million dollars in addition to the two and a half million dollars par value common stock of the operating subsidiary which it retained, and in addition to its contractors' and other fees.

"This is the kind of transaction which earned Cities Service dividends."

Wheeler did not state the amount at which the Colorado company carried the Valmont plant on its books or the value placed on the plant for rate making purposes by the State Utility Commission.

"Helps, Not Hurts, Industry."

Asserting that "all propaganda to the contrary, the holding company bill, helps, not hurts, the operating utility industry," Wheeler insisted that regulation and the ultimate retirement of the holding company would mean for the operating company the end of holding company tribute through stock jobbing and upstream loans.

"It will mean," he said, "the end of pressure for dividends and high rates, of pressure for service, management and construction fees which have in many instances imperiled the rights of the senior security holders of operating companies by the draining of surplus, the depletion of resources and the unsound application of operating funds.

"It will mean the end of an absentee control which is certain to cause perpetual local political trouble, and will distinguish in the public mind the holding company and the operating company upon which the public's indignation is now being visited indiscriminately because of holding company excesses and holding company power.

"All these advantages of holding company elimination are, to my mind, utterly essential to the readjustment of relations of operating companies and the public to a point where there is an even chance that the private operating utility industry can hold its own against the growing demand for municipal plants."

Absentee Control.

Commenting on absentee control, the Montanan said:

"Decent light and power service is too important to the local communities of this country to hang upon the hazard of the fortunes of a handful of holding companies in the big financial centers. And judging from experience in other fields, I am not so sure how long the utility holding company will carry a local subsidiary's debts if it becomes possible to scale them down in bankruptcy without loss of control.

When freed of the burden of holding company tribute, operating companies serving a single, good-sized community, or a system of operating companies serving a geographically and economically integrated territory can afford, if necessary, to adjust rates to meet public demands. And when freed of association with the high finance and politics of absentee holding company management, those operating companies can adjust their own relations to the communities they serve without the "Power Trust" handicap they have to carry in competing with the municipal plant idea.

"An operating system whose management is confined in its interest, its energies and its profits to the needs, the problems and the service of one regional community, is likely to serve that community well, to stick to the operating business, to be amenable to local regulation, to be attuned and responsible to the fair demands of its public, and to get along with its public to their mutual advantage.

Years ago it was

Sassafras Tea

YEARS AGO mothers used to give sassafras tea, sulphur and molasses, or some other "spring tonic" for "spring fever."

"Spring fever," with its days of listlessness, is many times nothing more or less than plain, ordinary constipation—due to insufficient "bulk" in the meals you eat.

Your grocer supplies the modern way to correct this condition . . . in a delicious cereal called Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Two tablespoonfuls daily of this pleasant, natural food furnish the "bulk" required to maintain regular habits. How much better than taking old-fashioned "spring tonics." ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B, and food-iron, an important element of the blood.

Of course, if you feel actually ill, after being cooped up indoors all winter, you should consult your doctor. ALL-BRAN corrects only common constipation, makes no claim to be a "cure-all."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into delicious muffins, breads, waffles, etc. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

WHEELER ARGUES FOR HOLDING FIRM BILL IN SENATE

"A regional system with each company confined to consolidation of its own territory will offer no more chance for territorial raids at fantastic prices by which for 15 years competing private empires kept the operating business in turmoil. Essentially local systems will tend to operate utilities rather than play with high finance. And essentially local enterprise is far less likely than the wandering Corsair to accumulate political and economic power entirely out of proportion to what the public can permit any private power to be.

"Over and against these considerations of public policy, the doubtful private advantage of diversification of risk put forward as the justification for sprawling holding company systems is unimportant. This sort of diversification of risk is the function of the individual investor or the investment company, not a company which is itself managing the business in which it invests."

Wheeler said that the United States Supreme Court had upheld the right of a government to require the dissolution of large corporate units.

"The history of the dissolution of the Standard Oil Co.," he said, "and of the even more complicated dissolution of the American Tobacco Co. under the Sherman Anti-trust Act demonstrates that in the case of really solvent companies assets may be segregated and a common voting control broken without any disastrous consequences to investors which it is claimed will occur if this bill passes and which it was claimed with equal vehemence would occur under the Sherman Act.

Regarding the forced liquidation of securities, Wheeler said that in an opinion delivered by Chief Justice Taft in Continental Insurance Co. vs. U. S., Reading Company Et Al, 259 U. S. 156, the Supreme Court had expressly stated not only that it would not, in a reorganization compelled by public policy, require a sale of assets under conditions which would involve an unnecessary sacrifice of values, but that it would sever and readjust even a mortgage lien in order to make possible a fair and equitable reorganization in conformity with a declared policy of Congress.

COMMITTEE OPENS FIGHT ON MISSOURI RACETRACK BILLS

The Rev. C. Oscar Johnson and Dr. C. E. Gilliland Talk With Legislators at Jefferson City.

STATEMENT ISSUED DENOUNCING PLAN

Charges Measures Are Sponsored by St. Louis County Operators "to Benefit Gamblers."

The Committee in Opposition to Race Track Gambling in Missouri has launched its fight on the measures legalizing pari-mutuel betting on races, which have passed the two Houses of the Legislature.

The Rev. Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, pastor of Third Baptist Church and chairman of the opposing committee, and another member, Dr. C. E. Gilliland, visited the Legislature yesterday and talked with members of the Senate and House. Dr. Johnson said today:

"As the Senate has passed the Wisdom bill and sent it to the House, and as the House has passed the Hess bill and sent it to the Senate, our job is to keep either House from passing the other's bill, or agreeing on either of the bills in conference."

The other members of the committee are Mrs. E. S. Pillsbury, Oreon E. Scott, the Rev. Dr. George A. Campbell, J. J. Searcy, Fred T. Rench, Fred Denby, George W. Sutherland, the Rev. Dr. C. W. Tadlock, W. W. Martin, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Armstrong, Chester J. Prince, C. W. Hanke, Orron D. Evans, Tom Elliott, the Rev. J. P. Meyer, G. Geitz, H. W. Becker, Mrs. L. C. Post, the Rev. R. L. Duckworth, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lowe, Mrs. Richard Buffum, Arthur T. Morey, the Rev. George M. Gibson Jr., Forrest C. Donnell, the Rev. Dr. S. B. Campbell, Mrs. E. T. Smith, Brig. Victor Lundgren, the Rev. Dr. W. B. Lampe and H. H. Reinhardt.

Committee's Statement.

The committee, in its statement, says that it speaks for the Church Federation and Ministerial Alliance, representing 550 churches of the St. Louis metropolitan district, with more than 175,000 members. The committee says:

"The origin of the Hess bill, introduced by Representative Hess of St. Louis, seeking to legalize dog-track betting in St. Louis and St. Louis County together with horse-track betting throughout the State, can be traced directly to the influence of the owners of idle dog track equipment in St. Louis County, who, in recent years, have attempted to operate in defiance of the law. Dog racing is merely a gambling device. It has no standing as a sport, and almost everywhere it is promoted it is sponsored by individuals of unsavory reputation, out to pick the pockets of the poor. We cannot believe that the representatives of the people of Missouri will deliberately enter into contractual arrangements, making the State a partner with this same element that heretofore has defied the law. We believe we have the right to ask that our Legislature conduct a searching investigation into the background and the aims and purposes of the individuals who will benefit by this legislation.

Out of Public's Pocket.

"The other bill pending is known as the Wisdom bill, not because of any wisdom that has gone into its writing, but after its sponsor, Senator Wisdom. Here is another piece of legislation, ostensibly for the public good, but actually drawn in terms of such liberality that the gamblers could not have gotten any more had they drawn the measure themselves. Eleven and one-fourth cents of every dollar wagered goes immediately to the promoters. Two cents more of each dollar is taken out for the State for the privilege of allowing the gamblers to prey legally on our people. (It will be noticed that the gamblers are NOT paying for this privilege; the money comes out of the public's bets.) Tracks near St. Louis and Kansas City would pay a daily tax of $800 and $500, respectively.

"For the sake of comparison, we submit that the Fairmount Jockey Club, in Illinois, opposite St. Louis, formerly paid $2500 per day and now pays $1000. Its promoters have been greatly satisfied with their take-out of six and one-half cents and waive the breakage in favor of the State. They keep these odd cents under the Missouri bill. Senator Wisdom has provided another benefit for Missouri in his bill by arranging for a Racing Commission to cost about $15,000 annually and to be paid for, not by the gamblers, mind you, but out of the general revenue of the State.

"Ludicrous Arrangement."

"Unable to offer a single plausible reason for the bills, the sponsors resort to the argument that the State needs revenue, and here is a way to get some. This is the pawn, offered to secure the support of conscientious lawmakers seeking honestly to solve the State's financial dilemma. If the primary purpose of these measures is to get revenue, why, we ask, are the bills drawn to reduce the State's share to a point below even what the gamblers have been willing to pay to operate in other states? A competent sports authority, commenting on the bills, stated that the provisions of the measures would assure the State less than $79,000 in revenue. But we add, the gamblers will make millions. The arrangement is ludicrous.

"Racetrack gambling history repeats itself. No community in which it becomes established is ever the same clean, safe, sane, decent place it was before. No state regulation has ever curbed these open cesspools of vice. The very nature of the thing attracts the worst in society. Even well-meaning members of the racing fraternity have never been able to keep racetrack gambling honest. Horse-doping, stuffing sponges in horses' noses to interfere with breathing, blocking hoofs to prevent running, crooked jockeys, crooked trainers, crooked owners—every possible combination to defraud the public goes hand in and around the racetracks. As for promoters' "love for horses," a honeyed phrase often used to influence favorable legislation, let the record of inhuman treatment to the animals speak against that deceit.

Affect on Business.

"The people of Missouri want no partnership with the gamblers. They want no revenue wrung from broken homes and broken hearts, from cheating fellow citizens, ill-gotten gains from the disgraced, from absconders and embezzlers, victims of greed. Our county fairs and our schools have a better chance to succeed without gambling support. Legitimate business does not want the gamblers' yoke fastened around its neck. Merchants in other racetrack states offer facts to support their complaints that the gambling produces hysteria and interferes with the orderly routine and peace of the community, with buying, and that it leaves in its wake nothing but unpaid bills and a general moral and business breakdown."

NEBRASKA STATE SENATOR FOUND GUILTY OF FELONY

Jury Convicts Him of Receiving $1200 Worth of Property Stolen From Truck.

WAHOO, Neb., March 29.—State Senator Joseph F. Kaspar was convicted today of a charge of receiving stolen property by a District Court jury.

The State charged the Senator received $1200 worth of property stolen from a motor truck near Schuyler last June.

The trial began last Monday and the case involved one of four charges against the Senator. The charges followed a fight in Omaha last month in which a policeman and Roland Welch, 26 years old, were killed. Welch's companion, Ernest Garrison, 21, is held under a first degree murder charge.

EAST ALTON WATCHMAN ENDS LIFE WITH SHOTGUN

Pushes Trigger With Stick; Leaves Directions for Burial in Note to Wife.

Ernest Black, 32-year-old watchman for a sewer pipe company, was found shot to death today in the kitchen of his home at East Alton. Black, who had been in ill health, apparently had pushed the trigger of a shotgun, pointed at his head, with a stick, found beside his body.

He left a note to his wife, who had gone to work, bidding her goodby, and directing his burial in a cemetery near Webb City, Mo., where he formerly lived. A 12-year-old daughter also survives.

CITIZENS' PATROL IDEA HELD UP BY PROTEST

City Employes Say Motorists Would Resent "Snooping," Bickering Foreseen.

Organization of the citizens' patrol, which Mayor Dickmann suggested to report violations of traffic regulations, was held up yesterday when the idea met with objections from city employes who were to have served as the nucleus of the group.

Traffic Engineer Gonter, who presided at what was to have been the organization meeting, took no definite action, but said he would report the objections to the Mayor and leave the final decision up to him.

Twenty-eight city employes, one from each ward, attended the meeting, held in the office of the Board of Public Service. These employes, who have been active in previous administration endeavors, were each to have chosen 10 members of their ward organizations to serve with the citizens' patrol.

Criticism of the proposal came chiefly from three assistant City Counselors, although others voiced objections. Louis J. McKeown suggested the public would look upon members of the patrol as snoopers. Such activities by city employes, he said, would be ineffective and would create antagonism toward the city administration.

David McMullen said motorists whose driving was criticised by a patrol member would be entitled to confront their accuser. This, he said, would lead to angry debate and controversy, as it does even in Police Court when motorists confront police officers concerning whose authority to enforce traffic regulations there can be no doubt.

John T. Hicks said the trouble was not that policemen did not make enough arrests, but that in the past they had not received the co-operation of the Police Courts. It happened sometimes, he said, that a policeman would sit around in a courtroom all day waiting in vain for the case in which he had made an arrest to be called. A few of these experiences, he said, tended to develop a 'what's the use" attitude on the part of traffic policemen.

Most of those present felt that the Mayor's safety campaign, which began officially Monday, had proved to be effective and did not need the Citizens' Patrol to help it. Gonter pointed out that there had been only one traffic fatality in the last 11 days. If that rate could be maintained, he said, there would be only 35 fatalities annually, compared with 170 last year. He added that only eight traffic accidents were reported Wednesday, in contrast with the usual daily total of between 30 and 40.

FOUR PLANS FOR GETTING LAND FOR FEDERAL SHELTERBELT

Purchases, Leases, Donations and Buying of Easements Are Approved Methods.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Federal officials have adopted a land acquisition policy for the great plains shelterbelt intended to encourage farmers to maintain trees planted in the 100-mile wide zone from Canada to Texas.

Four types of land acquisition suggested by Paul H. Roberts, acting director of the shelterbelt project, were approved by Rexford H. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture. They are: Leases for reasonable minimum periods, with provision for extensions at the Government's request and options to purchase at a stipulated price; purchase of easements by which the right of the Government to occupy lands for forest purposes shall be dominant over other rights; donations of land, and purchases of land.

Less than one-fifth of the area will permit typical forest plantings and narrow strips of trees, intended to take advantage of the most favorable soil and climatic conditions, will dominate most of the remainder of the zone.

NEW POLITICAL LISTING MOVE IN STATE SENATE

Quinn Introduces Resolution Providing Highway Employes Name Party.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 29.—Defeated last night by a House Committee in his efforts to throw the State Highway Department into politics, Senator William M. Quinn of Lewis County came right back in the Senate today and introduced a resolution which would require all Highway Department employes to furnish their political affiliations to the Senate within 10 days.

The House Committee on Official Fees and Salaries had killed Quinn's bill, previously passed by the Senate, which would have required employes of all State departments except schools to list their politics in the Blue Book, the official State manual. That bill was in general terms, but Quinn's resolution today mentions only the Highway Department, which is governed by a bipartisan board.

Quinn moved for immediate adoption of the resolution today, but Lieutenant-Governor Harris, ruled that it must lie over for a day. This means that it probably will be taken up Monday.

Quinn's Resolution.

The text of the resolution follows:

"Whereas the General Assembly appropriates millions of dollars of public money to the State Highway Department; and

"Whereas this body and the public in general are entitled to know certain facts regarding employes of the State Highway Department, because of the fact that there is, and has been in the past, continual dispute as regards these facts;

"Therefore be it resolved that the State Highway Department be requested and directed to furnish to the Secretary of the State Senate the following information regarding each employe, (except those employed at common labor); the name, salary, politics, previous occupation, and home address at time of appointment; and

"Be it further resolved that this information be furnished within the next 10 days or as soon thereafter as possible."

Likely to Go to Committee.

When the resolution comes up on Monday it can be adopted, rejected, or can, by a majority of the Senate, be sent to a committee for further consideration. It enjoys the advantage of not having to be sent to the House for concurrence. Only one member of the House committee voted to report the Quinn bill favorably last night.

Quinn's previous bill was passed by the Senate by a vote of 25 to 8, six Democrats and the two Republicans voting against the measure. A resolution needs only a bare majority, or 18 votes, for adoption. There is little doubt but that a motion will be made on Monday to send the resolution to committee. Senator McReynolds, who fought Quinn's previous bill, began today to make such a motion, but refrained when informed that the resolution would have to lie over.

The Highway Department will have $18,000,000 of State and Federal funds to spend this year and is expected to receive an additional $27,000,000 out of the $4,800,000,000 Federal Public Works bill if that bill passes Congress.

The department employs about 3000 persons, none of whom have ever been required to list their politics for purposes of receiving employment. Several of its chief officials are personal Republicans, but they have not participated in partisan politics.

Socialist Public Meeting Tonight.

The South Central branch of the Socialist party will hold a public meeting at the Soulard branch library, Seventh street and Lafayette avenue, at 8 o'clock tonight. Edward Schmidt will speak on "Waste of Capitalism," and John R. Powell on "The Economic Consequences of the Profit System."

TO THE PEOPLE OF ST. LOUIS

The Gas House Workers' Union No. 18799 yesterday morning called a strike of its members who work for the Laclede Gas Light Company. The strike was called without notice to the Company.

Apparently the only purpose of this strike is to force the Company to recognize the Gas House Workers' Union, a minority of the employees, as the sole bargaining agency for all employees of the Company. The company does not intend to interfere with, or attempt to force its men into any organization which they do not choose to join.

As far as wages are concerned, The Laclede Gas Light Company is now paying 1929 wages to its employees for a shorter hour week.

For approximately 90 years The Laclede Gas Light Company has given unfailing service to the community and will do everything that is possible to insure that such service will continue uninterrupted.

Any interruption to the service will not be due to any acts of The Laclede Gas Light Company.

HOUSE COMMITTEE APPROVES AMENDMENTS TO AAA LAW

Provisions Included for Encouragement of Agricultural Exports.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — The House Agriculture Committee approved amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act today including a new provision for encouraging exports of farm commodities. The vote was 13 to 10.

The measure, which is not on the administration's list of needed legislation, generally is considered as increasing the Secretary of Agriculture's powers to deal with handlers of farm commodities, although AAA officials sought only "clarifying" amendments to avoid delays for the program through adverse court decisions on some of the broad provisions of the original act.

One of the committee's changes included authorization for paying exporters to move agricultural surpluses. This would permit the levying of special processing taxes for the exportation of surpluses. The Secretary of Agriculture also may use rental benefit payments for that purpose if he sees fit.

Another provision written in by the committee authorizes the appropriation of 30 per cent of gross customs' receipts to be put in a separate fund for use in encouraging exportation of agricultural products. The tariff revenue also may be used under the same provision for the buying or leasing of additional sub-marginal lands and to pay new rent benefits.

TECHNICAL ARMY AIR SCHOOL PROPOSED FOR CARTHAGE, MO.

Project Is Placed Before General Staff at Washington by Representative Short.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The General Staff of the army has before it a proposal for the establishment of a technical air school at Carthage, Mo.

The proposal was placed before the staff by Representative Short, who presented a brief, drawn by the Carthage Chamber of Commerce. In presenting the brief, Short asserted flying conditions are favorable in the region and that ample abandoned land for a bombing range is available. Such a range is a requisite of a technical school.

The request was first presented to Major-General Benjamin B. Foulois, chief of Air Corps, who referred it to the staff. Carthage's attempt for an air school was inspired by the recent announcement that the school at Rantoul, Ill., was to be moved. Short said he gained the impression in conversations with army officials that no schools are to be moved but probably some new ones will be created.

WHEAT CLOSES LOWER, CORN AT HIGHER LEVEL

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 29.—Wheat futures closed lower after an irregular range while corn was fractionally better at finish. Advance in sterling was cited as an early bullish factor. Expectation of some moisture was stressed late.

Winnipeg wheat opened unchanged. The close was net unchanged.

Liverpool wheat came ⅜ to ⅝d lower in one cable after opening unchanged to ⅛d higher. The close was ½d to ⅝d net lower.

WHEAT UNCHANGED TO LOWER AT CLOSING

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Forecasts pointing to likelihood of snow in Western sections where moisture is badly needed gave an easy tone to the wheat market late today.

Bears emphasized that corn belt weather conditions were favorable for field work. Seeding of oats was reported as progressing well.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 12,124,000 bushels; corn 6,165,000. Open interest in wheat was 84,888,000 bushels and in corn 56,238,000.

Wheat closed steady at the same as yesterday's finish to ¾c lower; May 94½@94⅝; corn, ⅛@⅜ up, May 79¼@79⅜, oats unchanged to ⅛ off, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents decline.

Responsive to a sudden advance of British exchange, grain markets here averaged higher very early today.

Absence of rain in domestic wheat territory was a bullish factor. Opening ¼ off to ⅛ up, May 94⅝@94¾; wheat soon rose all around. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ higher, May 78⅞@79, and then continued to mount.

Later in morning wheat was ⅛c lower and corn unchanged to ⅛c off.

Indications later that the unsettlement of European finances had a restraining effect on grain trade activity led to general price downturns that carried the Chicago wheat market to below yesterday's finish. Notice, too, was taken of reports that throughout the Dakotas and Western Minnesota moisture conditions were ample for crop needs during the initial growth season for wheat.

Acting as somewhat of a drag on all grain values much of the time today was the circumstance that April crop and farm reserve estimates are due on Monday. In some quarters, however, it was suggested that a domestic winter wheat prospect of only 450,000,000 to 475,000,000 would be shown.

There was talk also the corn and oats farm reserves figures would look bullish.

Provisions lacked support.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 29.—Wheat was ½@1c lower; corn unchanged to 1c lower and oats ½c lower.

Sales of cash grain made on the floor of the Exchange today were as follows:

CORN—No. 1 mixed, 84c; No. 3 yellow, 84@85c; No. 4 yellow, 84c; sample grade yellow, 79c.

OATS—No. 1 white, 53½c; No. 3 white, 50½c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 19,500 bushels, compared with 30,000 a week ago and holiday a year ago, included 7 cars local and 6 through. Corn receipts, which were 48,000 bushels, compared with 48,000 a week ago, included 26 cars local and 6 through. Oats receipts, which were 16,000 bushels, compared with 18,000 a week ago, included 6 cars local and 2 through. Hay receipts were 1 car through.

STEADINESS IS SHOWN BY STOCK LIST; TRADE LIGHT

Financial Markets Receive the News of Belgium's Devaluation Proposal With Equanimity.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The stock market had a quiet and uneventful session today with unchanged to slightly higher prices the rule for a majority of the most active shares. Transfers aggregated 480,000.

Apparently disposed to ignore developments in the international monetary field, the market kept its ear close to the ground for news at home and while it was not all of an encouraging nature, it enabled prices to hold their own or work a trifle higher in some of the pivotal industrials and rails. Utilities and metals met scattered selling, and motors barely held even. Cotton, principal grains and other commodities were sluggish but closing prices were within close proximity of the previous day.

Active leaders on the upside at the close included U. S. Steel, Montgomery Ward, Coca Cola, Bohn Aluminum, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Schenley Distillers, Reynolds Tobacco, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Union Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania and Santa Fe. Principal losers of small fractions included General Motors, du Pont, Chrysler, Liggett & Myers, National Biscuit, Consolidated Gas. American Can lost 1½ points but the turnover was small.

Sterling Is Higher.

Cotton ended 10 cents to 35 cents a bale higher, wheat closed steady at about the same figure as yesterday while corn and oats were a trifle higher to minor fractions lower.

In foreign exchanges sterling gained 1⅞ cents at $4.82¾, French francs were .00⅛ of a cent lower at 6.58⅞, belgas declined 1.70 to 19.35 and Dutch guilders were .12 of a cent lower at 67.44.

Stocks received their greatest inspiration from railroad shares and pivotal industrials, although the early bankwardness of utilities and some of the metals was disappointing. The brisk run up of British sterling in foreign exchange markets as a direct consequence of the temporary defection in the heretofore solid gold bloc front, encouraged wheat and other grains, but cotton was not greatly impressed and held about even. Bonds were helped along by firming tendencies in utility loans.

Union Pacific and Santa Fe, both of which had been singled out in recent sessions when the demand for carrier shares was at a low point, assumed leadership at the beginning of trading and worked up about a point before yielding part of the advantage. New York Central, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Pennsylvania were among others following along with smaller advances. Shares of the St. Paul were active at declines ranging around ¼ of a point.

Pivotal industrial shares continued to enjoy a good market. Coca-Cola made its contribution by attaining the ,200 mark, up more than a point from the previous day.

News of the Day.

The railroad situation, long a sore spot on the economic body, received two more bits of news on top of the clarification afforded by the developments affecting the St. Paul yesterday. Loadings of revenue freight last week totaled 607,780 cars, an increase of 10,348 over the previous week. Earlier, Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, had announced that the Government agency would refinance Colorado & Southern's $29,000,000 bond maturity onl May 1, which eliminated all doubt about this issue. Another development affecting the carriers was the decision of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to investigate railroad financing.

Overnight Developments.

The market had a number of highly important overnight developments to aid in steering its course during the day. Among them were:

Announcement of the new Belgian Government that the gold belga would be cut a maximum of 30 per cent and pending an international agreement on currency policy gold payments would be suspended.

Announcement of a final accord on a 6-point program for stabilization of foreign copper production which will become effective on June 1 and terminate, unless upset by unexpected contingencies, on July 1, 1938.

Publication of the annual report of the Texas Corporation which revealed an increase of more than $5,000,000 in net income in 1934.

Report of the American Iron & Steel Institute showing the highest employment in the steel industry since July, 1934.

Day's 15 Most Active Stocks.

Closing price and net change of the 15 most active stocks: C. M. St. P. & P. preferred 1, down 1½; Hupp Motors 1⅛, down ⅝; International Nickel 24⅜, up ⅛; Libby O. Fd. 'CHANGE FIRMS TO MERGE

NEW YORK, March 29.—Another merger of well known New York Stock Exchange firms was arranged today, according to announcement made in Wall street. It will unite Harris, Upham & Co., a leading wire house, and Boettcher, Newton & Co.

Harris, Upham & Co. operate an extensive private wire system which links their 20 branch offices. The other firm has branches in Chicago, Denver and Omaha.

No "Technical Corner."

NEW YORK, March 29.—New York Stock Exchange officials announced that the "technical corner" which had loomed in Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. preferred stock had vanished.

It had been reported in brokerage circles late Wednesday that an insufficient supply of the shares for borrowing purposes had developed, but exchange officials investigating the situation found an adequate supply forthcoming.

There are only 20,000 shares of the issue outstanding.

MOTOR PARKS BANKRUPT SALE

Kingshighway Filling Station Disposed of for $1650.

A high bid of $1650 for filling station property at 3647 South Kingshighway boulevard, one of the assets of the bankrupt St. Louis Motor Parks, Inc., was approved yesterday by Referee in Bankruptcy Hope. The property was originally sold by the trustee of the company for $1250, but the sale was set aside by the referee after learning high bids would be offered.

A bid of $250 for equipment in a garage at 1123 Pine street by the General American Life Insurance Co. was also approved. Morris Levin, trustee, announced the lease and equipment of the garage at 3874 Washington boulevard would be sold later at public auction.

TRIAL FOR ILLEGAL SHOOTING OF DOVES SET FOR MAY 8

A. B. Wallace and D. L. Gardner Are Charged With Hunting on Baited Ground.

Charges of violation of the migratory bird act against Asa B. Wallace, president of the Wallace Pencil Co., and Dozier L. Gardner, vice-president of the St. Louis Casket Co., were set for trial May 8 by Federal Judge Davis today. They are charged with shooting doves over baited ground at Wallace's shooting establishment in St. Charles County Sept. 2, 1933, contrary to regulations of the Department of Agriculture.

When the cases were called at opening of court, Robert N. Hawes, attorney for Gardner, announced demurrers were pending and asked for a setting to permit arguments and action on the demurrers, to be followed by trial without a jury if the demurrers were overruled.

"No, I do not want to hear these cases without a jury," the Judge replied. "If your clients are not guilty, the Government should strike the cases from the docket. If they are guilty, they should so plead and not delay the Court by asking for a trial."

He passed the cases down for trial later in the day, but when priority of other matters made it evident they could not be heard today, he ordered the postponement, with a hearing on the demurrers May 6.

CONGRESSMAN SHORT ASSAILS 'PROFESSORS IN GOVERNMENT'

They Are Brow-Beating and Pseudo-Sophisticated, He Says in Philadelphia Talk.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 29.—An attack on the "professors running the Government" was made yesterday by Congressman Dewey Short (Rep.), Missouri, in an address at a luncheon at the Pen Athletic Club.

"Brow-beating, dictatorial, interfering, overfed, supercilious, pseudo-sophisticated," were among the words used.

"Bureaucratic liliputians just out of college who would be unable to earn a living if turned into industry are dictating the policies of a nation," he declared. "This country can never return to prosperous times until it returns to sane principles of government."

Asserting that the number of persons "on the Government payroll and on the dole almost equals the self-supporting citizens in private enterprise," Short said, "when that happens, revolution is inevitable."

"The administration is destroying our form of government and setting up a regimenation of business and society that is foreign to the United States," he said.

ROBBER TELLS WOMAN VICTIM TO FAINT IN HER BACK ROOM

His Reply to Miss Elsie Thurman, Owner of Hosiery Shop, Before He Takes $56.

"I'm going to faint," quavered Miss Elsie Thurman when a man, who had entered her Mirror Hosiery Shop at 2728½ Cherokee street at 9:30 o'clock last night with a pair of women's hose, unwrapped the hose and produced from the bundle a revolver.

"Get in the back room and faint," the holdup man replied, brandishing the weapon. She retreated to the back room and when she returned to the cash register a few minutes later, found it had been robbed of $56 in cash.

MUNICIPAL RECEIVERSHIP SUIT

Holder of $10,000 Bond Files Action Against Atlantic City.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., March 29.—Municipal receivership for Atlantic City was sought yesterday before Justice Ralph W. E. Donges of the Supreme Court by a holder of $10,000 of the city's bonds.

Justice Donges reserved decision on the application of the trustees of the James Girdwood estate to place the seashore resort under control of the State Municipal Finance Commission. He granted counsel two weeks within wihch to file additional briefs. The application was opposed by Anthony Siracuse, City Attorney, who contended a refinancing plan was being formulated by creditors representing $23,310,000 of the municipality's $30,000,000 bonded debt. He said the city owed the trustees of the estate $900 in interest, unpaid since June 1, 1933.

R. F. C. TO LEND FUNDS TO BUY $28,978,900 RAILWAY BONDS

Colorado and Southern First Mortgage Issues Maturing May 1 to Be Extended.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has announced it will finance the purchase of $28,978,9000 of Colorado and Southern 4½ per cent first mortgage bonds maturing May 1 and extend them 10 years.

It also received word yesterday that the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific proposed to submit a reorganization plan to the RFC.

H. A. Scandrett of the latter road, asked Chairman Jones for an engagement to discuss reorganization of the carrier's financial structure. The request was subsequent to announcement by directors at New York that they would pay interest on equipment trust certificates due May 1, but would defer principal payments and submit a reorganization plan by July 1.

For a long time it has been plain to railroad students that the St. Paul was getting insufficient traffic, or at least insufficient income, to support its capital obligations. Through borrowings from the RFC the St. Paul has been helped to the extent of $11,500,000.

Emerging from the last receivership in 1927 the road had a funded debt of something over $483,000,000 with maturities well spread into the distant future. The road's fixed interest obligations were more than $15,000,000 and there was less than $10,000,000 available for it.

Road Suit Disposed of.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARLYLE, Ill., March 29.—The last condemnation suit to obtain the right of way for Route No. 127 south from Carlyle to New Minden, Ill., has been disposed of in the county court. Louisa Prasuhn et al were allowed $650 to 6.68 acres of land and damages to the balance of the tract. The contract for the grading and bridges on this route has been let. When the slab is laid it means a paved highway from Carlyle to Nashville.

NON-PARTISAN TICKET BARRED FROM E. ST. LOUIS BALLOT

Ten Democratic Candidates Thus Assured of Victory in Tuesday Election.

Election of eight Democratic candidates for assistant supervisors of East St. Louis, and two constables, was assured yesterday when City Judge William Boynton denied a writ of mandamus to compel the East St. Louis Election Board to place the Nonpartisan ticket on the ballot.

The Nonpartisan ticket, composed of Democrats and Republicans, was the only opposition ticket to the Democrats, and its selection was attributed in political circles to Dan McGlynn, Republican leader.

Judge Boynton, who heard the case on a change of venue from City Judge Borders' Court, ruled that the Nonpartisan Party had not legally selected leaders to call the party caucus at which the slate was named.

The Nonpartisan candidates ruled off the ballot were: Assistant Supervisors Irvin Harvey, Carey O. Bonham, James W. Teahan, James M. Segraves, Dr. Miles D. Davis, Harry F. Putnam, Louis Goldberg and Frank Reiniger. Candidates for constable were Edward Buchanan and Cecil G. Nutter.

The election will be held Tuesday with the municipal election.

Austria Bars Prussian King Movie.

VIENNA, March 29.—Police raided a movie theater tonight where the latest Emil Jannings film, "The Old King and the Young," was billed. The performances were closed down and the crowds dispersed. Jannings in the role of a Prussian King had made the Austrian audience cheer, shout and sing. Cries of "Heil Hitler," were heard.

Congressman Shannon Weaker.

WASHINGTONX March 29.—Dr. Peter T. Bohan, Kansas City physician, was flying to Washington today to attend his old friend, Representative Joseph B. Shannon, dangerously ill in Emergency Hospital. Noticeably weaker after a fainting spell this morning, Shannon rallied sufficiently to call for Dr. Bohan. Mrs. Shannon and her daughter, Mrs. John Deveney, Kansas City, arrived by plane last night.

THREE HELD AFTER BANK ROBBERY FAILS

Youths, Held in Chicago, Seized Hostages in Escape in Wisconsin.

CHICAGO, March 29. — Three young men confessed today, police said, to attempting to loot the State Bank of Mauston, Wis., and the abduction of eight hostages in their flight. A bank cashier fought them off.

Federal officers and police of two states followed a trail marked by commandeered and abandoned cars along the 175-mile highway from Mauston to Chicago, and seized the three youths.

The youths held were: Edward Cudecki, 22 years old; Thomas Stopa, 21, and Michael Moncynski, 21, former Wisconsin farm hand.

The two persons whose car was commandeered and who were held as hostages on the last lap of the flight, were disclosed as Ellis G. Brode, 50 years old, a traveling salesman of Portland, Ore., and his wife, Birdie. Mrs. Brode said one man held a pistol to her side the entire distance.

"As they crossed the Illinois-Wisconsin line," she said, "they let out whoops of joy and began to sing."

Sheriff Morg Rider of Juneau County, Wis., Federal Agent A. P. Barber and two State's Attorney's policemen arrested Moncynski at the home of his sister in suburban Cicero on a tip furnished by John Meyers, Juneau County farmer.

Meyers told the Sheriff he recognized Moncynski as one of the raiders whom he had seen in the neighborhood recently, and that the youth said he was returning to a nearby farm where he was employed last summer. Shortly after Monczynski's arrest, police took Stopa and Cudecki into custody, apparently on information furnished by the first prisoner.

Authorities said Stopa had been sought for more than a year as a member of an auto theft gang.

Three robbers entered the Mauston bank Wednesday, but Russell Hale, cashier, frustrated their plans by opening fire with a revolver. The robbers returned the fire, inflicting a flesh wound in Hale's shoulder, and fled without any loot.

INQUIRY EXPECTED IN VIRGIN ISLANDS ADMINISTRATION

Senators Predict That Territories Committee Will Approve Tydings Resolution.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Senators predicted privately that the Senate Territories Committee today would approve the Tydings resolution for an investigation of the administration of Dr. Paul Pearson as Governor of the Virgin Islands.

This report was circulated after Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, had repeated on the floor of the Senate that Pearson, a Republican, should step out in favor of a Democrat.

Harrison made the statement after assailing as a "willful, misleading, untruthful and damnable lie" a statement contained in a newspaper article attributed to Drew Pearson, the Governor's son, to the effect that Harrison has "slipped" an amendment into the Costigan sugar act relating to Puerto Rico which had handicapped a program planned to rehabilitate the island.

Harrison said Pearson's column "constantly carried cracks at me" and added: "It so happens that a former Congressman from Mississippi (T. Webber Wilson) was appointed Judge in the Virgin Islands and he has made a good record.

"He has been the target of the Interior Department, even from the Secretary on down to his assistants.

"It happens also that Drew Pearson's father is now and has been throughout the Democratic administration, Governor of the Virgin Islands.

"I'm not as partisan as I used to be, but I'm still so partisan as to feel that when Republicans are in control the Governor of the Virgin Islands should be a Republican and when the Democrats are in control the job ought to pass into Democratic hands."

The article Harrison referred to was as follows: "An important factor holding up the President's extensive plan for the reconstruction of Puerto Rico is an insignificant provision tucked away in the Jones-Costigan Sugar Act. It prohibits any new sugar refineries on that island, and it was slipped into the bill at the last moment by Pat Harrison at the behest of the powerful sugar lobby."

EGGS OR CHEESE FOR GOOD MAIN DISHES

Delicious Souffles, Omelets and Salads May Be Made With Them.

When the Lenten season taxes our ingenuity in planning attractive main dishes without the use of meat, we automatically turn to cheese and eggs as our standbys. Both of these good foods supply the essential complete animal proteins for keeping the body in repair and are completely and easily digested when properly cooked.

Yellow Color Shows Vitamin.

Their intense yellow color serves to assure you, too, that here are rich sources of vitamin A, that invisible, but important regulatory food which protects against infection and promotes health and growth. Cheese has an added advantage in its rich supply of both calcium and phosphorus. Eggs, too, are rich in phosphorus and add to the diet another invaluable mineral in the form of iron.

Eggs should be cooked easily and gently if they are to come forth in the top of their perfection. If they are to be cooked hard for scalloping, creaming or stuffing, see to it that the water which covers them just simmers gently for 20 minutes. This simple precaution prevents tough, rubbery whites and overcooked yolks. Let the eggs stand in cold water for several minutes before peeling them, so that they will shrink slightly from the shell.

Eggs for Main Dishes.

Eggs are adaptable to numberless main dishes. They form the basis of delicious souffles, omelets and salads, and are delectable as escalloped eggs, creamed eggs in cheese sauce or in combination with vegetables.

Cheese needs the same precaution in cooking as do eggs to insure a tender cooked dish. In escalloped dishes, rarebits, loaves and sauces, it should be grated or shredded and mixed into the hot sauce, so that it melts gradually with a smooth even mass without subjection to intense, direct heat. In a cheese omelet or toasted sandwich, it is carefully hidden between layers of protecting food, too.

For escalloped dishes or rarebit, use a good nippy cheese, while for sauces over vegetables or hard-cooked eggs, use the milder flavored varieties. Either the common cheddar cheese or the pasteurized packaged cheese may be used for any cooked dish. The cheddar cheese sold in the big flat daisies costs less per pound and serves admirably for all purposes.

Escalloped Egg.
(With Tomato Sauce.)

Place six eggs in boiling water to cover. Turn the fire very low and simmer for 20 minutes, cover with cold water for several minutes, then peel. Slice in thick slices. Arrange in a baking dish in alternate layers, two cups of dry bread crumbs, two cups thin white sauce, the eggs, one-fourth cup butter, one-half chopped green pepper and one pimiento cut small. Add to each layer, seasonings of salt and pepper. Cover the top with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes. Serve with a well seasoned hot tomato sauce made of thickened strained tomatoes seasoned with a little sugar, dry mustard, butter, salt, pepper, onion and cayenne.

Cheese Omelet.

Separate yolks and whites of six eggs. Beat egg whites stiff with one-half teaspoon salt added. Beat yolks until creamy and add six tablespoons of top milk or cream and one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper. Fold the yolks into the stiff whites, using care not to break down the fluffiness of the egg. Pour into a frying pan with one-fourth cup hot, melted butter in the pan. Let cook over a low fire until the omelet raises and becomes set enough to be firm when tested with knife. Sprinkle one cup grated cheese over the top and place in a moderate oven to melt cheese and dry off the top of the omelet. Fold over and serve at once on a hot platter. Add one-half cup sauted mushroom caps or sprinkle with chopped parsley.

CREAMY SAUCE

One cup confectioner's sugar.
Two egg whites, stiffly beaten.
Two egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon-colored.
Two teaspoons vanilla.
One cup cream, whipped.

Fold sugar into egg whites gradually; fold in egg yolks, then vanilla and cream. Serve immediately. Makes three cups cause. This is a quickly-made, fluffy sauce that is especially good served with hot steamed or cake puddings.

Apple Pudding.

Add one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon and two teaspoons lemon juice to one and one-fourth cups of apple sauce, and put in a buttered baking dish. Cream three tablespoons butter and one-third cup sugar. Add one cup of bran cereal and spread on the top. Bake in a hot oven—400 degrees—for from 35 to 40 minutes. Serve slightly warm with light cream.

SYRIAN SPINACH

Two quarts spinach.
Two tablespoons butter.
Five eggs.
Salt and pepper.

If fresh spinach is used, wash, cut, and boil it for ten minutes. Strain. Season to taste. Spread spinach evenly in a flat buttered pan. Beat the eggs and pour them over the spinach. Pour the melted butter evenly over the spinach and eggs. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees), until eggs are set, about 10 to 12 minutes.

Ham and Bean Soup.

Choose a ham shank weighing two to three pounds. Remove the rind and place the shank in a deep covered kettle with cold water to more than cover it. Add one and one-half cups washed navy beans which have been soaked for several hours. Let simmer gently for two or two and one-half hours until the beans are very tender and broken and the meat falls from the bone. Remove bone and cut meat in small pieces. Add one-fourth teaspoon pepper and one tablespoon prepared horseradish. Serve with toasted crackers as the main hot dish for supper or lunch.

Green Spinach.

Wash the spinach thoroughly, remove the root ends and wilted leaves, put the spinach in a large kettle, add one-half cup boiling water for each pound of spinach and boil closely covered for 10 minutes. The secret lies in quick and short cooking. Drain the spinach, chop fine, season with salt and pepper and add a liberal amount of butter.

Efficiency dictates the daily use of a refreshing health and toilet soap . . . Try Protex . . . It's the refreshing way to make perspiration odors vanish . . . Economical too.

SALAD IS A TASTY ALL-AMERICAN DISH

Ingredients for the Luncheon Formal or Plain Variety Are Best Cold.

American soups may have a perfectly good French accent and roast beef be thoroughly English, but when it comes to salads there is one dish that is completely American.

Fashions in salads are as various and adaptable as most of our native customs. In California a salad sets the tone for the meal, leading the van, as it were, crisp and tempting and lending the meal that follows a certain charm. Fresh watercress, marinated to tart smoothness, is excellent for a salad of this sort.

Formal Salad Is Light.

The formal salad which follows the entree should be light and colorful, an aspic mold with dressing. These salads are only the beginning, however. A luncheon salad may include fish, fowl, vegetables or fruit in accordance with the whim of the hostess, who must, of course, not let her fancy rove too far afield. A salad can have just the opposite effect that she wants to create unless she is very careful.

The salad season officially begins during the last week in April, for this is when garden things are on the market and vegetables are crisp and tender. A salad, whether it be formal, luncheon or just plain salad, is always at its best when the ingredients have been thoroughly chilled.

Savoy Salad.

Six medium size beets.
Two hard-cooked eggs.
Two tablespoons chopped celery.
One head lettuce.
Salad dressing.

Cook beets until tender. Skin and chill. Cut beets into thin slices and arrange in a circle on crisp lettuce. Pile center with diced eggs and chopped celery, mixed with salad dressing. Serves six.

Salad Mayenne.

Thick slices of halibut.
One cup mayonnaise.
Two tablespoons chopped green pepper.
Two cups cooked green peas.
Salad dressing.

Steam or boil fish until tender. Chill well, then place on platter. Mask fish with salad dressing, sprinkle with green pepper. Place mounds of green peas around fish alternately with parsley or watercress. Serves six. (If desired, canned tuna fish or salmon may be substituted for halibut.)

Frozen Strawberry Salad.

Two packages cream cheese.
One-half cup milk.
One tablespoon gelatin.
One-fourth cup cold water.
One-fourth cup sugar.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.
One cup chopped strawberries.
One-half cup heavy cream, whipped.
Salt, if needed.
Lettuce.
Salad dressing.

Blend cream cheese and milk. Soften gelatin in cold water; dissolve over hot water. Cool slightly, and add to the cheese, with the sugar and lemon juice. When somewhat thickened, add strawberries. Fold in whipped cream, and add a dash of salt, if needed. Pour into a freezing tray and freeze until firm. Cut into squares and serve on lettuce with salad dressing. Serves six.

Calavo Mixed Patter.

Two calavos.
Lemon juice.
Salt.
Four artichoke hearts.
Eight deviled egg halves.
Ten red radishes.
Eight pieces stuffed celery hearts.
Ten slices sour pickle.
Ten curled anchovies.
Eight stuffed green olives.
Eight ripe olives.
One red apple.
Mayonnaise.
Lettuce.
Paprika.

Cut calavos into halves lengthwise, remove seeds and cut lengthwise into quarters. Sprinkle cut portions with lemon juice and salt. Cut artichoke hearts into halves lengthwise. Cut apple into half crosswise, hollow out center and place in center of a lettuce garnished, large chop platter or cheese tray, and fill with mayonnaise. Impale each olive on a toothpick. Insert, a toothpick in side of each pickle slice and place an anchovy on each. Arrange calavo quarters, artichoke hearts, eggs, radishes, celery, pickle slices, and olives on platter, radiating from apple. Sprinkle with paprika for color.

FISH IMPERIAL

Two cups cooked fish.
Three eggs.
One cup fish stock or water.
One cup milk.
One-fourth teaspoon black pepper.
Two tablespoons parsley chopped fine.
Two tablespoons grated onion.
Three tablespoons vinegar.
One tablespoon salt.

Start the oven at a slow heat. Combine fish and vinegar. Whip the egg whites until stiff and set aside. Beat the egg yolks, add rest of ingredients and mix well. Lastly, fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour into a greased baking dish. Garnish with pimiento and green pepper. Set in pan of warm water in moderate oven and bake 45 minutes.

FRESHLY GRATED COCONUT DRESSES PLAIN CUSTARD

Nothing dresses a dessert so well as freshly grated coconut. Freshly grated coconut may also be used in loaf or cup cakes, stirring it into the batter and using the coconut milk instead of fresh milk. Used with sliced oranges, it makes a delicious dessert that Southern folk know as ambrosia. A plain custard mixture may boast of being a party dessert when freshly grated coconut is used.

Orange Coconut Custard.

Grate a small fresh coconut, save the milk and squeeze the coconut as dry as possible. Peel and slice four large, firm oranges and cut the slices in dice. Put the fruit in a serving dish, sprinkle with three tablespoons powdered sugar and the grated coconut.

Scald one quart milk. Beat two eggs and mix with one-half cup sugar and one tablespoon corn starch. Stir the hot milk into the egg mixture, pour into a saucepan and stir constantly over a slow fire until thickened and boiling. Remove from fire, cool slightly, add one teaspoon vanilla extract and pour over the oranges and coconut. Chill thoroughly before using. The coconut milk may be used in place of an equal amount of fresh milk in making the custard.

BUTTERSCOTCH

Two cups brown sugar.
One-fourth cup light syrup.
One cup water.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-third cup butter.
One-fourth teaspoon vanilla.

Put sugar, syrup, water and salt in a saucepan. Stir over low heat until the sugar is dissolved. Increase heat and cook to firm-ball stage. Add butter and cook with occasional stirring until the thermometer registers to brittle stage. Remove from stove; add vanilla; pour into a buttered shallow pan. While still warm, crease into squares with a blunt knife.

Peanut Stuffed Potatoes.

Mix two cups soft, fine breadcrumbs with three-quarter cup of chopped peanuts, one-half teaspoon minced onion, a little pepper, two tablespoons minced parsley, two tablespoons melted butter or shortening, one beaten egg and enough hot water to moisten. Fill six large tomatoes with the mixture and bake. In the summer this same stuffing is fine for cucumbers or small yellow squash.

APPLE BUTTER COOKIES

One-fourth cupful apple butter.
One-third cupful molasses.
One-half cupful butter.
Two-thirds cupful sifted light brown sugar.
One and one-fourth cupfuls sifted flour.
One-half teaspoonful ginger.
One-half teaspoonful salt.

Combine apple butter, molasses, butter and sugar, and boil for one minute. Cool until lukewarm, then add the dry ingredients which have been sifted together twice. Beat until smooth. Chill about an hour, or until stiff enough to drop by one-half teaspoonfuls onto a lightly greased cooky sheet three inches apart. Bake in a slow oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for seven minutes. The cookies will spread until they are very thin, and will be soft and flimsy until cooled, when they are quite crisp. Remove at once onto waxed paper to cool.

A WELCOME CHANGE FROM THE USUAL CORN FRITTER AND PUDDING

WHEN you have tired of corn pudding and corn fritters try something new. Corn balls are a welcome change even to those who like corn.

Corn Balls.

Two eggs.
One No. 2 can corn.
Two cups breadcrumbs.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One small onion, minced.
Two tablespoons bacon drippings.

Mix corn with the slightly beaten eggs, onion, breadcrumbs and salt. Form into small balls and bake on a baking sheet, turning once to brown evenly. Serve hot with maple syrup. This amount serves eight.

SWISS STEAK POPULAR AND ECONOMICAL DISH

Flank, Chuck or Round May Be Used With Practically No Waste.

Of all the moderate-priced meat dishes that find their way to the family dinner table at frequent intervals, Swiss steak is one of the most popular. It seems to satisfy every appetite and every purse.

A pound and a half of round steak cut to one to two inches thick is the basis for this delicious meat dish for an average family of five. Because of the small amount of bone and fat in the round, it may be classed as an economical cut even though the piece per pound may be relatively high.

Braised for Flavor.

Although the name Swiss steak is the most familiar one, a Swiss steak is actually just another of those braised meats, which have such marvelous possibilities of flavor combination. Braising implies two processes of cookery, a thorough browning of the meat to develop its good flavor and give that desirable brown color and crustiness, followed by very slow cooking in a well-seasoned gravy or sauce.

This second part of the process is where the fun comes in, for you may let your imagination run rampant on the sauces and even on the utensils in which the meat is cooked. Even the cut of beef may be varied now and then to a thick chuck steak or flank steak and the same methods used as are employed on the round.

Must Be Pounded.

Place the steak on a cutting board and dredge it well with flour on both sides, then with the dull edge of saucer or mallet, pound the flour into the meat, making an effort to break down the resistant tissues which hold the meat together. As the flour is absorbed, add fresh flour. This preliminary process helps to tender the meat, but also adds flour which will later cook out into the sauce to thicken the gravy.

Put the floured steak into a hot frying pan in which is melted a quarter cup of bacon fat, salt pork fat, lard or oleomargarine and brown the meat thoroughly on both sides. Add salt and pepper, cover with water or other sauce and let simmer very slowly in a tightly covered pan for one and one-half to two hours.

Proper Sauce.

So far, the result sounds utterly uninspired, but the tricks lie in the sauces or in the service. Instead of water, try a can of cream of tomato soup, vegetable soup or cream of mushroom soup poured over the steak for the final simmering. Or use tomato juice, some thick slices of onions and a teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Another delicious combination for flavor is catsup diluted with water and added to the meat with chopped onion and green pepper.

If you like more highly seasoned meat, you'll be more than enthusiastic over a Swiss steak cooked in a mild barbecue sauce of catsup mixed with a little vinegar, a generous amount of Worcestershire sauce, and seasoned with onion, salt, peper and paprika.

Vary the Service.

For variation in service try cutting the browned meat into individual strips about one and one-half inches wide across the steak and arranging them log fashion in a covered casserole. Cover with sauce and finish the simmering in a low oven. Serve right in the casserole. Or leave the meat in one piece, cook it in a covered frying pan or baking dish and serve on a large platter, with baked stuffed potatoes and garnished with chickory, parsley or rings of green pepper.

For your next Swiss steak try one of these sauces:

1. Two cups tomato juice, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one sliced onion.
2. One-half cup catsup, one and one-half cups water, one teaspoon prepared mustard, one onion, one-quarter cup crisp salt pork cubes.
3. One-half cup catsup, one and one-half cups water, one green pepper chopped.
4. One can soup, cream of mushroom, vegetable soup or cream of tomato soup.
5. One can evaporated milk, one teaspoon prepared mustard, salt, pepper and paprika.
6. One-quarter cup catsup, one-quarter cup vinegar, one cup water, one-half onion, one teaspoon paprika and one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.

QUICK FUDGE CAKE

One and one-third cups sifted flour.
One and three-fourths teaspoons baking powder.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One cup sugar.
Five tablespoons softened butter or other shortening.
Two eggs, well beaten.
One-half cup milk.
One-half teaspoon vanilla.
Two squares unsweetened chocolate, melted.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar and sift together three times. Add butter. Combine eggs, milk and vanilla and add to flour mixture, stirring until all flour is dampened. Add chocolate and blend. Then beat vigorously one minute. Bake in greased eight-inch pan in moderate oven (325 degrees), one hour. Spread chocolate frosting on top and sides of cake.

GROUP SUPPERS CAN BE VERY ENJOYABLE

With Well Planned Menus Work Can Usually Be Portioned Out Successfully.

This is the time of year when church and club groups get together and plan community suppers for the purpose of promoting sociability and raising money. Community suppers mean a great deal of work but this can usually be portioned out among a number of people and the result is usually an enjoyable and profitable affair.

In every community there are fine cooks who treasure their own recipes and ones that have been handed down in the family for several generations. Get everybody together when planning a community supper and consult on the menu. The following one is offered as a suggestion; in many instances it will suggest other combinations, or it may, of course, be followed in its entirety. The recipes that are given are planned for 25 servings since that is a unit that can be readily multiplied to meet the needs of a larger group.

Supper Menu.

Oyster or tomato bisque
Beef olives with gravy Potato balls
Jellied vegetable salad
Hot rolls Watermelon pickle
Chocolate or coconut cream pie
Coffee Tea Milk.

The salad is a gelatine base to which are added diced beets, celery and onion. It is made in large pans, cut in squares and served on lettuce with a thin mayonnaise.

Oyster Bisque.
(25 servings).

Scald five quarts milk or equal parts evaporated milk and water, with a small sliced onion, a small bunch of parsley cut in pieces, two very small bay leaves, and two teaspoons salt. While the milk is scalding pick over two and one-half quarts oysters to remove any bits of shell. Chop the oysters coarsely or cut each one in three pieces. Put the oysters and their juice in a saucepan with ¼ pound butter and one-half teaspoon white pepper. Heat slowly to the boiling point, but do not boil. Mix one-half cup flour to a smooth paste with one cup cold milk and stir it into the hot milk. Let it boil up once, then strain. Add the oysters and serve as soon as possible. This should be kept warm in a double boiler or steam kettle, but should not be made very long ahead of time as the oysters toughen if kept hot too long.

Beef Olives With Gravy.
(25 Servings).

These are really small meat cakes. Mix five pounds finely chopped bottom round of beef with one pound finely chopped lean veal and one pound lean pork. Mix well to blend the meats, then add one and one-half tablespoons salt, four tablespoons minced onion, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, one-half cup minced parsley, two well beaten eggs and one-half cup fine dry bread crumbs soaked in one cup milk or water. Mix thoroughly and shape into small oval balls about two and one-half inches long and two inches wide. Brown these quickly in a little hot fat in a frying pan, then place close together in a shallow, wide baking pan and add two quarts medium thin brown gravy, made from the fat in the frying pan. Cover and simmer on top of the stove or bake in a moderate oven for 25 minutes. One pound sliced sauted mushrooms may be added 10 minutes before serving. Serve three or four of these small "olives" on a slice of toast for each serving.

LUNCHEON DISH MAY BECOME VEGETABLE AT DINNER

A luncheon dish may very well become the vegetable addition to dinner if it happens to be one like this.

Scalloped Asparagus.

One and one-half tablespoons butter.
Two tablespoons flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.
One cup evaporated milk.
One-half cup liquid from asparagus.
Two cups cooked asparagus cut in pieces.
Four sliced hard cooked eggs.
One-fourth cup fine bread crumbs.

Put the butter in a saucepan and blend in the flour, salt and pepper. Stir in slowly the milk diluted with the asparagus liquid and cook for five minutes. Grease a baking dish and arrange the asparagus and sliced eggs in alternate layers. Pour over the sauce, sprinkle with the bread crumbs which have been mixed with one tablespoon melted butter.

Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (300 degrees) for 20 minutes or until the crumbs are brown.

JULEP CUP

One package lime-flavored gelatin.
One pint warm water.
One cup halved green grapes, seeded.
Few mint leaves.

Dissolve gelatin in warm water and turn into shallow pan. When firm, cut into cubes. Arrange gelatin cubes in sherbet glasses, alternately with grapes. Garnish with mint leaves. Serves six.

CRULLERS FIND WELCOME NO MATTER WHAT THE SEASON

Crullers, those light doughtnuts, always find a welcome no matter what the season. If you have tried them unsuccessfully it may have been that they contained too much shortening or that the fat was not hot enough. This will cause them to be grease soaked and to crack. A fat thermometer is the surest way of testing fat temperature. It may be tested approximately by dropping in a cube of bread. If the cube browns in one minute the at is hot enough for crullers. Fat hould have a temperature of 375 degrees and there must be enough in the kettle to float the crullers.

Crullers.

Soften one-fourth cup shortening and mix it with one cup sugar. When well blended add two eggs and beat to a smooth cream. Next stir in one cup milk and then add two cups flour, sifted with three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt and one-half teaspoon cinnamon. Mix and then gradually add about two more cups of flour or enough to make a dough that can be turned out and rolled on a lightly floured board. Roll about one-third of the dough at a time, rolling it to a scant half inch thickness. Cut in strips one inch wide by three or four inches long. Cut three diagonal slits in each cruller and twist each strip half way round as you drop it into the hot fat. Cook until golden brown, drain on soft paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Makes about three dozen crullers.

MENU PANCAKES

One-half cup salmon, flaked.
One-fourth cup peas, cooked.
Three-fourths teaspoon salt.
Six eggs.
One-half cup finely diced celery.
One teaspoon shredded onion.
One-fourth cup finely diced green pepper.
Fat for frying.

Put all the vegetables into a bowl. Break eggs over the vegetables and mix all thoroughly. Shape into small cakes like pancakes and fry in skillet until egg is cooked. The vegetables should still be crisp. Serve with any savory sauce.

Posy Salad.

Arrange alternate slices of orange and canned peaches in petal form in a bed of lettuce. Combine equal quantities of chopped dates and chopped salted peanuts. Moisten with mayonnaise, form into balls and place in the center of each posy. Chop candied ginger fine and make a thin border around the date ball. Serve with cream mayonnaise to which a little chopped pimiento and green pepper has been added.

HIP-O-LITE

Try Hip-O-Lite with hot chocolate or cocoa. Simply add 1 teaspoonful to each cup. Instead of whipped cream!

Pie Ranks as Favorite All-Year-Round Dessert

Men Will Choose Apple or Lemon in Plain or Fancy Guise Nine Times Out of Ten.

Pie, no matter what its disguise or what it is called, remains pie for most people, but for a great many men it is the dessert which they will choose nine times out of ten. Everyday apple pie or the fancier kinds are always acceptable. In fact, we believe that men secretly crave the latter, since we heard a great big two-fisted gentleman confess a weakness for lemon chiffon pie.

For the pie shell a standard recipe requires one and one-half cups flour, one-half cup lard and one-fourth cup ice water. The cold shortening must be cut into the flour, which should have a pinch of salt sifted with it and about one-fourth teaspoon of baking powder. When the mixture has the appearance of cornmeal, the ice water is added. The dough should be mixed as quickly as possible. This makes two one crust pies.

Lemon Pie.

Mix one-fourth cup flour, three-fourth cup sugar and two-thirds cup boiling water. Cook 15 minutes in the top part of a double boilers, stirring frequently. Beat one whole egg and two yolks and add with two-thirds cup evaporated milk to the mixture, cooking until smooth and thickened. Remove from fire and add one teaspoon grated lemon rind and one-third cup of lemon juice. Pour into baked pastry shell and top with a meringue made of the two beaten whites and four tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Brown in the oven for about 10 minutes. Makes one nine-inch pie.

Apple Meringue Pie.

Line a pie pan with rich pastry and bake to a pale brown. Pare, core and quarter six to eight apples and bake in the oven with a sprinkling of sugar, a little water and some raisins. Beat yolks of three eggs, add one-half cup sugar and one-half teaspoon vanilla. When the apples are tender, place them on the baked crust and pour the beaten egg yolks over them. Make a meringue of the beaten whites with four tablespoons sugar and spread over the mixture in the pie shell. Set in a slow oven and bake until the meringue is golden brown.

Raisin Pie.

Two cups seedless raisins.
Two cups boiling water.
Grated rind of half a lemon.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-half cup sugar.
Two tablespoons cornstarch.
Juice of one lemon.
Pastry.

Cook raisins in the boiling water for five minutes. Mix lemon rind, sugar, cornstarch and salt, and add raisins to this mixture. Return to the pan and cook until smooth and thickened. Remove from the fire and cool. Place in unbaked pastry shell. Put on the top and bake in a hot oven for 15 minutes. Then reduce the heat to moderate (375 degrees) and continue baking for 30 minutes. This makes one nine-inch pie.

Angle Food Pie.

One cup sugar.
One cup water.
One cup crushed pineapple.
Four tablespoons cornstarch.
One-half cup cold water.
Two beaten egg whites.

Place sugar, water and crushed pineapple in the upper part of a double boiler and heat thoroughly, but do not boil. Add cornstarch which has been dissolved in the half-cup of cold water. Cook very slowly until thickened. Remove from fire and fold in carefully the stiffly beaten egg whites which have been beaten with a pinch of salt. Pour into the baked pie shell, let cool, and serve with a garnish of whipped cream.

Butterscotch Pie.

One and one-half cups brown sugar.
Two tablespoons butter.
One-half tablespoon mild vinegar.
One cup boiling water.
Two eggs.
Three tablespoons flour.
One-half cup cold water.
One-third teaspoon salt.
One baked pie shell.
Four tablespoons granulated sugar.

Combine the brown sugar, butter, vinegar and boiling water in a double boiler; and stir until the sugar dissolves. Separate the eggs, beat the yolks until thick; combine with the flour, cold water and salt. Pour the hot mixture into the egg mixture; and return to the top of the double boiler. Cook and stir until the mixture thickens. Transfer to baked pie shell and cover with meringue made with the remaining ingredients. Bake in a very slow oven (325 degrees) for 12 minutes, or until the meringue is brown.

Chilled Pecan Custard Pie.

One tablespoon gelatine.
One-fourth cup cold water.
Three eggs.
One-half cup sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One cup milk.
One teaspoonful vanilla.
One-half cup chopped pecans, toasted.

Cook egg yolks, slightly beaten, sugar, salt and milk over boiling water until of custard consistency. Pour cold water in bowl and sprinkle gelatine on top of water. Add to hot custard mixture and stir until dissolved. Cool and when mixture begins to congeal, fold in egg whites, beaten stiff and dry, vanilla and chopped pecans. Pour into previously baked pie shell and chill. Garnish with rim of whipped cream and a sprinkle of toasted pecans.

Almonds may be substituted for the pecans.

CHEWY COOKIES LIKEWISE ARE TAILORED SPRING CONFECTIONS

HERE are cookies, tailor-made for this season of the year. They are not too sweet, are deliciously chewy and have a certain amount of "roughage."

Oatmeal Wafers.

Put one-third cup seedless raisins through the food chopper, using the fine blade. Grind one cup rolled oats, using medium blade. Combine chopped raisins in a bowl with two tablespoons butter and one well-beaten egg, mixing well so there are no lumps. Add one cup brown sugar, then the ground oatmeal, which has had added to it five tablespoons flour. Mix well and drop from the tip of a spoon on a greased cookie sheet about two inches apart. Bake in a moderate oven until light brown, which is about 12 minutes. Let cool for a minute and then remove with a spatula. If the oven is too hot these cookies will spread.

Hominy Au Gratin.

Melt two-thirds cup of grated cheese in one cup of white sauce, and season with salt and pepper. Put enough canned hominy through the food chopper to make two cups. Add this to the cheese sauce and pour into a shallow buttered baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven. This can be all prepared with the exception of the oven browning the night before.

A LITTLE CHAT ABOUT NEXT WEEK'S MENUS

East Indian Curry and Raw Vegetable Spring Salads Top the List.

Even the busiest housekeeper has small excuse these days for serving unattractive meals on a plea of lack of time. Food manufacturers by the score have rallied to the aid of the busy woman and have provided her with all manner of "ready made" foods that may be served with the minimum of preparation. Practically everything from soup to nuts may now be bought ready to reheat or to chill, as the case may be, and serve in a few moments time. No longer need the can opener cook feel apologetic so long as she knows how to select her canned foods and serve them attractively. Viewed either from the standpoint of nutrition or convenience, canned and other ready-made foods have much to recommend them.

Canned Vegetables for Salad.

In planning this week's meals, it will be readily seen that this type of foods has been kept in mind. Many of the meals make use of one or more of them, although, of course, the fresh or home cooked foods may be used where they are available or if they are preferred. For example, on Sunday, the vegetable cocktail is made of canned whole string beans, slivers of raw carrots, tiny whole canned beets, spring onions and celery curls all marinated (except the celery and radishes) in well seasoned French dressing and thoroughly chilled. They are so arranged on tiny crisp lettuce leaves in little piles around a small cup of cocktail sauce. Asparagus tips may be substituted for the string beans, or canned or fresh cooked cauliflower for the beets. Sunday night's supper dish is a chicken loaf made from canned boned chicken. Leftover fricassed or roast chicken may be used just as well if it happens to be on hand. Canned or stewed fresh fruit is served for dessert. This is a matter of choice and of convenience.

A roast of veal for Sunday will no doubt leave some over for another meal. If this amount is somewhat limited, serve it as a curry with plenty of boiled rice and spicy chutney. Or if you do not happen to like the flavor of curry, make a Creole ragout instead. The same recipe may be used omitting the curry and adding a shredded green pepper.

East Indian Curry.

Here is a fine recipe for a real East Indian curry. Melt two tablespoons butter in a heavy frying pan, add a large onion cut in very thin slices. Fry slowly to a golden brown, then stir in two tablespoons of the best curry powder you can get, and two tablespoons flour. Mix, add two cups canned tomatoes, three teaspoons sugar and a very little pepper—remember that the curry powder is highly spiced and fiery hot. Let simmer for 10 minutes, add two to three cups diced cold veal and simmer or boil very gently for 20 minutes longer. Either mix with two cups of boiled rice, or better yet, serve it in a ring mold of rice or poured around small mounds of rice. Pass chutney or crisp, very cold celery with it. Chutney is an Indian pickle that is usually served with curry—it is bought in bottles and there are several good varieties on the market. Chutney may be made at home in the fall, too.

Take advantage of the lower price of eggs to use them more often, especially now that Lent is well under way and meatless meals the order in many homes. Serve also raw vegetables, lettuce, celery, radishes, spring onions, shredded cabbage, at least four times a week. Watercress is good now and may be added to the list, also young, tender dandelion greens in some sections and field salad and field cress. Don't be afraid to try unfamiliar greens—you may like them!

EGGS NORTHERN

Four eggs, separated.
One-half cup flaked crabmeat.
Three tablespoons flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Four slices toast.
Three tablespoons butter.
One cup milk.

Make white sauce of butter, flour, milk, and salt. Add crabmeat. Spread this mixture on the buttered toast. Place on baking sheet. Beat egg whites until stiff, adding one-fourth teaspoon salt. Pile egg white on each slice of toast. Make a hollow in the center and into it put the unbroken yolk. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) until eggs are set, about ten minutes. Garnish with parsley and paprika.

CALAVO ICE CREAM

One and one-half cups sieved calavo.
Three cups milk.
Two-thirds cup granulated sugar.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One cup heavy cream.
One-half cup crushed pineapple.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One teaspoon lemon extract.

Scald milk, sugar and salt; add cream and cool. To prepare calavo, cut into halves, remove seed, peel, and put through a sieve. Combine with milk, pineapple, vanilla and lemon extract, and beat until well blended. Freeze in ice cream freezer. Makes about two quarts.

FROSTING OR SAUCE MAKES THE CAKE

With Proper Topping It May Be Pie, Layer Cake or Pudding.

No cook need be apologetic when she reckons plain cake among her accomplishments. It isn't the cake so much as it is the icing or filling that makes it. Frosting may change an everyday Cinderella of a cake into an envied confection.

If you put two plain layers together with apricot cream filling and sprinkle the top with powdered sugar you have a delicious Washington Pie. Spread them with pecan chocolate frosting and put one on top of the other and you have a tempting layer cake. Serve warm and cut in wedge-shaped pieces with maple or butterscotch sauce and you have a delectable pudding.

Apricot Cream Filling.

One can condensed milk.
One-fourth cup lemon juice.
One-half cup stewed apricots, drained.

Blend milk and lemon juice and stir until mixture thickens. Force apricots through coarse sieve; fold into mixture. Dust top of cake with finely powdered confectioners' sugar.

Chocolate Pecan Frosting.

Two squares unsweetened chocolate.
One can condensed milk.
One tablespoon strong black coffee.
Pecan nut meats.

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add milk, stir over boiling water five minutes until it thickens. Add strong black coffee or water. Cool cake before spreading frosting. Garnish top with halves of pecan nut meats.

Maple Sauce.

One can condensed milk.
One-third cup maple syrup.
Few grains salt.
One cup water.

Thoroughly blend milk, maple syrup and salt in a heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat about five minutes or until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Cool. Add water and beat well.

Butterscotch Sauce.

Put two and one-half cups brown sugar and one-half pint heavy cream in the top of a double boiler with four tablespoons butter. Cook over slow heat for about one hour, stirring occasionally. This will keep in a cold place and is also delicious with ice cream.

Pineapple Fluff.

Dissolve one package of raspberry flavored gelatin in two cups of warm water. Chill in refrigerator until it has started to set. Beat with dover egg beater until frothy. Add one cup of diced canned pineapple, one cup of chopped nuts, and cut in one dozen marshmallows. Fold in thoroughly and place in individual molds. Return to refrigerator and, when firm, serve with whipped cream.

THESE CRUMB COOKIES HELP OVER-SUPPLY OF BREAD

Bread has a way of accumulating even when the housewife is careful about keeping the bread supply low. Bread puddings pall and too many crumbed dishes grow monotonous, but using crumbs for cookies is an entirely different matter.

Bread Crumb Cookies.

One cup breadcrumbs.
One cup sugar.
One cup sour cream.
One-half cup butter.
One egg.
One-half cup raisins.
One-half teaspoon cinnamon.
One-fourth teaspoon cloves.
One teaspoon vanilla.
Two cups flour.
One teaspoon soda dissolved in the sour cream.

Cream the butter and sugar and add beaten egg and sour cream and soda. Sift spices with the flour and add to batter after the breadcrumbs have been added. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 15 minutes. Makes three dozen cookies.

RECIPES FOR NEXT WEEK

Waffles de Luxe.

Sift together two cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons sugar and four teaspoons baking powder. Beat the yolks of two eggs until light and the whites until stiff enough to hold their shape. Mix the yolks with one and three-quarters cups milk and stir this into the flour mixture. Beat until smooth, then add one-half cup melted butter or margarine. When well mixed, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and bake on a hot waffle iron. These waffles should be very tender, delicate in texture and crisp. Makes about eight large ones or 10 small ones. Any batter left over may be covered and kept in the ice box until used.

Baked Chicken Loaf.

Chop fine one-half pound canned, boned chicken or enough cold roast chicken to make one and one-half cups closely packed. Measure two cups soft bread crumbs, pour over them one and one-half cups scalded milk, add one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons minced parsley, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon minced onion and one-half teaspoon grated lemon rind. Stir until the crumbs are mushy, then add the well beaten yolks of two eggs, the chicken, and the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a well greased, rather shallow baking pan, one about eight by eight by two inches is a good size, and bake in a hot oven for 40 minutes or until firm. Cut in slices and serve hot or cold with jellied vegetable relish or mushroom sauce. Serves four to six.

Macaroni and Mushrooms.

Break one-half pound macaroni in small pieces and cook in plenty of boiling salted water for 15 minutes, or until tender. While the macaroni is cooking, peel one-half pound mushrooms, scrape the steams and slice the caps and stems and slice the caps and ter, add the mushrooms and sprinkle with one-half teaspoon salt. Cover and cook slowly for five minutes. When the maraconi is done, drain it, add one and a half cups milk, two tablespoon flour, salt and pepper to season. Stir over a slow fire until thickened, add the mushrooms and pour into a greased baking dish. Spread one-half cup fine grated cheese over the top and bake in a moderate oven for 10 to 15 minutes, or until well browned.

Coconut Caramel Pudding.

Stir one cup granulated sugar over the fire in a small saucepan until it is melted and a light brown in color. Remove from the fire and cautiously add one-half cup boiling water. Return to the fire and stir until the mixture is smooth and slightly syrupy. Scald one quart of milk. Mix three-quarters cup brown sugar with four tablespoons cornstarch and two well beaten eggs Add the scalded milk gradually to this mixture and stir over a slow fire until it begins to thicken. Add the caramel syrup and continue stirring until very thick, smooth and creamy. Remove from the fire, add one and a half cups grated or shredded coconut and pour into small molds. Set aside to chill and stiffen. Serve cold with a little whipped or plain cream.

Spring Salad.

Wash and chill a bunch of watercress and a small head of lettuce. Rub a salad bowl with a small piece of garlic, put in the lettuce leaves and the watercress. Sprinkle one-half cup sliced spring onions, one-half cup sliced crisp radishes, one-half chopped green pepper and two diced tomatoes over the lettuce and cress. Mix three-quarters teaspoon salt with one-quarter teaspoon pepper and two tablespoons vinegar, then add six tablespoons salad oil and pour down the side of the salad bowl. Just before serving, toss the salad until well mixed and serve on cold plates.

A good quick meal soup is made by adding a few spoonfuls of cooked rice or spaghetti to two bouillon cubes mixed with one and one-half to two cups boiling water.

CLOVER FARM STORES

A Message from W. K. Kellogg

EVERY ONE is interested in the country's improvement. We will have found economic recovery only when every one does his share.

As we see it our duty is threefold: first to provide the American farmer with a fair market for his crop; second to give employment to as many people as possible; and finally to supply a wholesome food at a low cost.

When we introduced the original Corn Flakes nearly thirty years ago they were spontaneously received. They were crisp and tasted good and they were ready to serve. Year by year we enlarged our factory, hired more workers, bought more premium corn from the farmers.

Two years before NRA we adopted a six-hour working day for our twenty-six hundred employees at good pay. This meant four shifts of six hours and enabled us to give employment to twenty-five per cent more people than in pre-depression times.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are enjoyed daily by millions of people—far more than any other ready-to-eat cereal on the market. We appreciate your preference and will try constantly to give you a better product at greater value. Today you get twice as much in Kellogg's at one-half the price you paid for corn flakes before the war, 1908 to 1914.

Meanwhile both package and product have been steadily improved. Special processes—exclusively our own—keep Kellogg's Corn Flakes oven-fresh and flavor-perfect right to your table. You can buy them at grocers anywhere with full confidence in their guaranteed purity and quality.

We make only one brand of Corn Flakes—Kellogg's—in the red-and-green package.

'WASHINGTON PRAYER' FRAUD, SUIT CHARGES

Trinity Church in New York Defendant in Action Over Sale of Cards.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Freethinkers of America, Inc., accused Trinity Church yesterday of perpetrating a "religious fraud" on the public by representing George Washington as a "fervent Christian" who prayed for his country.

In a suit filed in Supreme Court the Freethinkers demanded that a tablet bearing a text headed "Washington's Prayer for Our Country" be removed from St. Paul's Chapel, in Lower Broadway, and that the chapel be restrained from selling cards reproducing the "pretended prayer." St. Paul's Chapel is a branch of Trinity Church.

Contending Washington "is never known to have made a prayer to the Christian deity," the Freethinkers charged the chapel with obtaining money under false pretenses through the sale of the cards.

In their action, the Freethinkers seek to recover 20 cents which they allegedly paid for two of the cards and ask that the rector, wardens and vestrymen of the church be compelled to pay $5000 punitive damages.

Letter by Washington.

The text inscribed on the plaque and reproduced on the cards, the complaint charges, is a "garbled and falsified" version of a circular letter written by Washington in 1783 to "the Governors of all the states on disbanding the army."

The complaint sets forth that the wording of the letter was "a sort of pious gesture in the usage of the times" and alleges that it was distorted "into a pretended petitionary prayer by Washington to deity."

In filing the action, Joseph Lewis, president of the Freethinkers, issued a statement expressing the hope that it would "act as a deterrent against the further dissemination of false statements by religious organizations upon our eminent dead."

"Time and time again," he said, "it has been pointed out that the pictures showing George Washington praying at Valley Forge are forgeries, yet religionists insist upon depicting Washington in this ignominious manner.

"A victory in this case will do much toward stopping these pious frauds."

Vice Presidents Listed.

On the letterhead of his statement was a list of honorary presidents which included Herbert Asbury, Clarence Darrow, Dr. John Dewey, Edouard Herriot, Runert Hughes, and Edna St. Vincent Millay.

The society set forth that the plaque advertised the fact that Washington had occasionally attended the church and referred to W. C. Ford's collection of the writings of Washington as the source of the "pretended prayer."

An examination of the letter referred to, the complaint said, indicated that Washington had begun his circular letter to the Governors with: "I now make it my earnest prayer, that God would have you and the state over which you preside, in His holy protection . . ." and that this had been changed to: "Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou will keep the United States in Thy holy protection . . ."

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU SAYS BILL WOULD ABOLISH IT

Assails State Measure Requiring $50,000 Surety Bond for Agencies Making Reports.

The Better Business Bureau of St. Louis has sent letters to members urging them to write State Senators and Representatives requesting that they aid in defeating a measure which would require that organizations giving out reports post a $50,000 surety bonds.

The bill, introduced in the House as No. 451 and in the Senate as No. 95, if enacted, would mean the Better Business Bureau would have to go out of business, the letter said, because bonding companies will not write such a bond.

"You could not secure credit reports from concerns like Dun & Bradstreet or from your own credit organizations," the letter added. "The bill would be a bonanza for damage suit lawyers."

CHIEF SAYS POLICE RADIO HAS CUT ST. LOUIS CRIME

Figures for Three Months of 1935 Compared With Those for Corresponding 1934 Period.

Crime has decreased the first three months of 1935 as compared with the corresponding period last year, Chief of Police McCarthy said today. He attributed the decrease to the police radio system.

Comparative figures for this year and last year shows 253 burglaries with 97 solved in the first three months of 1934 and 176 committed, and 62 solved in 1935. As to automobile thefts, 537 were committed and 491 machines were recovered in 1934, as against 512 thefts committed and 445 cars recovered this year. There were more burglaries in 1935, 527 as compared to 471, but the number solved increased from 107 in 1934 to 152 this year.

AGRICULTURE SUPPLY BILL PASSED BY THE SENATE

$126,000,000 Department Measure Sent to Conference With the House.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Senate today passed the $126,000,000 Agriculture Department supply bill and sent it to conference with the House.

The Senate adopted an amendment to defer collection of the cotton processing tax until the manufacturer sells the product instead of at time of delivery from the producer.

AMERICANS PRESENTED AT BRITISH COURT

Ten Matrons and Debutantes Among 200 Who Pass Before King.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 29.—Ten American women were presented to King George and Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace last night in the season's first court. The court was an informal opening for King George's silver jubilee.

The Americans were among 200 debutantes and matrons who passed before the King and Queen on twin golden thrones and who received royal smiles and nods in acknowledgement.

A second court will be held tonight at which nine other American matrons and debutantes will be presented.

In addition to Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador, who attended as an invited guest, the American women presented last were:

Mrs. Jessie Isador Straus, wife of the United States Ambassador to France: Miss Carolyn Nash of Cartersville, Va.; Mrs. Medley G. B. Whelpley of Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Mary Pye Hutcheson of Houston, Tex.; Miss Jean Watts of Lynchburg, Va.; Mrs. Caspar Bacon of Jamaica Plain, Mass.; Miss Jean Millett of New York; Miss Anne Richardson of Mississippi; Miss Stellita Stapleton of Washington, D. C.; and Mrs. James Somerville Jr., wife of the American Assistant Commercial Attache in London.

In keeping with the jubilee idea, the gowns of the gorgeously dressed women who passed through the throne room reflected feminine frills of 25 years ago, carried out in the fashions of today.

Queen Mary wore diamonds and emeralds in her corsage and in her hair. She had a gown of opalescent paillettes with the blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter across her breast.

The King's closely trimmed beard was set off by the bright scarlet of his uniform as Colonel-in-Chief of the Life Guards, the show regiment of British cavalry.

Gathered about the thrones, which were draped in scarlet and emblazoned with the Royal Coat-of-Arms, were the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Earl of Harewood, Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort and the Marchioness of Cambridge.

The court, the first ever held this early in March, ended with a buffet supper at which the guests sipped champagne and ate chicken sandwiches.

The Lord Chamberlain insisted that costume regulations sometimes ignored in the past be strictly observed.

A few elderly women who feared catching cold were allowed to wear gowns with high neck lines. The rest, however, though dignified and unostentatious, wore decollete, many having off-the-shoulder necklines.

Full length trains, the traditional three feathers in the head-dress and jewelry also were decreed, the latter giving court jewelers an opportunity to evolve new styles in the increasingly popular tiara. The 1935 model, about one inch deep, is worn halo fashion from the top of the head to the ears.

The matrons presented, in the main, inclined to oyster and silver tones for their dress, while the debutantes leaned to pastels.

Some of the costumes worn:

Mrs. Robert W. Bingham: A period dress of dull French blue taffeta, the skirt full with panels of blue and silver lace and the yoke with pink satin revers; a cream-colored net gilet; a bouquet of artificial flowers at the waist; a train of blue and silver lace fastened at the shoulder with diamond clips.

Mrs. Straus: A gown of ice blue silver lame of streamline cut with close-fitting bodice and skirt, the latter widening from the knee to the hem; train of the same material.

Mrs. Bacon: A dress of pale turquoise blue faille modeled on simple lines with full skirt and plain bodice; matching train of turquoise velvet lined with silver; silver slippers; blue feather fan.

Miss Hutcheson: All-white period gown of soft taffeta with circular insets of white tulle, full skirt and dropped shoulder.

How Ovaltine Helps To Build Up a Child

Often At a Surprisingly Rapid Rate

OVALTINE is a delicious pure food concentrate—originally created in Switzerland and now made over here. . . . Already its use has been approved by more than 20,000 physicians. While thousands of mothers give it religiously for the health benefits it fosters.

First: Ovaltine usually helps to add weight remarkably—and surprising increases are regularly reported by mothers everywhere.

Second: At the same time, appetite is stimulated in a scientific way. Not by merely "tempting" the taste. But by actually helping nature to create the sensation of hunger.

Thus when a child drinks Ovaltine, he not only inclines to eat more of the healthful every-day foods that are set before him—but usually manifests a greatly increased desire for milk.

Third: As appetite and weight increase, it is frequently noted that nervousness diminishes to a marked degree.

For the sake of your child, we urge you to try Ovaltine. You simply give it mixed with milk (either hot or cold) and children love it for its delicious taste. You can get it at any drug or grocery store. Ask for it today.

NOTE: Thousands of people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. It is also highly recommended by physicians as a strengthening food for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged. When taken as a hot drink at bedtime, it promotes sound sleep quickly with resulting new energy next day.

$0,000,000 Good Dollars.
Now, We Are Paying.
The Schwab Worm Turns.
Hanging? No. Chopping? Yes.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1935.)

ONE GOOD piece of news. Next Monday, the railroad workers, as fine, loyal and faithful a body of workers as any in the the world, will have restored their pay level of 1931. This means an increase of $80,000,000 in railroad payrolls. No dollars could act more effectively or quickly to relieve depression. Each of the $80,000,000 will be spent as soon as it is received, and it will be spent by men who have earned it for families that need it.

Six years ago the depression started, half a year before anybody knew it.

New York's Governor asks for $55,000,000 more for the unemployed. New York city spends more than $200,000,000 a year for relief. The National Congress is about to give the President, on top of the other billions, $4,880,000,000 to kill the depression which refuses to die.

Often, after the big war ended, workers were advised to save money, being told, "some day this country must pay for its share in the big war; you will help pay and it will not be pleasant."

Workers, and the rest of the country are paying now.

Charles M. Schwab, arriving from Paris across the ocean, turns pessimist, a "bear on business," says the United States appears to have "gone back."

THAT is news. Mr. Schwab usually sees about ten rainbows and ten thousand million quadrillion dollars of profit ahead.

That the great optimist should turn, saying "we don't seem to be progressing. We seem to have gone back," need not discourage you.

Charles M. Schwab is 73 years old and he will permit somebody, not much younger, to suggest that a man of 73 often becomes discouraged just as young men of 43 or 53 are about to put everything right. Age believes bad news, youth believes only good news.

Chancellor Hitler learns with horror, that four Nazis, convicted of spying and plotting to separate Memel from Lithuania, are sentenced to be hanged, and 83 other Germans are sentenced to prison.

At a distance, it seems that hanging four men convicted of betraying the Government is no worse than chopping off the heads of two women convicted of spying.

Memel, across the Memel River, separating Prussia and Memel, will perhaps be the cause of the next big or little war. It can hardly be little.

Memel was given to Lithuania after Germany's defeat. German crowds in Berlin sing "Memel is German and remains German." Hitler appears on a balcony and waves to the singers. How easily war can start, and how little singing has to do with winning it.

Sir John Simon, the British Foreign Secretary, one of those ultra-smooth British diplomats, is as much shocked by Hitler's plain-speaking as Hitler himself by Lithuania's proposal to hang four Nazis. British statesmanship had such an easy time here, getting what it wanted at the Washington conference, after getting what it needed from the United States Treasury, that to learn from Simon that his talk with Hitler developed "divergence of views" is most shocking.

Mere numbers mean nothing. Richmond, Ind., reports quintuplets, "five swell kids," but the kids happen to be real kids, the mother a "nanny goat." Five kids at birth is unusual, as much so as the recent birth of bison triplets. But it is only when you ascend among the primates, chimpanzee, gorilla or man, that quintuplets become important.

Every female oyster produces a billion young ones and thinks nothing of it; the mother mouse raises 100 young ones every year in her stride; the shad, if she could hatch and raise all her offspring, would fill the ocean with them. Nature wisely concentrates on limiting the number of human beings, the most cruel, combative and bloody of all mammals.

Finds $1550; Gets Job.

By the Associated Press.

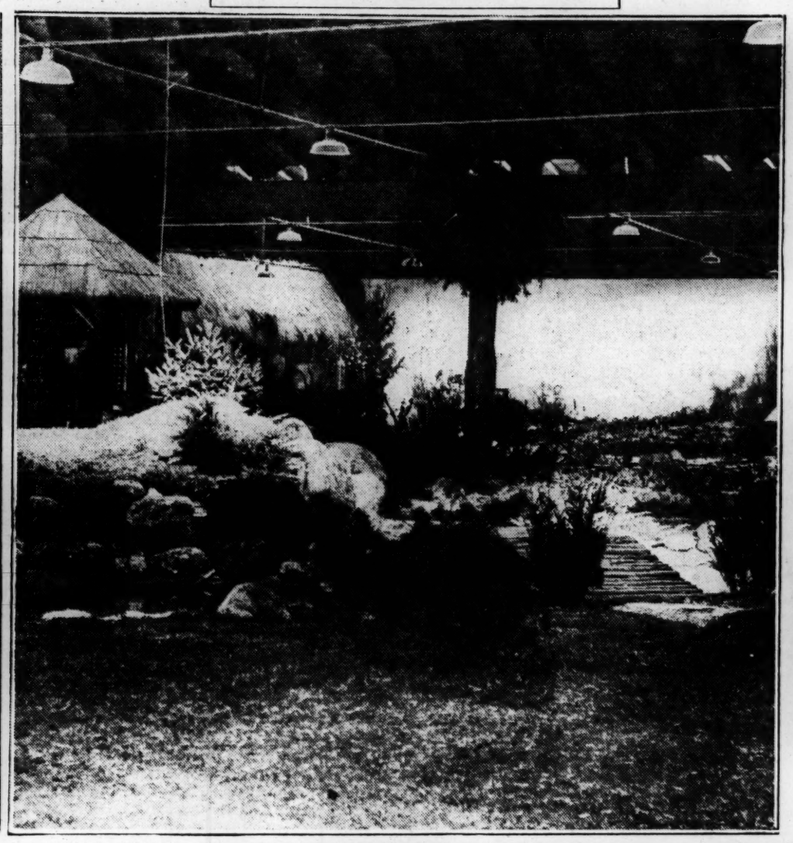

SEATTLE, March 29.—Dan Nolan, who was unemployed, Sunday found a billfold containing $1550 in bills while sitting in a cafeteria. He telephoned Harry G. Kimball, the owner, head of a printing company here. Kimball peeled off a $50 bill and gave it to Nolan and told him, "You're going to have a job with my company from now on."

These new creations are called "suit dresses" because they simulate a suit in design, yet they are actually one-piece frocks.*

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I WILL BELIEVE IN MYSELF!
No matter how I blunder—no matter how I fail—
No matter how often I fall short of all I consider beautiful and true and strong—
STILL, I WILL BELIEVE IN MYSELF!
No matter what other people think of me—
No matter how often they misunderstand me, or sneer or laugh, or blame me, fairly or unfairly—
No matter how they fail me or betray me,
STILL I WILL BELIEVE IN MYSELF!

Elsie Robinson

And no matter how poor a record I make in life—
When life is too much for me, when I cannot take it,
When I make a mess of it and feel utterly lost and bankrupt—
STILL I WILL BELIEVE IN MYSELF!
There is no egotism in that—
No sour cynicism—nor any brag gadocio.
I am not hanging wreaths on myself, nor whistling in the dark,
Nor telling God where to get off—
Rather, I am simply and reverently stating the truth—all the truth, I know.
I WILL BELIEVE IN MYSELF BECAUSE I FEEL SURE THAT SOMEWHERE IN THAT SELF THERE IS GOODNESS—
THERE IS GOD!
It is said (in an old poem) that God made man of mud,
And breathed into him a small, bright spark of Himself.
I believe that—
I have seen it proved in many men—I have seen it proved in myself.
That is why I BELIEVE IN MYSELF.
You may say I am a fool—And I am!
You may say I am a failure—And I am!
You may say I am bad—And I am!
But beneath all that—beneath the foolishness and my wrongness there is something RIGHT!
There is another person brighter and braver, kinder and more honest than this person you know—
A person as different from this person you know as a spark is different from mud.
I BELIEVE IN THAT SPARK; I BELIEVE IN MYSELF!
No matter how I feel—no matter how others fail me—I will believe in that spark.
That is my hope—that is my creed.
Living or dying I WILL BELIVE IN THAT SPARK, I WILL BELIEVE IN MYSELF, I WILL BELIEVE AND BET ON THE GOD I CONTAIN!

TWO MINUTES WITH ROSA PONSELLE

A Diva Tells How She Made Her Debut as a Singer

By Marguerite Martyn

THE appointment, made by the advance agent, was for 10 o'clock in the morning. Rather early to disturb a prima donna, I thought. And I was right. Words came sizzling through the telephone on the desk at Hotel Jefferson which caused the clerk to draw back and wince. Not before 2:30 could Miss Rosa Ponselle be seen, he relayed to waiting reporters.

At 2:30, when the faithful had assembled again, "Miss Ponselle is sleeping. Call back later," was the message. At 4 o'clock, "Miss Ponselle will see you at 5." By 5 o'clock some reporters had developed temperaments of their own. This one alone appeared. Miss Ponselle was out. But she would be back. Would I please wait?

So I waited until 5:15 when the tall, radiant, dark eyed, majestic and unmistakably Italian diva blew in, literally, on the March gale, clothed in a long black broadtail coat and brown turban askew on wild black ringlets of hair.

"So sorry! But you see what time it is. I have an appointment with the hairdresser at 5:15. I can give you just two minutes," she announced.

"The hair dresser cannot take me later. Some gentlemen are waiting to see me," she rattled on in her bubbling, effervescent way. "I couldn't see them looking like this with my hair all blown about. Sorry to have disappointed you this morning but I had had a bad night on the train, and if the singer cannot sleep, there can be no concert, you know," she apologized sweetly.

The concert was to be the following night but I did not remind her of that.

"Perhaps we'd better call off the interview," I suggested generously.

"Oh, no, indeed. Do be seated," motioning me graciously with a what-can-I-do-for-you attitude to drag up a chair near the one she had chosen for herself in the hotel lobby.

"Tell me the pretty story of how your sister helped you at the beginning of your career and how you are now helping her get into grand opera," I asked.

"It is true, Carmela now has some very nice concert and radio engagements and sings with the Metropolitan. She should have been there long ago. She had her audition at the same time I had mine, but ill health interfered with her progress. And it is true we have always been stepping stones to each other," she responded. "The first time was when she had a vaudeville engagement. Sister acts were then quite the fashion and she mentioned to Gene Hughes, head of the Keith circuit, that she had a sister who sang. 'Bring her on,' he suggested. So I came down to New York from our home in Meriden, Conn., a nice round, healthy, roly poly youngster of 16. Mr. Hughes took one look at me and screamed, 'Too fat. She will never do.'

"'But do let her show you her voice,' my sister pleaded.

"'No, she is much too fat,' he decided and that was that.

"'We'll fix him,' my sister whispered slyly. 'Sunday night we'll invite him to a spaghetti supper. We will cook it as we do at home.'

"And so we did and while he was eating spaghetti and enjoying it hugely"—all this was accompanied by typically Latin gesticulation and hands were now going through the movements of eating spaghetti—"I arose nonchalantly, went to the piano and sang the 'Kiss Me Again' aria from 'Mlle. Modiste.'

ROSA PONSELLE

"Well, he laid down his fork and exclaimed—you'll have to tone this down so your paper will print it—'Such-and-such and so-and-so! fat or not fat, the girl can sing. Tomorrow night you shall go on together!'

• • •

"'BUT she has no costume,' my sister objected.

"'Wear what she has on,' commanded the manager. We were both wearing tailored shirt waists and skirts and those were our costumes the next night at the Star Theater in the Bronx. 'Those Taillored Girls,' they billed us and that first night we stopped the show. We were starred immediately and made a long vaudeville tour, singing high brow music always, never any trash. I mostly played the accompaniments on the piano, but we would join in duets, like the Barcarolle from 'Tales of Hoffman,' 'Butterfly,' 'La Boheme' and popular songs of the higher grade like Tosti's 'Goodby.'"

"Is it true that you were working in a restaurant across the street from the Metropolitan when you met a singer who introduced you to Caruso, who introduced you to Gatti-Casazza?" she was asked.

"Not the restaurant part," she replied. "So many things get into the newspapers. It is true that Caruso introduced me to Gatti-Casaza. I was invited to an audition and two days later received a contract. That was in May, 1918, and in November I made my debut in 'Forza del Destino' with Caruso in the cast. I learned that role in two weeks' time and at the time I had not another opera role to my name. All that work came later. But I was not without experience. I had sung in church at Meriden, at picture houses and as a cabaret attraction at a hotel in New Haven. I had always sung. I cannot remember when I could not read and sing notes. My parents came from Italy and brought with them a native love of music and I grew up in that atmosphere. When my chance came it was found I had one of those perfectly placed voices.

"The restaurant to which you allude," she said, searching her memory, "Oh, that might be when Carmela was singing at Lauber's restaurant and one night suggested that when she sang 'O Sole Mio,' I, sitting at a table, should respond with the refrain. There happened to be present the owner of a concert hall at Narragansett Pier. Immediately he offered us an engagement and immediately we were a great hit there."

The two minutes were up. Miss Ponselle—she has never married—was moving toward the beauty shop, calling back as she went, "You will forgive me. I must get myself groomed up for all I have to do tomorrow, you know."

Suggestions For Medicines Kept in Home

All Old Remedies Should Be Discarded—Precautions With Poison.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE average home medicine closet may be roughly divided into those articles which are regularly used and a second group which may be called the "accumulation of the ages." The accumulation of ages consists in such things as capsules in a pasteboard box which Dr. Lysander gave father for a peculiar attack of jaundice that he had about seven years ago.

Dr. Clendening

The first thing to do in preparing a family medicine closet is to clear out all the debris that nobody is using regularly. Most of the liquid preparations have probably been decomposed and become inert by this time so they will not be much of a loss.

In recommending what should be in a medicine closet, people usually say that the poisons should be put on the top shelves and nothing but poisons should be put there. As a matter of fact, the best thing to do is not to have any poisons in the medicine closet at all. The only one that possibly might be permissible is lysol, and if you have a bottle of lysol it should be in a bottle with a rough outside. If not, put three bands of adhesive around the bottle so that you will be able to feel it as well as see it, and know immediately that you have hold of a bottle containing poison.

Adhesive plaster, sterile gauze, gauze bandages, absorbent cotton, vaseline, and tincture of iodine, should be kept in a box (a cigar box size) by themselves and labeled "Surgical emergency."

Of drugs, there are only four classes which should be allowed in the medicine cupboard:

1. Cathartics — Which cathartic you have is not particularly important except that no household where there are children should have a cathartic pill containing strychnine—the socalled A. S. & B. pills—aloin, strychnine and belladonna. Strychnine poisoning from the eating of these pills is the most common cause of death due to poisons in children in this country. Of the cathartics, I believe the best to have on hand is castor oil. It works, it is a thorough cleanser and its taste is so disagreeable that it is not likely to form a habit. For chronic use by all odds the best, in my opinion, is mineral oil or petrolatum.

2. Headache Tablets or Pain Killers—There is probably nothing better than aspirin in five-grain tablets, although aspirin and phenacetin, two grains each, and one grain of caffeine citrate in a capsule or table make a somewhat more efficient remedy.

Bicarbonate of soda or milk of magnesia, or the combination in the form of bisodol and other similar preparations, may be handy in case there is some member of the family who suffers from acid indigestion or gas.

3. Hypnotics or Sleeping Potions—In the form of the barbiturates—veronal, medinal, alonal, amytal, etc.—we have extremely efficient sleep-producers. They are doubtfully habit-forming and, in my experience, not habit-forming at all for 90 per cent of the population. For many people these are almost a necessity—for those who lead a life under pressure. However, other people do not like the idea of having a sleep-producing drug, which might be habit-forming, in the house, and this opinion must be respected.

4. Ointments—Some ointments for external use in case of irritation may be considered a part of the family medicine chest. Zinc oxide ointment and ammoniated mercury ointment are both official and should cover all requirements.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Post-Mortem Of Duplicate Bridge Hand

Analysis of the Bidding and Play of a Contract Which Was Set.

By P. Hal Sims

TWO players were chuckling jovially after a recent duplicate. Knowing the symptoms, most of the other addicts avoided them as the plague; so, in the due course of time, they gravitated to each other.

"Let me tell you about this hand," they chorused.

And, strange to say, they were both talking about the same hand.

	♠A Q x x x ♥A K 10 x x x ♦5 ♣3
♠K J 10 ♥Q J 9 7 x ♦K Q x ♣Q x	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠x x ♥8 ♦J x x x x ♣A J x x x
	♠7 6 2 ♥x ♦A 10 9 x ♣K 10 9 x x

North and South are bound to get into trouble on the above holding, unless South, with a strange sense of foreboding, restrains himself. With the bidding going: One heart (by North), two clubs (by South), two spades (by North), South, in view of his partner's reversal of suits, might give North another chance. He might bid two no trumps or three diamonds. North will then enthusiastically jump into a game contract.

As a matter of fact, North has an excellent play for four spades. With a diamond opening, he can trump two hearts in the dummy (it so happens that East can't overruff South), give up a heart, a spade and a club. Once the heart break was disclosed, however, most declarers wished themselves back at two spades. If the only spade finesse open to North lost it would be very bad. Top for East and West was a North and South team who put up the conventional one heart, two clubs, two spades, two no trumps bidding; then North jumped to four hearts. Why South didn't bid four spades is more than we know; he passed and West doubled. North redoubled and South passed once more. A very nice result.

Naturally chuckler number one had been in the West seat. Chuckler number two was a South player. Here's the way the bidding had looked from his angle:

West had opened with one heart—vulnerable. Under some systems, West counts a half a trick in hearts, one trick in diamonds, one in spades and a splendid plus value in the queen of clubs. North doubled. Why? The only thing he is really interested in is one heart doubled, and unless South drops dead he won't pass. However, North held the other major. That was his excuse. East bid two diamonds and South doubled. This was passed around to East, who rescued himself with three clubs. By this time South was beginning to believe that East's bids were psychic; that he held a six-card heart suit support for a runout. South fell for the gag, however. He doubled three clubs. It was at this point that West put in the crowning bid, three no trumps! (Honest!) North clambered on top of the table to double that one.

The way West handled his cards the contract could have been set five tricks, but South was a trifle sleepy, so he only set the declarer four, doubled and vulnerable.

The New Faith That Is Needed For Better Life

By the Rev. J. F. Newton

IN the famous low-temperature laboratory of Leyden, a scientist, we are told, has come within one 5000th of a degree of absolute zero; that is, 459 degrees below zero by a Fahrenheit thermometer.

At that temperature a new world is revealed, a world in which gases solidify, all motion ceases, and the dance of atoms, electrons and molecules is stilled; in short, of stagnation and death.

As the temperature is lowered the tempo slows down, and we have an intimation, on a minute scale, of the dreadful end which awaits our solar system when the "ice-death" arrives and the world is frozen.

Happily we need not worry about such a fate, but the fact is a striking analogy of human history in the last 20 years. Since the raging fever of war, the temperature of the times has been erratic.

At last, in the great depression, it went down, down, down, until it dropped to absolute zero, or very near it. We have lived in a world of frozen faith, frozen assets, in the icy grip of panic fear.

It has been a dreadful time. We have felt the chill of suspicion, resentment, hatred, loss of heart, divided counsels, weakness of purpose, cynicism, pessimism and the expectation of vast disaster.

Always it is so when the moral and spiritual barometer falls in any community. In the human body low temperature is dangerous; it gives our microbic enemies the advantage and they always take it.

So in the social body, the dire effects of low vitality are soon evident. The devouring parasites of selfishness, greed, and tyranny get an all-too-easy chance to poison the life of humanity.

What we need is some insight, some impulse, to raise the temperature of the human spirit, so that men will pull together, think well of each other, maintain mutual courage, hope and good cheer.

We have seen what the world looks like when the highest life of man is at low ebb. We cannot live in a frozen world, and only a new faith in the best things can bring warmth and glow and joy!

Tipsy Charlotte

One large stale sponge cake.
One tablespoon gelatin.
One cup cold water.
One cup granulated sugar.
One teaspoon vanilla or almond extract.
Two cups whipping cream.
One cup sherry or port.
Two cups milk.
Three eggs.
Pinch of salt.
One cup almonds, shelled.
Angelica.
Candied cherries.

The sponge cake should be at least two days old. Make a Bavarian cream filling for the cake as follows: Sprinkle the gelatin onto the cold water, then place over boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add one-half cup of the sugar, and stir until dissolved. Remove from the heat and cool. Add the flavoring. When slightly thickened beat until fluffy and fold in the whipped cream. Cut a one-inch slice from the top of the cake and scoop out the center portion, leaving sides and bottom three-fourths inch thick. Moisten the inside of the cake evenly with half of the wine. Pour the gelatin filling into the center cavity. Replace the top and pour remaining wine over it. Place in the refrigerator for at least two or three hours.

Make a custard sauce as follows: Scald the milk in the double boiler, then pour a small amount gradually into the eggs beaten with remaining sugar and salt. Combine with rest of milk in double boiler and cook, stirring constantly until mixture coats the spoon. Chill. Blanche the almonds, and while they are still warm, shred lengthwise. Toast slightly to restore crispness. When cake is ready to serve pour chilled custard sauce over it. Stud with almond shreds and decorate with angelica and candied cherries. This makes 10 to 12 servings.

Burned Edges.

If the cake is burned a bit on its edges, do not spoil it by icing over the charred portions. Rub a fine grater lightly over the black places, holding it so the crumbs will fall off. Then ice on the new surface and make no apologies.

Gentle Manner Is Needed With Small Children

By Mrs. Brooke P. Church

ONE of the essentials in handling very little children is gentleness of speech and manner. A baby is like a foreigner and must be given time to understand slowly what is asked of it. Furthermore, it is in a position of helplessness, which even the foreigner does not often feel. It is unable to act for itself, and is liable to be forced into things which are strange and may be objectionable to it. There is a tremendous nerve strain put on the baby or toddler who is always being hurried or spoken to in loud tones of voice.

There is the child who is snatched from play and rushed into the bathroom to have its face and hands washed for the next meal. It has no time to prepare itself for the break, and frets and cries in protest through the whole proceeding. As a result of its struggle the adult scrubs it too vigorously, adding insult to injury with ears and nose rubbed too hard, and soap in eyes and mouth.

Small wonder if the child, subjected to such treatment every day, becomes nervous and fractious. A child should be given time to accept an idea and as far as possible co-operate in carrying it out. It is dealing constantly with a host of new tools and at the same time learning to understand and use language. It needs time whenever an order is given or a suggestion made, to orient itself and prepare for its next move.

Watch the deliberations of the tiny child. It seldom hurries unless driven by fear or hunger, two instinctive reactions which need no thought. The adult in dealing with it must gear speech and action to this slow movement if he wishes to train the child to independent thought and action, and not simply to make of it a puppet dependent on his own convenience and state of mind.

MAN ABOUT MANHATTAN

By GEORGE TUCKER

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT'S stinging critical barbs of the moment are being redirected against an old peeve, the movies, which he has always professed to despise. After a recent broadcast, in which he referred to films as canned stuff that people send parcel post from town to town, a Broadway gadabout remarked that Woollcott preferred to attack only big shots.

I don't think this is true. Woollcott is a superb showman with a hair-trigger wit and he will cut down anybody who incurs his ire.

Recently he lifted the receiver and a pleasant voice asked for information concerning Broadway. "Are the foreign actors this season up to the high level of other years?" he wanted to know.

"I never permit myself to be interviewed," Woollcott declared.

"I'm not interviewing you—I'm quoting you on only one question."

"It costs money to quote me," the little man is said to have replied.

"Then I won't quote you—I'll print your answer without giving you credit."

"But that would be the same as my writing your story for you."

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT . . . is sharp at retort.

"Listen," exclaimed the fellow, "what do you want me to do—hang up?"

"Yes," whispered Alexander Woollcott—and they both did.

Epicures.

ALMOST everybody knows Emil, head waiter at the Hotel Gotham where so many English actors and actresses stay. He knows people by their appetities, and, cognizant of his vast store of information, I questioned him as to some of his patrons.

Little Freddie Bartholomew, says Emil, has a passion for lump sugar. Leslie Howard will go into a dance any day for a slice of roast beef and a Yorkshire pudding. Tallulah Bankhead dotes on melba toast. Like her noted countryman, G. B. S., Dame Sybil Thorndike detests the sight of meat. She did try an order of fish once, but "the sight of those poor dead things" distressed her so that Emil had to hurry them away.

Bramwell Fletcher, who recently married Helen Chandler, likes cold beer and hot chicken. His bride insists on hot milk three times daily. She also is fond of lobster Newburgh, if it follows this particular recipe:

Meat of the lobster; sauted in butter; add dash of paprika; one demi-tasse of sherry wine; boil down then add coffee cup of sweet cream. Boil, thicken with teaspoon flour, teaspoon of butter. Mix thoroughly; add one egg yoke. Whip well. Serve.

Constance Cummings thinks nothing so delightful as golden buck. She has an order every evening after returning from the theater, and Emil has learned to put it on the fire the moment the clock says 11:15. Constance likes her golden buck topped by a poached egg, over which a minimum of cheese is sprinkled.

Among Friends.

BEN BERNIE inadvertently ran into a couple of pals at the Versailles Club. Going into his act, the old maestro was chagrined to hear two hecklers laughing and talking in the balcony. There was, too, the unmistakable clink of billiard balls. They were indulging in loud-mouthed witticisms and having great sport. Ben joined in the hilarity when he learned that it was a gag arranged by Jimmy Durante and his old sidekick, Lou Clayton.

CONSTANCE CUMMINGS . . . likes cheese on her egg.

There is entertainment of a high order, gratis, at one bar on Fifty-second street—the street where most imbibers linger at night. After repeal a number of musicians contributed $100 each to the opening of a new rendezvous. In no time at all the place caught on, and now is frequented by gay throngs nightly. Usually there are a dozen well known musicians—composers, conductors, singers—around, and their impromptu renditions have become the talk of midtown.

Down Avenue A, sirens wide open, swept a police car. It was night, and twin red lights stabbed the black—the first I ever noticed. I asked a corner policeman: "Are red lights usual on police cars now"

"That wasn't a police car—that was the fire chief," he told me. "But some of the police cars have them. They are easier to see at night and give pedestrians a chance to get out of the way. That makes for instantaneous right-of-way for ambulances, fire trucks and police cars."

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WOULD like to ask you a few questions:

How many states have eugenic marriage laws? 2. What is a bride expected to furnish for the church wedding? 3. Is white satin worn during the early and late summer? 4. Is it necessary to know a foreign language before entering a college? 5. Does a teacher's course call for two years of a language? 6. Is it incorrect to say, "Pardon me," when disturbing others to pass in the front of them at a theater? 7. When in a theater, if there is no usher, shouldn't the man walk ahead of the lady to find the seat?.

C. A. V.

Twenty-six states have some kind of law to cover this subject. Six prohibit persons having epilepsy from marrying; Connecticut, Missouri, Kansas, Minnesota, Ohio and Oregon. More information may be had at the public library.

2. My booklet, "Guide for the Bride," explains how all expenses of the wedding are taken care of. 3. White satin is used for bridal gowns at any season of the year, but doubtless chiffon or white lace would be more comfortable in the summer. 4. Not all colleges require a foreign language examination for entrance. 5. It is more correct to say "Excuse me," or "I'm sorry." After you, you have done nothing for which you should ask pardon. 7. Yes. When he has arrived at the aisle where the seats are located, he stands and waits until the lady has entered the row of seats, then follows.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl 14 years old attending high school. I have been asking my mother to buy me some high heels, as a number of the girls of my age are wearing them; but my mother objects to my wearing them because I am too young. Will you please put this letter in your column as I think your advice will help a lot of us school girls?

ANOTHER SCHOOL GIRL.

You see I am doing as you ask, in printing your letter, but I am not so sure you will be pleased with my answer or that it will, from your viewpoint, help you school girls.

No doubt the girls who wear those high heels have over-persuaded their mothers; but you should be glad your mother is so wise and that she is not swerved from her good taste, because other girls have made this mistake. Among people of good taste, some of those who could buy their daughters dozens of pairs of high heeled shoes, you will not see these girls wearing them. An exception is sometimes made for dancing shoes, but even then, there is a little compromise in the height of heel.

If you will go to the best departments where good, and also costly, shoes are sold for misses, the merchant will show you those which are proper and wise for the girl with a growing foot. He will not, I am sure, advise extremely high heels. In this, as in other points of dress, the woman or girl who is overdressed is not the smartly-dressed person. Conspicuous notes in her costume call attention to the fact that she does not know how to recognize these points and that she is a person of very little experience, or has little taste, in seeing and buying the right clothes.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I NOTICED an article in the paper about the American Ballet, organized by Edward Warburg. I am very interested in this ballet, and I wonder if you could give me any information about it. If not, where could I find the information I am seeking? I should like to know if they have a ballet school and how it would be possible to enter.

JANE M.

The American School of the Ballet organized by E. M. Warburg, is as yet not in the New York City Directory. But, since this man and his father, Felix Warburg, are so well known,, probably E. M. Warburg, American School of the Ballet, New York City, N. Y., would be enough. You might add in one corner, care of Felix Warburg.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

PLEASE help me decide on what type of blouse or shirtwaist to wear with a very tailored suit. The suit is of brown tweed, with a plain skirt, vest coat and top-coat. Will you also tell me what color hat, gloves, shoes and purse I should wear. Would light brown be correct for these accessories?

JEANNE L.

There are so many blouses in different materials and in different types it is hard to miss the attractive one. One of the newest is a blouse in waistcoat effect with tie at the neck and short sleeves. This is made in plaid cotton broadcloth. The plaid pique or taffeta are also smart.

Some of the newer accessories are in brown pigskin. This would be an attractive finish in bag, gloves and shoes.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

IS a 1913 nickel worth more than any other? I have often heard that it was. If so, where will I find out about this?

BOY FROM CAIRO.

There were but six 1913 nickels, having the Liberty head on them instead of the buffalo, made, and these are all in the possession of one man. This is the valuable 1913 nickel you hear so much about.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I RECEIVED your letter Saturday morning and went over to see the dog. He is a big faithful watch dog and I sure have a good time playing with him. I cannot thank you and the lady who gave him to me enough. Wishing you loads of success, I am one of your little readers.

Smart Items In Accessories Of Spring Suits

Hats, Blouses and Footwear Are Adapted for Each Type of Costume.

By Sylvia Stiles

SOME of the thrill of buying a new spring suit has been missing this year because every woman seems to be bent on the same shopping mission, so the selection of things to go with suits is supplying the real excitement.

Since this costume is recognized as most important for spring, a woman can wear a suit from early morning until morning again—but she must have more than one. The sports suit is quite definitely marked in its fabric and its lines. The tailored version is equally distinctive and decidedly trim. For important luncheons and for afternoon occasions there is the dressmaker suit while a more formal version has after-dark privileges.

Each of these types of spring costumes calls for a specific type of hat, blouse, footwear and small accessories. So the woman who is building a suit wardrobe will need things to go with each of her outfits. Here's a brief summary of the smartest items gleaned from the retail stocks:

Selections.

The sports suit is recognized this spring by a certain woodsy character. Besides the roughness of the fabric, it imitates foliage or flowers in its color. Additions, therefore, will carry on this theme. They will heighten or subdue, as is necessary. A hat will be brimmed with a forward sweep to cover the eyes and it will be of felt. If the shade is light the band will be dark, or vice versa. Rough leather will do best for footwear, and by all means enjoy the vogue of "flats." Ghillie ties never were smarter, so don't let anyone convince you otherwise. Sandals are worth investigation. Bag and gloves of pigskin will enhance a costume, especially if the bag is a thick kit that swings from leather handles and the gloves are short and snappy. See that your sweater has a hand-knit look, even though it costs only a few dollars, and that the neck is high.

Selection of blouses may cause you some difficulty for your sports suit as well as for any other because the beauties are so plentiful. A cotton or crash shirt made like a man's, a screaming striped pique blouse, or a polka dotted silk one would be nice. A scarf of thin knitted woolen or of men's shirting may be included. If you insist upon gewgaws, try a tricky belt made of wooden blocks painted two different colors, and a bracelet to match.

The tailored girl will wear a sailor and it is likely to be made of rough, shiny straw. The shade may be lipstick red if the suit is navy or gray, it may be burnt straw if the costume is navy or brown, or it may be a pepper and salt effect if the outfit is black. Gabardine and leather ties will compliment a sleek, fitted suit, but patent leather pumps will be impressive, too. A blouse of silk shirting that demands studs and links will lead the owner to the jewelry counter where she also comes away with a monogrammed fob. Another blouse of sheer cotton that has frills at the neckline will send her searching for a pink carnation. A pique or linen gilet will add a chic note as will chamois gloves and handbag. And last, but far from least, is the silver fox scarf that makes the simplest sort of suit into an elegant costume.

Added Chic.

If the dressy suit smacks of the regency era, a baku hat touched up with an old-fashioned bouquet and a bit of velvet ribbon will be the crowning achievement. Footwear will display either buttons or straps, or perhaps both. The leather or fabric doesn't matter, but the color does. Lace-trimmed chiffon or georgette created in the fluffy shirtwaist styling will be ideal for the blouse and a shoulder cape of some sleek fur, such as galyak, harmonizes perfectly. The bag may be a pouch or envelope, but it should have some dull metal trimmings and a monogram. Since the sleeves of this suit doubtless will be three-quarter length and rather wide, gloves will be conspicuous. Taffeta ones will be attractive, especially if the suit has taffeta trimming.

To complete the suit which fills some of its important engagements in the evening, look for a turban which has a veil, high heeled T-strap sandals, a fox cape, a taffeta envelope, a frilly lace collar, flower buttons for your ears, or a long string of pearls to wrap around your neck, and the chaste sort of gloves. If your jewelry is white, then your gloves will be also, but there's a tone of creamy white kid to go with creamy pearls, and pinky beige suede to match the same tone of your beads.

MARGARET LINDSAY AND THE GREAT DECEPTION

By H.H. Niemeyer

It Was the Heyday of English Actors, So the Aspiring Young Iowa Girl Changed Her Name and Personality and Fooled the Wisest.

HOLLYWOOD, March 28.

THIS, as we have remarked before, is a great town for deceptions. "Prince" Mike Romanoff got away with his bum title and his worse checks out here, not once but three times, with a couple of nation-wide exposures coming in between. But then Hollywood likes to be fooled, likes to entertain a title even when it knows the title isn't on the level, and is willing to pay, in the grand manner, for the entertaining.

So it was a reasonably easy matter for Margaret Kies, coming out of the corn belt of Iowa with a name changed to Margaret Lindsay—which sounded English—and a newly gathered London accent to fool the Flickerville village into believing that she was a dyed in the wool English actress who was seeing America, and Hollywood, for the first time.

But Miss Kies-Lindsay didn't just aim at fooling Hollywood. She shot at a higher mark, the more or less astute motion picture magnates. Margaret proceeded to take-in one of the really wise ones, Winfield (Winnie) Sheehan, boss of the Fox lot. As a New York newspaper man Sheehan had been a ship-news reporter at one stage of his career and had met many English men and women that way. Later, as a film magnate, he spent a lot of time in London, so he KNEW English people when he saw them.

But the corn fed Margaret Kies fooled him. Sheehan was getting ready to make "Cavalcade" and was insisting on an all-English cast. Margaret Lindsay was the first person he engaged. She was that English.

Today Margaret, now an established leading woman of the films and back to her original role of just an Iowa beauty, laughs at the Great Deception which put her on her feet in Hollywood. But she thinks she will never get a chance to play as important a role on the screen as she did when she acted in real life.

"There's no question in my mind," she says, "that this Englishwoman I played, off the stage, spelled the difference between what success I have had and possible failure. I do not know, of course, that I would not now be in pictures, anyway; but it seems quite likely, if I hadn't thought of the scheme, that I would still be playing in minor stock companies, if there are any left, getting the 'experience' demanded by film producers before they will accept a newcomer to the fold."

Except for that one incident, not a minor one to be sure, Margaret's life has been much the same as that of any other American girl in Iowa or Missouri or anywhere else.

"There was nothing at all unusual about my childhood," she told me. "Like other human beings, I was born and simply grew up. There were five other children in our family, one brother and four sisters and I was the oldest. Being the 'big sister' of course brought me the task of playing nursemaid to the rest of the kids on many occasions."

• • •

MARGARET LINDSAY was born in Dubuque on Sept. 19, 25 years ago, to Mr. and Mrs. John L. Kies, who had long been prominent in the business and social life of that mid-Western city. Margaret in her early childhood developed an amazing talent for mimicry. Margaret would watch her parents and their friends by the hour and later her mother would discover her in some secluded corner, imitating older people by word and action.

"At times," Mrs. Kies, a recent Hollywood visitor said, "she amazed us by her ability and, as is natural with all parents, we often had her perform for the benefit of friends and guests.

"And her sisters and brother, too, when they were old enough, often were called upon to perform little skits for the edification of their elders," Mrs. Kies recalled. "During their better moments — they did have a few," the mother added, "the children, under Margaret's guidance, frequently composed childish playlets. Margaret, of course, invariably was the star and director of the productions, some of which were quite amusing."

As the years passed the talent grew apace with little Miss Kies. During her 12 years in Visitation Convent in Dubuque, Margaret was constantly cast in grammar school "dialogues" and playlets, and, more often than not, she was the star of the production.

It was upon her graduation from Visitation High School that Margaret's thoughts first turned to the theater. She suddenly decided, emphatically and definitely, that she wanted to go to dramatic school, but Mr. and Mrs. Kies decided otherwise, hustling her off to the National Park Seminary in Washington, D. C.

Here again, during the two years she spent at this exclusive girl's finishing school, Margaret shone in dramatics. But she captured other high awards as well, graduating an honor student in addition to holding the titles of mistress of ceremonies, senior class executive, president of the dramatic club and captain of athletics.

She had always been an enthusiastic athlete, and still is, for that matter. At National Park she excelled at tennis, horsemanship and swimming.

• • •

THE death of her father while she was a student at National Park was a severe blow to Margaret. There had always been an intense affection between the two and Margaret's journey back to Dubuque to attend her father's funeral made a lasting impression on her. In discussing her life, she still brushes hastily over the details of that sorrowful journey.

Commencement exercises of Margaret's class were attended by Mrs. Kies and two other daughters and immediately thereafter Margaret, bidding her friends a hasty goodbye, returned to Dubuque for a brief vacation.

The desire to attend dramatic school still was uppermost in her mind, but she did not broach the subject until several days after she, her mother and two sisters had joined the rest of the family in Iowa. Then she reopened the matter and Mrs. Kies consented.

Mother and daughter considered the various dramatic schools of the nation and finally decided on the American Academy of Dramatic Art —possibly better known as Sargents—in New York.

Once more Margaret packed up her things and departed, but this time it was the great elation. She was bound for dramatic school; her one great desire was well by way of being consummated.

She graduated from Sargents with all available honors, one of the school's outstanding graduates.

Margaret had closely watched her fellow students of the academy. And she had followed their progress after graduation. She noted that a vast majority of them tramped the streets for days, weeks and months before they succeeded in finding work and that when they did it generally was comparatively unimportant. Other graduates, she discovered, went into a small stock companies, touring the tank towns of the nation.

Margaret read the theatrical periodicals religiously. And naturally she watched the theaters. Suddenly she made a startling discovery. English actors were pouring across the Atlantic literally in droves. And Hollywood was grabbing off the cream of the talent, rushing English names into motion pictures.

The nation—the theatrically-minded portion, at least—apparently had become completely British conscious.

Margaret returned post-haste to Dubuque, where she again went into consultation with her mother. She described her plan to Mrs. Kies and the two, mother and daughter, considered it from every conceivable angle.

"I'm positive I can do it," Margaret declared.

"I wish you all the luck in the world," Mrs. Kies told her. "I'll do everything I possibly can to help you."

• • •

TWO days later she boarded a train for New York and another fortnight found her in London.

Thus began her Great Deception.

On her trip across the Atlantic, Margaret had done considerable thinking. One of the first things she decided to do upon her arrival in London was to change her name. She consulted the directories, found that Lindsays are as common to the British Isles as grease paint is to Hollywood. And so it was that Margaret Kies, of Dubuque, Ia., ceased to exist. In her stead was born Margaret Lindsay of London and points north.

The girl from America's corn belt spent six months in England, six months of intensive self-instruction. She toured England and Scotland constantly, made friends throughout the kingdom. Rapidly she acquired a British accent. And just as rapidly she assimilated British customs.

Miss Lindsay did not seek work in the British theater. But she did make herself thoroughly familiar with the English stage. She made mental notes of roles she felt she could have played.

To make a long, involved story short, Margaret Lindsay returned to America six months after her departure an Englishwoman in appearance and character. She informed inquiring ship news reporters she was "Margaret Lindsay, the English actress," and gave them, in response to their questions, the titles of plays in which she had appeared and the roles she had portrayed. She also informed them she was staying at a prominent New York hotel, and that her visit was simply in the nature of a vacation.

Next day her telephone rang. A New York producer was calling. He wanted to see her.

Chuckling up her sleeve, Miss Lindsay called on him. After much urging, she agreed to remain in America for a while and take a part in his forthcoming production.

But the show was delayed for various reasons and Miss Lindsay, in the meantime, was visited by a Hollywood film producer, who prevailed upon her to visit the motion picture capital.

MARGARET LINDSAY

Hollywood welcomed Miss Lindsay with open arms. She played several small roles for different studies. Then, one day, she learned Fox was seeking an all-British cast for its picture, "Cavalcade."

Nonchalantly she applied for a part, informing the casting office she was "Margaret Lindsay, the British actress."

The rest is film history. Miss Lindsay got the role of "Edith," the bride on the S. S. Titanic. When the picture was released several studios immeditely began bidding for her services. She chose Warner Brothers-First National and has remained there ever since.

Meanwhile, although her family had been pledged to secrecy, rumors began circulating in Dubuque that Margaret Lindsay, the sensation of "Cavalcade," actually was none other than Margaret Kies.

One day a telegram came to Miss Lindsay from a Dubuque newspaper asking her whether the rumors had any foundation.

The actress decided the moment had arrived to end the deception. She "came clean." Hollywood laughed and complimented Miss Lindsay upon her ability to successfully carry out a hoax the like of which had never been attempted before.

Since joining the list of Warner players, Miss Lindsay has been featured in a score of pictures, including "Private Detective," "Voltaire," "Lady Killer," "Bordertown," "Devil Dogs of the Air," "Fog Over Frisco," "Merry Wives of Reno," "Gentlemen Are Born" and "The Florentine Dagger."

She is currently featured opposite James Cagney in "The G-Men," a story based on the exploits of the agents of the United States Department of Justice.

But her best role, she insists, was not played before a camera.

Questions That Are Asked by Younger Folks

Procedure When Girl Wishes To Pay for Ticket—Leaving Cards.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:

MUST a young woman always pay for tickets beforehand when she asks a man to go with her? I mean that at a club to which I belong tickets are bought only at the door immediately before a dance or a benefit play. It is always very embarrassing because invitations must be given by members —who are all women—and then the men we invite refuse to let us pay out money at the door. I have tried to pay in advance for the tickets so there will be no charge, but this makes bookkeeping necessary and the treasurer insists that we continue to pay at the door. Can you suggest any way out of this situation?

Emily Post

Answer: Why couldn't you enclose the exact amount of money to pay for them in a small envelope and ask the man with you to hand it in at the door. Or better, if he is likely to see that there is money in the envelope, can't you say to him, "I have the tickets here," and hand the envelope to the cashier—and cut off his view?

Dear Mrs. Post: I have been invited to a tea party being given by a club in the house of one of its members. How many cards shall I be expected to leave?

Answer: You do not leave cards at a semi-public tea.

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a young girl whose mother is criticising me for saying "Hello" to the mothers of my dearest friends. Is this wrong? Certainly it seems stiff to say "How do you do" to people I know so well.

Answer: "Hello" is used so generally today that it cannot be considered improper. Of course its propriety (or vulgarity) depends upon the tone in which it is said.

Dear Mrs. Post I want to give a "brunch" party and am not sure what sort of menu I ought to ask mother to choose, and also for what time to ask the girls?

Answer: As I told another reader of this column some time ago, I had never until then heard of such a party. I suppose the name, which I think rather unpleasant, is a combination of the words breakfast and lunch, and that you would probably serve a breakfast menu. I can't give any more definite directions because I don't know anything about brunches.

THE GAME OF LIFE

A Serial Romance

By PRISCILLA WAYNE

Ellen's Mother Continues To Be Antagonistic Toward Mike But The Young Couple Find Life Pleasant Anyway.

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

MICHAEL insisted that Ellen buy a pretty new dress. "Get a classy one, honey, do. Get more than one. All these people having parties for us makes me want to see my wife look like a million dollars."

Ellen laughed aloud just out of sheer joy in being young and in love and married to the nicest man in the world. "You want to buy something for me. Well, darling, you're going to have your way. Wait until I step out to the Langhan's party for us."

And that made big, good looking Mike grin all over. "Ben's always bragging about his wife and how well she looks in her clothes. I've got a real kick coming when I see you step out."

"But don't worry," Ellen said with real wifely concern, "I'll not break up the partnership with my extravagance, but I will buy a pretty dress if you're sure you can afford it."

Mike said: "We're going to afford some things, little sweetheart, see if we don't. I'm not going to be married to the prettiest girl in the State and not see that she has nice things."

Yes, in the shelter of her own little home, alone in the cheerful rooms she loved so well, Ellen was always happy. And radiantly happy when she was alone with Mike. But in the times she visited her old home, and sometimes she was ashamed at the infrequency of her visits, everything was gloomy.

Rose Mallory did not encourage the visits of her son-in-law. Sometimes, when Ellen ran over for a little afternoon visit Michael would drive past for her on his way home.

But his mother-in-law never invited him in, never attempted in any way to encourage a kindlier feeling between them.

One late afternoon, waiting for Michael to drive past, Ellen tried to remonstrate with her mother a little about her cooiness toward her husband.

"Why don't you come on over home with me, mamma?" she coaxed. "I've got the cutest little roast in the electric cooker with vegetables and everything just ready to pop on the table.

"And what do you think, mamma, I tried my hand at making cherry pie this morning. Mike's mother says he's fonder of cherry pie than any person she ever knew. So I just got her recipe and tried it out. And there are a couple of lollypop pies waiting.

"Come on, now, that's a dear, let me take you home with me. Why, it's almost a crime. Here I've been married nearly two months and you haven't even been inside our new home."

* * *

PERHAPS it might have been better if Aunt Ellen had not broken into the conversation. "Poor dear soul," Ellen thought, "she wants to help me so much that she doesn't realize that she is doing the wrong thing entirely."

For Aunt Ellen had cut in quickly. "Yes, Rose, do go. I'll get dinner here. Bob'll be perfectly all right. And, anyway, you ought to go. All the rest of the family has been over, several times.

"And the neighbors will be talking first thing we know. Why, I met Mrs. Benson on the street the other day. She said, 'How does your sister-in-law like Ellen's new husband?' I knew that very minute there'd been plenty of talk going on about it."

And good old Aunt Ellen stopped, not for sheer lack of breath but because she had caught a look in her sister-in-law's eyes that she always dreaded.

"That will be enough," Rose Mallory said bitterly. "I don't doubt that the neighbors are talking. But let them talk. Ellen married on her own account. She did not have my permission and she'll never have my approval.

"I'll never set foot inside her house, and as for Michael Dale, I never want to speak to him again as long as I live."

And nothing Ellen could say or do would alter the set determination of her mother.

"I'm sorry, Ellen," Rose Mallory said testily. "But I fairly begged you not to go and get married. You had everything ahead of you—you gave it all up. What for?"

"For the man I loved," Ellen said, miserably. "And I'd do it again."

"Perhaps you would, Ellen," pointedly. "You're living your own life. It didn't matter to you that I'd sacrificed everything, worked my fingers to the bone"——

Aunt Ellen couldn't stand that. "Don't get feeling so sorry for yourself, Rose. I haven't seen any great sacrifices going on around here. Sure enough you've kept house and cooked and washed clothes, so have 50,000,000 other mothers—to raise their children.

"And a lot of 'em, right here in our neighborhood have had it a mighty sight harder, let me tell you. If my brother hadn't been far-sighted and left you with an income"——

"Fifteen dollars a week—I couldn't call that an income"——

"Well, a lot of mothers have raised families on less than that, I'll tell you, and raised them well."

I'll say they raised them well!" Ellen always disliked hearing her mother speak in that mood. Cutting things were certain to be said, words better left unsaid.

"I'll say none of them raised them any better than I raised mine. Here's Ellen, graduated from high school. She went as well dressed as any of the girls—and then graduating from business college."

Aunt Ellen did not add, although she might well have added, that the reason Ellen went as well dressed as the other girls was because of Aunt Ellen's sitting up late at her sewing table, studying to make modish clothes and get exactly the right chic lines out of this remnant and that remnant artistically combined together.

With a magnificent gesture Rose Mallory flung such ideas away even in the thinking. "And then what does she do? Runs off and gets married to a man that hasn't any more respect for me, any more regard for the sacrifices I've made than-than anything"——

Again Ellen tried to explain to her mother. "But Michael—Mama, how can you be so bitter toward Michael? Why won't you let him explain? Come over to my house tonight and talk with us. Just see for yourself. Michael is so reasonable and so kind"——

"Yes, he must be reasonable and kind," bitterly, "insisting that I take bankruptcy. Take Bankruptcy! When everybody knows that's a disgrace, just a deadbeat's way of getting out of an obligation."

"Mama, he never insisted. He just suggested."

"Well, suggested, then. That isn't any better. As though I'd repudiate obligations that I'd made honestly. That would be dishonorable. And yet my son-in-law wants me to be dishonorable. Well, I'd die first."

It helped, of course, that Mike's automobile horn sounded just outside. At least the summons enabled Ellen to get away from the interminable argument.

But the memory of it did not make for a joyful, peace filled evening.

* * *

THERE was a letter waiting for them from Clarence and Lou, driving up to spend the weekend. Would they be welcome at the new home of the Michael Dales?

Michael laughed and pointed to the date line. "Gee whizz, Ellen, that means they're coming tonight. Why, look, they'll be driving in most any minute."

It seemed almost too good to be true, to be welcoming their friends in their own home. Mike tied on a big apron and opened the sideboard where Ellen kept her hope chest linen.

"Well, Mrs. Dale, I suppose we'll put on a little swank?"

"All the swank we've got. That means the Russian hand drawn cloth and the napkins to match."

"Hot diggity. How am I to tell a Russian hand drawn cloth from a mere any kind? Is it built on the five year plan?"

But Ellen wasn't giving any attention to hand drawn linen cloths. "Thank goodness, I got a roast big enough for four, and a kind providence certainly watched over me when I constructed two cherry pies."

"Constructed is right," Mike said, admiring the pies. "Why, these pies are perfect, Ellen, so perfect that they look as though you'd made them to a blueprint and scale and everything."

Clarence and Lou came driving in then tooting the horn of their second-hand car and laughing with joy to see their friends.

It was a merry meal. The roast was perfectly browned, the vegetables appetizingly cooked. Everything was just right.

"Do you know, Honey," Mike said, "this is the first meal we've had in our own home entertaining married folks of our own age. Why, this is just wonderful. I get a greater kick out of it than I do out of entertaining the gang. Why, they're just like kids—but when one gets to be an old married man—well—it's different—"

Clarence nodded gravely. "I know. Married folks have more worthwhile things to think about. That's what I tell Lou. We go with an unmarried gang down home. All they talk about is dances and 'have you seen the new show?' "

Lou interrupted. Ellen wondered if she just imagined that Lou's voice sounded a touch caustic. "And all we talk about is whether we'll put the south field in alfalfa again this year and what the price of corn may be and how many bushels to the acre."

Clarence pinched her plump cheek carefully. "Right you are, darlin'. It means a lot to this family firm how much corn will sell for at this time next year. More, I guess, than ever."

Ellen knew what Clarence meant a little later when she and Lou washed the dishes in the tiny kitchen.

The boys were out on the lawn, looking over the outside of the house and Mike was pointing out to Clarence how well the little house was built. "But why shouldn't it be? I watched every brick and board go into place."

"You don't seem very chipper to me," Ellen said, never dreaming. "Aren't you feeling well?"

"No, I'm not," Lou had answered abruptly. "Ellen, I might as well tell you right now. You'll know it soon enough—I'm going to have a baby."

"And—aren't you—glad?" But Ellen knew, as she framed the words, that Lou wasn't glad.

"No, I'm not. I've cried my eyes out—but there isn't anything I can do."

BEGIN HERE TODAY:

ELLEN DALE feels that her mother's opposition to her husband, MICHAEL, is purely selfish: MRS. MALLORY didn't want Ellen to give up a promising tennis career and didn't want to lose the paycheck Ellen brought home regularly from the office where she worked. Before Ellen married Mike, Mrs. Mallory produced an array of bills amounting to $2700 which she was unable to pay. Stunned, Ellen went to the bank and signed a $500 note, on which she promised to pay $20 a month.

Impatient to be married, Mike wouldn't listen to Ellen's new responsibility, and whisked her off to Bethany, Mo. When the newlyweds return to their own little home in Fairhaven, Ellen quits her job, refusing to listen to her mother's suggestion of an annulment.

Finally Ellen tells Mike the story of the Mallory debts, but he stubbornly refuses to let Ellen go back to work in the real estate office. "We'll manage somehow," he tells Ellen, and she has to be content with that.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

How Hot Bath For Feet Helps Relieve Fatigue

By Edna K. Forbes

WHEN you are so tired you are utterly miserable and your face shows it, a most excellent way to look young and attractive again is by means of a hot stimulating footbath. This is more than just soaking your feet in a tub of hot water, although that in itself will do much to smooth away the lines and wrinkles which fatigue brings out on the face. Let us see what some of these foot treatments consist of.

First of all let me suggest that you buy yourself a foot tub. I think the old-fashioned kind made of paper mache, rather thick, because this retains the heat of the water, is better than metal. Also, if you own one of these you can sit in the bathtub and fill the tub partly full of hot water, which will keep the contents of the foot tub hot for as long a time as you wish.

One of the best foot baths to use is sea salt and hot water. A large handful makes a very strong solution, and even a small handful is effective. In fact, if you haven't got sea salt, you can use a couple of tablespoons full of ordinary cooking salt, although this of course is more expensive.

I would also suggest that you give your feet an occasional soaking in hot mustard water, the exact treatment you use for a cold in the head. A teaspoonful is sufficient for one bath. It is very relaxing, and will not only relieve nervous fatigue, but probably cure a headache if you have one—and who hasn't at times like these?

After your feet have soaked 10 or 15 minutes, the cuticle around the nails will be so softened that it is an ideal time for a pedicure Not a real one, for that takes too much time, but just a little going over of the nails, scraping away loose cuticle, cleaning under the nails, using your safety corn knife on calloused skin around the toes. End by rubbing your feet with hand lotion and you'll feel and look many years younger.

A Need for It Somewhere.

When you find an article of clothing this housecleaning that you think you will save until some future time before deciding to get rid off it, get rid of it now. Nine times out of ten you do not use it and there are so many places where it can be used that it is almost selfish to save it just to "look it over again some day."

Puddle Muddle Makes Plans for A Robin Wedding

By Mary Graham Bonner

MISS ROBIN was standing right outside Top Notch's general store.

"Tweet, tweet," called Mr. Robin, "come inside, my dear, and this fine rooster will help us in choosing the best material for our new home."

"I wish to congratulate you, sir," said Top Notch to Mr. Robin, when he had seen the bride-to-be.

"Twill, twill," chirped Mr. Robin, "I am indeed to be congratulated. When I handed this dear little robin a fat and juicy worm this morning as an engagement gift I said to her, "'I am a lucky robin.'"

"I'm also lucky, twill, twill," chirped Miss Robin. Her voice was not quite so lovely as that of Mr. Robin, nor was she dressed so brightly, but she was indeed very sweet and charming.

"Then you're both pleased," said Top Notch. "Well, that's excellent, excellent. Now to get on with our shopping." For Top Notch was a good business rooster.

They finished their shopping and then Top Notch said:

"When is the wedding to take place?"

"At sundown today," chirped Mr. Robin. "A number of birds are having their weddings today. We thought we'd have a concert, too."

"Won't you come to it?" asked Miss Robin.

"I'd be delighted to come," said Top Notch, who really didn't care a great deal about music, but thought it would be fun to see all the birds who had come to the neighborhood.

He told all the other Puddle Muddlers his news, and they all listened to the concert, but Mrs. Duck had quickly managed to have a surprise.

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND

By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.

See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1. —Pretty hard to set up a general rule to meet all cases. Dr. Louis Bisch, consulting psychologist of New York, argues she should frankly drop them or else escape them all she can. I might add, however, that pretending to like people can be carried on more successfully and longer than perhaps any other human enterprise. How else could politicians succeed or international diplomacy be carried on? So, if there is no escape, and dropping them will cause more friction, you might try a bit of pretending, provided it does not extend to downright hypocrisy.

2. —Dr. Frederick Tilney, distinguished brain anatomist, maintains in his magnificent book, "Master of Destiny," that we use only about one-third of the brains we have. We observe hardly one-tenth of what we might observe, pay so little attention to what we experience, or hear, or see, that we remember scarcely any of it and make very little effort to do any original thinking. It seems evident that here nature gives us a bigger brain we should roll up our mental sleeves and use the vast powers this eminent authority shows we already possess.

3. —This is the contention of Dean William F. Russell of Teachers' College, Columbia. He suggests that such a school could be modeled on the plan of the Ecole Normal Superieure of Paris, a school for highly selected students with qualities of prospective leadership. He suggests a new building should be provided by Columbia for this purpose, called the School for Advanced Education, although he maintains the present faculty is competent to act as instructors for this "educational elite." Seems to me the success of democracy depends wholly upon our success in discovering and training leaders.

Bridal Gown

By Frances Marsh

ANASTASIA snapped the last fastening on the bit of lace, satin and ribbon which she had just slipped over her head. Standing before the long mirror she turned slowly, taking in each detail of the image she saw. From the tips of the shining creamy satin pumps, with their flashing buckles, to the crown of her smoothly waved hair, she was lovely. Pale. Faintly golden. Shining.

With her hand on the door knob Anastasia stopped. When she entered that room the old Ann would remain here. The Ann, who for two long years had modeled sports suits, tailored dresses, afternoon frocks. The Ann who had been a frightened little "package girl."

The Ann who later became a graceful, competent model. There was a neatness about her, a finished look, that added much to the attractiveness of the gowns she wore. She had walked miles before the critical eyes of potential buyers. She had stood quietly or turned and turned before them. And always she had dreamed.

In the other room her most cherished dream would be a reality. The thought left her breathless. Quickly she stepped through the door, and was engulfed by the waves of noise. Too many people. Too much confusion. It made her head ache.

A woman in a frock came toward her. She was followed by a maid, arms full of shimmering, creamy satin. Ann caught her breath. A bride's dress! And it was for her!

"Everything is ready, dear. The dress is perfect."

The dress was lifted from the maid's arms.

"Your head through here, that's right. Careful of your wave. There!"

A few deft pulls. A practiced hand smoothing the satin over Ann's slim hips. A final pat.

The bride!

Fold after lustrous fold of the beautiful satin clung caressingly to the girl's slim body, fell in long graceful lines to form a train. The cobweb of lace on Ann's breast rose, fluttered, fell to rise again with her quick breathing.

To Anastasia, standing very still in her satin gown, the waves of renewed conversation were only so much sound, scarcely touching her consciousness.

"——singly gorgeous! Just the right color for her, with that lovely skin. No one could help loving——"

"All ready for the veil. Here, Ann."

Gentle hands fitted the cap of pearls over her head and arranged the priceless train of lace. The tiny face veil fell before her eyes, misting people, furniture, colors.

"Your flowers, and, oh, my dear, you are lovely!"

Ann smiled faintly, accepted the fragrant mass of blossoms. Some one led her to a long mirror, and she saw the vision reflected there.

Always and always she had dreamed of such a moment. Ivory satin, priceless veil, a cap of pearls, orchids. Lovely bridesmaids. On the other side of that door, down a few steps, were candles, more flowers, soft music. In a moment she would move slowly down the steps and along a ribbon-marked aisle. It couldn't be true; but it was.

"Ready, girls? Ready, Ann?"

"There's the music, here we go."

• • •

SOME ONE opened the door. The throbbing promises of "Faithful and True" rolled over Ann, engulfed her. The procession slowly left the room.

Anastasia's hand rested on the arm of a tall gentleman, who whispered to her as he felt her tremble. She smiled up at him shyly, pressed his arm with her fingertips.

Slowly, slowly they moved. Vaguely Ann sensed the people, the music, the heavy smell of the flowers. She heard the sonorous tones of a man's voice, but the words were lost. Did she respond, or was that voice another's?

The music swelled, deafening her. People, crowds of people, rushed to her, held her hand, exclaimed over her beauty. They might spoil the creamy satin with their reaching hands, tear the precious veil. She wanted to get away. Wanted to be back in that other room with all this beauty. She must take off this lovely, lovely wedding dress, change into a suit. She didn't want to do that. But she must.

She was walking back now, the way she had come. The hum of voices, the cadences of the music grew fainter. A door shut. It was all over.

"Ah, my little Ann! You were so beautiful! Such a far-away look on your face, as though you dreamed."

A fat little man planted a wet kiss on Ann's burning cheek, smothered her a moment in his arms.

"You are the best model I ever had. 'Maison Jacques, Wedding Gowns' has had a gala opening. We will be a success!"

Anastasia Kelly, who had worn a creamy satin wedding gown as though it were her own, removed the cap of pearls from her hair and smiled sadly. Jacques knew nothing of dreams that come true.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE POISONOUS DELICACY—The gigantic root of the Manioc Plant is permeated with a milky acrid juice which is deadly poisonous, containing a strong hydrocyanic acid. Fortunately the poison is volatile and can be dissipated by heat. The Brazilians squeeze the sap out of the plant and by boiling convert it into an excellent sauce called "casareep." The root is dried, then grated on hot metal plates and pulverized into flour, with which the characteristic Brazilian cakes are baked. The Tapioca of commerce is also made from the root of the manioc in this fashion.

FOUR HONORABLE ARMY DISCHARGES—LeRoy Baughan's army service is unique in that he received four honorable discharges with remarks of excellent character during the World War. On March 15, 1915, Baughan enlisted, and his first discharge was from the Federalized National Guard in July, 1917, when he was transferred to Fort Snelling, Minn. Completion of his service at Fort Snelling in August, 1917, caused him to be discharged again, and he immediately re-enlisted in the Aviation Ground School at Austin, Tex. His December, 1917, discharge from the Ground School was due to injuries in an accident. He recuperated in seven months and re-enlisted for service overseas, until his final discharge in September, 1919.

ILLINOIS RELIEF FUNDS USED TO TEACH ALIENS

$7500 Allotted Monthly for 125 College Graduate Instructors in County Seats.

How the State of Illinois is using relief funds in an effort to help its 351,000 alien residents to become American citizens was told to a Post-Dispatch reporter today by Avinere Toigo, executive secretary of Gov. Horner's Committee on Citizenship and Naturalization.

During the first two weeks of this month, 125 unemployed college graduates were trained at the University of Chicago to become teachers of aliens. A total of $7500 a month from work relief funds has been allotted for their pay until June 1. Schools in various county seats are being used for night classes.

Through solicitation of aliens, 10,000 have enrolled for the course in Cook County alone, and in Southern Illinois, about 3000. There are 12,198 aliens listed in St. Clair, Madison, Macoupin, Franklin and Williamson Counties, although the great majority of unnaturalized citizens, 294,947, live in Cook County.

The prime purpose of the course is to enable the applicants to pass naturalization examinations, and they are taught English, fundamentals of government, and simple American geography and history. Toigo said that since it has been inaugurated, it has doubled the number of applications for naturalization.

PARENTS OF TRIPLETS TO GET $12 MORE RELIEF PER MONTH

Grocery Order to Be Increased $5 and $7 Will Be Allowed for Special Diet.

The $31.20 monthly grocery allowance of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland O. Piper, 820 North Twenty-first street, East St. Louis, who became parents of triplets on March 18, will be increased $5 and the mother will be allowed $7.25 a month for a special diet, officers of the St. Clair County Emergency Relief Commission said yesterday.

In accordance with relief rules, the grocery allowance will be increased $10 more after several months. The parents, who have six other children, have received $50 in anonymous cash donations, layettes for the triplets from a department store, and four baskets of groceries.

Told of the increase, Piper, who has not worked regularly since 1927, said: "When the triplets first came, I worried about how I could take care of them, but I've stopped worrying. I'm finding out how kind people can be."

LOWER COUNTY WATER RATES IN UNINCORPORATED SECTIONS

Company Estimates 80-Cent Average Saving a Year for Each of 25,000 Consumers.

A new schedule of water rates for the unincorporated sections of St. Louis County which will save 25,000 consumers an average of 80 cents a year was announced yesterday by C. E. Jutz, president of the St. Louis County Water Co.

The rate of $3 every three months for the first 900 cubic feet consumed will remain the same, but the rate of 26 cents a hundred for the next 12,100 cubic feet will be reduced to 23 cents.

The revision was filed Wednesday with the State Public Service Commission after a complaint against the rates by the St. John's Community Business Men's Association. The association agreed to withdraw its complaint.

MRS. GLEASON LOSES SUIT TO COLLECT FIRE INSURANCE

Company Contended Blaze in Delmar Boulevard Apartment Was Incendiary.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, Mo., March 29.—Mrs. Naomi C. Rogers Gleason, widow of Fire Captain William Gleason, lost a suit in Circuit Court here to collect $2500 from the Equity Fire Insurance Co. for damage to furniture and clothing in a blaze at her Delmar boulevard apartment in July, 1932.

The verdict, returned by a jury Wednesday after 40 minutes of deliberation, was unanimous in favor of the insurance company, which contended that the fire was of incendiary origin and resulted from a prearranged plan.

VALIDITY OF LONG-OVERTON ELECTION BEFORE SENATE

Petition Signed in Nine States for Resumption of Hearings Sent to Committee.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Petitions signed by residents of nine states, asking the Senate to investigate charges that Senators Huey P. Long and John H. Overton of Louisiana should be ousted, were filed with the Senate yesterday and referred to the Senate Elections Committee.

They asked the Senate to resume the investigation of charges filed last year by the Women's Committee of Louisiana, alleging Overton was elected fraudulently with the support of Long.
